PITTSBURG.

Business has settled down to its normal state again. The general demand for last week's business was in funeral work. Flowers are good in quality. The supply of Maids and Brides is limited. Carnations are plentiful and help to fill out the scarcity of roses. A surplus of the poorer grades of carnations was very noticeable last week. The better grades sold at reasonable prices.

Paper white narcissus are still a glut. Roman hyacinths and Easter lilies are rather scarce. Tulips are not in demand. Mignonette, valley, violets and sweet peas are arriving in good supply, and sell readily.

Last week we experienced some very severe weather, the thermometer registering as low as zero on Friday, Jan. 9. It remained very cold over Saturday and on Sunday it rained all day. Monday, January 12, zero was again staring us in the face. Such sudden changes are common in this section.

While the cry for coal sounds over the country our coal companies have millions of bushels just lying around in the way. A local paper published a cartoon showing immense piles of coal, with signs such as "Coal we can't get hauled away," "Coal we don't need," hung on each pile. Notwithstanding all this, it is difficult for us to secure a sufficient supply, on account of the shortage of railroad cars.

Fred Burki contemplates the erection of an additional range of houses for carnations, at his Bakerstown place.

At the last meeting of the Florists' club, the old officers were all re-elected. Pittsburg expects to be well represented at the Carnation Convention which convenes at Brooklyn, N. Y., February 19-20, 1903. The following ones expect to attend: Fred Burki, Geo. Blind, Edward Blind, B. L. Elliott, T. P. Langhans and J. L. Wyland.

Among the visitors this week were: G. L. Huscroft, of Steubenville, Ohio; Arthur Langhans and Miller Carenbauer, of Wheeling, W. Va.; Thos. J. Wade, representing Aug. Rhotert, New York.

Hoo-Hoo.

ORANGE, N. J.

The annual installation of new officers for the current year of the N. J. Floricultural Society took place at its rooms in Orange. George Smith, president; William Bennett, vice president; Joseph A. Manda, secretary; Malcolm MacRorie, treasurer, all made short felicitous addresses, which contributed much to a pleasant evening.

A vote of thanks was heartily given to the retiring president, John Hayes, upon motion of George Smith. Mr. Hayes' administration has been marked by a conservative and harmonious policy, which has contributed much to the success of the society and its good name before the world. A balance of $280 was reported by the treasurer and the reports of secretary and librarian showed cause for congratulations for a prosperous year past and an encouraging prospective one.

J. B. D.

Bellefontaine, O.—Poole & Purllant report Christmas trade as up to expectations, with the price of roses "sky high," yet all stock was cleaned up. Plants did not sell very well on account of the zero weather.

Petals slightly serrated and beautifully arranged, forming a full rounded center. Odor—Is very sweet and particularly pleasing. Stem—19 inches to 2½ feet during the season, and always strong enough to carry the large flower erect. Habit—Strong and vigorous, thrives well and grows rapidly. Transplants readily, comes into bloom early, and is not a cropper. It will stand closer planting than most varieties. Productiveness—Extremely free flowering. More productive than any other large white. A profitable and high grade commercial variety.

DENVER, COLO.

Christmas trade was far ahead of previous years and the demand was for choice stock without regard to price. In roses, Beauties sold from $4 to $20 per dozen; Liberty, $6 to $7; Bride and Bridesmaid, $3 to $5; carnations, $1 to $2. As all the florists laid in large supplies and there was nothing left over, they are consequently happy and several embryo millionaires are to be seen around town, in addition to those that were here.

Emil Glauber's stock of roses was especially fine, and the carnations from Benson took the cake, no one else coming near to him.

At the Park Floral everything is in fine shape under the supervision of the new foreman, John Skedd. The finest cyclamens in the city, one plant being sold for $8, and, by the way, that reminds me of a bet that John Berry, that veteran florist, made that a certain cyclamen plant would not have 100 perfect flowers out at one time. John won out on the perfect flower proposition, as it had the 100 flowers and more, all right, but he claimed enough were not quite perfect to win. John is canny if not a Scotchman.

J. A. Valentine is improving, though he does not get out very much yet.

The Park Foral Co.'s store windows were, as usual under Phil Scott, the attraction of the street. One was in Christmas red, a large wreath of poinsettias and red flowers and the other in pink with azaleas, etc. The firm did an immense business. THORNE.

WICHITA, KAN.—W. H. Culp & Co., report Christmas trade as slightly larger than last year. Roses were mostly shipped in stock and were not of quite so good quality as last year. Flowering plants sold well, decorative plants going slowly. Bulbous stock was in fair demand only, the supply being equal to the demand. Holly sold well. Mistletoe was fine and retailed at 20 cents a pound. Taken altogether it was a fairly satisfactory holiday season.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—The greenhouses of Charles Unglaub were damaged by fire to the extent of $800 on Jan. 4. The damage to contents will bring the total loss up to $2,500, with no insurance. He will not attempt to rebuild until spring.

CHESTER, PA.—Jordan Cavener, the well-known landscape gardener and florist, has made the hearts of his employes glad, and their feet warm, by presenting each with a shining $5 gold piece and an order for a pair of shoes.

MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.

Spiraea for Easter Forcing.....

We offer a few cases each of the following sorts, as below, as long as unsold. These can be shipped safely by freight, as it will not injure them in the least if frozen. There is plenty of time to get them in for Easter, if wanted, and they also make good stock for Decoration Day. Now is the time to lay in a stock, before they are all sold.

JAPONICA AND COMPACTA MULTIFLORA—Case of 250 clumps for $8.00; in less quantities, $4.00 per 100.

ASTILBOIDES FLORIBUNDA—Case of 250 clumps for $10.00; in less quantities, $5.00 per 100.

The Surplus Bulb Stock recently offered has sold fast, but we can still supply the following in first-class shape as long as unsold at prices named below:

SMALL SIZED NAMED HYACINTHS—These are splendid for Easter forcing, and are fine for growing in pans or pots. Nothing is more readily sold. Price is very low, and the bulbs are first-class—remarkably good for the low price at which they are offered. They will throw almost as good flowers as the larger and higher priced bulbs. If you have never flowered these, try a thousand or two. You will be pleased with the results; they cannot fail to make money for you. The following pink varieties at only $1.50 per 100; $12.00 per 1000, (worth $16.00 per 1000), viz.: Baron van Tuyll, Gen. Pelissier, Gertrude, Gigantea, Robt. Steiger and Solfatara.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE BRIDE'S BOUQUET.

When the florist makes a bride's bouquet, his first thought is to make a bouquet which is above the commonplace. He realizes that the best is expected of him, and the bouquet which is to attract notice at the wedding ceremony will in a measure be a standard by which his capabilities will be judged. He enters into the spirit of artistic rivalry which is found in the preparing of every bridal party, and therefore the bouquet which he sends to the bride is just as beautiful in its way as the gown that she wears and to which she and her friends have given much thought in its making. At weddings people expect to see the latest fancies in fashions, or simple elegance carried out with much care and forethought, and everyone interested in these preparations enlists his or her best endeavors to make the event a success. Let the florist take advantage of this opportunity to show his skill and good taste. His work will be impartially judged, for his name on the box in which the bouquet was sent will not be seen nor will the style in which the bouquet was delivered assist to form favorable prejudices, and the bouquet must stand on its merits alone. Let it be, therefore, a good one.

This may lead you to think, what is a good bride's bouquet, how does it look, what size is it, what flowers should be used, and what about the use of ribbons, etc.? And my answer is, it may be one of many bouquets. It may be the next that you make provided that you have filled most of the requirements of your special case in hand. If you have had the pleasure of seeing the bride to be, you will have had your first inspiration. She is rather tall, a brunette, and dignified in her bearing, and in less time than it takes to write it, you have chosen for her, if your opinion has been asked, a bouquet of white orchids or roses just breaking from the bud, carefully arranged and formally, too, with ribbon as a simple embellishment. From her bearing you already know that her gown will be beautiful in its simplicity of design, and that her personal attractiveness would only be lessened by flounces and a shower bouquet.

Again the bouquet is to be for a bride of a lighter temperament, and each little gesture of charming grace adds to her beauty, and you think of a graceful bouquet of forced white lilac or a bouquet of lily of the valley with a shower of ribbon and flowers, prettily arranged. Nor must the bouquet be too large (your recompense is not determined by the size of the bouquet), for the little bride must not be made to appear too small by the carrying of too large a bouquet. Now is the time that the graceful touches may be added, for they will have a pretty setting.

From the above, the point that I wish to make is this: Make up your mind what the character of the bouquet is to be, and then make the bouquet with your intention constantly in mind. Don't try to remember how you made that bouquet for this or that person, for the chances are that you will try to introduce an idea which will not suit this case at all. The fact that your competitor is making bouquets in another way is no reason that you should try to adopt his methods, for the chances are that your ideas are just as good or better than his. Learn to have your own ideas first; have confidence in them and try to carry them out the best that you can before you try to imitate what someone else is doing. A draughtsman who is constantly adapting his technique so as to comply with the style of this or that artist is not progressing much himself nor has he the pleasure of doing something original. He is not growing in real artistic feeling.

It takes but few glances to tell if a bride's bouquet is a success or not, and it does not take a connoisseur to tell whether an artist has successfully transmitted some particular emotion to his canvas. We can quickly tell when mind and hand have worked together.

Of course in the making of the bride's bouquet sentiment is second to handicraft. The tying of the flowers so that they will fall into the right position necessitates the cleaning of part of the stems, and the lengthening and shortening of them as required. When roses are used all thorns are removed and when, for example, lily of the valley is used, all the leaves should be separated so that they may be lowered a little below the level of the flower spikes. This is done so that the finished bouquet will look like a mass of white flowers and not like a bouquet of white and green. The handles of bouquets are made as small and as short as possible that they may be conveniently held, and when holding them the stem will be entirely unseen. The use of green in bouquets should receive careful attention. Generally speaking, the less used the better.

In figure 1 a very pretty effect is obtained by the judicious use of Asparagus decumbens. This is so draped that it is thrown into pretty contrast by the ribbon. The adiantum ferns also have been sparingly used with the sweet peas, so that the bouquet has a snowy white appearance. The flowers are not unnecessarily smothered with green. As sweet peas have little foliage of their own, as we get them, the use of other foliage is necessary. When Swainsona is used much of the green has to be removed instead of being added. Roses have a beautiful foliage of their own and no other foliage should be used with the roses except that which is necessary in finishing the bouquet at the base.

Bride's Bouquet. Fig. 1.

In figure 2 we again have a draping of Asparagus decumbens, but it has been used a little too freely. It gives the bouquet an appearance of being too heavy and thereby makes it too noticeable a feature. The shape of the bouquet is very good, because it is well built up in the center and the massing of the flowers give the bouquet a finished look. A bouquet which is well built up in the center shows off its flowers to the best advantage.

In figure 3 is shown another sweet pea bouquet which is not radically different from the bouquet in figure 1. However, it brings to mind one point for comment, and that is the size of the ribbon used. For sweet peas, it seems that the ribbon is too wide, and that if a narrower ribbon were used and possibly a few more loops of it, the effect would be more airy and graceful. Were the bouquet made of roses, the size would be right, for the character of the rose would necessitate a wider ribbon. However, there is a tendency to do away with wide, heavy ribbons and to use the narrower widths, say No. 30 and No. 40, for hand bouquets. The ribbon used is generally the Liberty satin, which has a satin finish on its two faces and which is much softer and more delicate than the old style cord edge ribbon. The Liberty satin ribbon is more expensive than the satin gros grain, but the beauty of the ribbon is also much more in evidence. When wide ribbons are used, there is a tendency to have the flowers overbalanced with the display of silk, and instead of adding to the attractiveness of a bouquet the effect is to detract from it, and the feeling comes over one that the ribbon has been added to bolster up a poorly made bouquet.

In figure 4 is shown a style of shower bouquet which may have many variations. Instead of having the flowers showered in few but in heavy clusters, as is shown in the illustration, more ribbons may be used and smaller clusters of the lily of the valley. These shower bouquets have become very popular, and now that most people have become acquainted with them the novelty has worn off and a reaction is taking place for the more formal shaped bouquets. This brings to mind the many discussions which have taken place and the many books which have been written as regards the relative merits of picturesque and formal landscape gardening. Both styles have their stanch adherents and both styles have their points of beauty, the choice of either being a matter of individual taste after it has been decided that either might be adaptable to the conditions at hand. Just so is it in the case in the arranging of bouquets. What to one seems a graceful way of arranging a bouquet is to another a shapeless mass, and the one who believes that the making of a bouquet in which one flower is carefully placed to the next is a creation that is quite "chic" may seem to another stiff and unattractive. Whatever your opinion is, adhere to it strictly and your customer will have confidence in your judgment.

Don't be too fanciful in making the bride's bouquet. Should you feel the need of variety, let it be seen in the bridesmaid's bouquet.

George W. Wienhoeber.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

This season there have been fewer complaints about the ravages of thrips in Beauty houses. This is possibly explained by the wet and inclement weather of last summer, as this insect is very partial to dryness and heat. They are usually more numerous after a hot, dry summer, and when there are two hot summers in succession they present themselves in the houses during the winter in countless numbers.

As a means of preventing their entrance into rose houses, great care should be taken to allow no weeds to grow and flower in the vicinity of the houses. These should be cut down and burned during a dry spell, and if the ground herbage can also be burned so much the better. All soil, mulching and manure piles should be kept strictly clear of weeds and turned over frequently during the summer, as it is there they thrive, multiply and deposit their eggs, which hatch out readily in the genial temperature of the rose house.

To exterminate or keep these from multiplying in the house, fumigating should be frequent from the time of planting until the buds appear, as this insect succumbs very easily to the fumes of tobacco. It is only after the buds appear when they can find shelter by hiding among the petals where the fumes cannot reach them that the real trouble begins. As the season advances when the rays of the sun are more powerful a frequent examination of the buds should be made, and on their first appearance an immediate war should be waged, as any delay means an immense increase of their numbers.

Fumigating lightly, frequently and persistently with tobacco will usually be sufficient to hold them in check. As a too frequent use of tobacco fumes has a tendency to bleach the outer petals, cayenne pepper can be used as a substitute. To derive the most benefit from this method of fumigating it is applied somewhat in this wise:

Procure some plates of iron and heat them in the furnace, withdrawing them just before they become red. Lay these in the paths at spaces of twenty feet apart and close the ventilators. After everything is in readiness, start at the end of the house farthest from the door and place on each plate a spoonful of the pepper, work towards the door as quickly as possible, as the fumes are very disagreeable, and even dangerous. Keep the house closed for twenty minutes. This should be repeated at least twice a week for a month in order to catch each successive brood as it is hatched.

All infested buds should be picked off and burned. Picking off these infested buds and throwing them under the benches, as is frequently done, only accentuates the trouble, as the insects are very active and quickly transfer their operations from the lifeless to the living buds. To fight this enemy successfully requires great persistence, and there must be no let-up until the victory is complete. RIBES.

PAPER WHITE NARCISSUS.

Why is it that about 12 per cent of paper white narcissus does not bloom at all? We buy only best quality and highest priced bulbs. I have grown them when almost every bulb would send one stalk of bloom, and a great many two, but the past two years about 12 per cent failed to bloom at all. Has anyone else the same trouble?

P. & P.

Yes, we have noticed this year that a few bulbs on every flat of these did not send up their flowers with the majority, but give them time and they will all flower, although a week or ten days later. This is not satisfactory, because you like to clear off a flat and out with it to make room. Some bulbs sending up a late and weak flower is not any fault of your culture. These narcissus bulbs cannot be depended on to be well ripened and strong any more than your tulip bulbs, and I am sorry to say we have seen 50 per cent of these give us no flower even when not forced before March, and such standard varieties as Yellow Prince. That was several years ago when tulip forcing was at its height and poor bulbs were sent us because the demand exceeded the supply. Of late years I have noticed no failure among the tulips. A paper white grower has his troubles as well as we who force them. A sharp frost when they were in active growth would be injurious to the bulbs.

If you have lost only 12 per cent, don't complain. This narcissus is one of the simplest of all bulbs to force; in fact, there should be very little forcing about it. They should be gotten into the flats as soon as received. No frost should ever touch them, and from middle of October they will want a light house and 50 degrees at night.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

LILIES FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

We have a batch of Japan Longiflorum lilies that are now out in frame that we wish to have come in for Memorial day. How many weeks in a temperature of 60 degrees would you allow to get them in bloom for that date?

P. & P.

It would not be possible to give any definite number of days that the lilies would want in a night temperature of 60 degrees to bring them in flower for the last days of May, because May is sometimes a warm month and sometimes it is cloudy and cool, and April is also a month of doubtful weather. The two months that these lilies would occupy the benches is the most crowded time of all the year with the men that grow bedding plants, as I judge P. & P. do, and therefore I should not attempt to keep them in a cold frame to a late date and then give them a quick forcing. Are you sure they are all right in a frame, and not liable to too severe a frost? If they are not started at all and protected with an inch or so of short manure over the bulbs, a freeze will not hurt them, but if they have or will make a growth of three or four inches, a severe freezing will hurt them. Although a hardy bulb in their native state, this growth has not taken place where hard frosts prevail.

If you cannot afford them space in your houses until the last possible moment, then I would say bring them in not later than the middle of March. They will need little forcing; the increased heat of the houses from the advance of the season will be sufficient. I would, however, prefer to bring them in by the first of February and let them come along slowly in a cool house. Under the latter treatment the coolest house you have will bring them all right for the end of May. My remarks about the value of bench room are not as clear as I wished to make them. To be better understood: While you must give these lilies a space in the houses during the crowded month of April, why not also give them March, when you are less crowded and a cooler house will do, and be on the safe side? WILLIAM SCOTT.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

There is very little to be said at this particular time in regard to cultural directions. Your time will be largely taken up with daily routine work, such as watering, ventilating, disbudding, at the same time keeping each shoot growing into a straight stem. Fumigation and feeding are also to be numbered among the various operations to which I have called your attention lately.

It is a good time now to spend a few evenings looking into the financial results up to the present time and what the prospects are up to and including Easter. We have had the usual reports about large percentages of increase in trade during the holidays just passed. A favorite expression used was, "Could have sold much more if stock had been obtainable." A better expression, to my mind, would have been to say, "Would have realized more if we had watched the market closer and not unloaded too soon." However, this is not all there is to be said. If some of the stock on the market could have been obtainable at these places, it would not have sold at any price. Quite a few reports gave it out that there was a decrease in business, and these reports did not come from small cities as a rule.

Speaking to the growers, I will ask: Did you receive a larger price per hundred blooms this year than last? If not there is something decidedly wrong, and the more so from the fact that expenses have been higher, caused by scarcity and poor quality of fuel, for which exorbitant prices had to be paid. Perhaps you will remember in my notes of Dec. 4 I ventured to say this year's holiday trade would be a supreme test of the so-called salting process. I leave you to be the judges.

Now as to the convention. Mr. Baur has given you wholesome advice and instruction in this matter, and I heartily concur in all he says. I can only add and say that his remark about "planking down your two dollars" is right to the point. There are always too many deadheads around any kind of exhibition. Let us all agree to shake hands with the secretary first, leaving the proper tip in his hands.

Geo. S. Osborn.

WHITE BLOTCHES ON LAWSON.

What is the matter with my Lawson carnations? As soon as the bud shows color, white blotches appear on the petals. Otherwise they seem to be all right. S. S. B.

Your Lawson carnations are infested with thrips, which cause those white blotches on the petals. This variety seems to be a special favorite of these tiny insects, as you will seldom find a bunch of Lawson that does not show these specks more or less. The reds also are most of them favorites of theirs, and they show the blotches the quickest on account of the contrast in the color of the bloom and the blotch. Fumigate every night for a week with tobacco and then keep it up about twice each week for a month and they will likely disappear.

A recent visitor, who is one of the crack eastern carnation growers, told me that a good remedy is to take cayenne pepper and mix it with enough wood alcohol to make it inflammable, spread it out on a pie plate and raise one side a few inches, setting fire to it at the lower side. He says this will kill every thrips in the house, but will not injure a bloom. We shall give it a trial shortly and see what it will do.

A. F. J. Baur.

CARNATION TROUBLES.

I send some leaves from my carnation plants. Kindly tell me what is the trouble and the remedy. J. S. B.

The specimens you sent me were not in very good condition. They showed signs of rust and a form of leaf-spot fungus. I was not quite certain of the particular form of the latter, so I sent the specimens on to Prof. Woods at Washington, D. C., and he coincides with me. In his letter he goes on to say that the spot disease is likely caused by overfeeding or a stagnant atmosphere, etc., and I found in most cases that have come under my notice that the latter was the cause, although too much feeding will, of course, weaken a plant and make it an easy prey if the disease once gets started.

The proper treatment for these plants would be to pick off all the spotted leaves and burn them. Give plenty of ventilation and water only at the roots and stop syringing for a time. A few doses of the Bordeaux mixture or the copper solution would help to check it. Do not propagate from these plants, but rather buy fresh, clean stock.

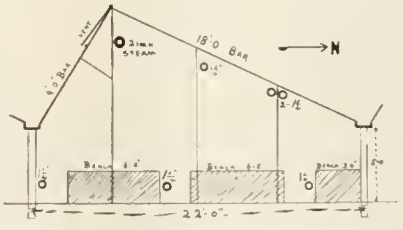
A. F. J. Baur.

PIPING.

We are going to rebuild our greenhouses and enclose a rough plan of same, inside and end view. Solid beds for carnations and lettuce. Please locate boiler room and piping for steam. Boiler is 10 ft. long, 3 ft. in diameter and has 28 3-inch flues. Our pipes are 2-inch and 1¼-inch. Would like to have boiler room on east end. Short span to the south. Pipes not to interfere with the walks. Would like to have some flow pipes overhead and boiler as near top of ground as possible. J. W. N.

Ohio.

In reply to the inquiry of J. W. N., I would suggest for the ridge and furrow greenhouses, 22x100, which he describes in his sketch, an arrangement of steam heating pipes, as shown in accompanying figure, with the intention of using up the 2-inch and 1¼-inch pipes he has on hand.



The arrangement consists of a 2-inch flow on the column under the ridge, grading downward from the boiler end of the houses to the farther end, then branching into the several lines of 1¼-inch pipes indicated, these continuing to grade down hill all the way back to the boiler end of the houses; this is assuming that the houses are either on a level grade or that they slope downward slightly toward the boiler or eastern end. The boiler being placed at the eastern end of the northern house, it will require a 4-inch steam main until the 2-inch steam pipe for the first house is taken off, then reducing to 3-inch until the main for the second house is taken off, then reducing to 2-inch.

The return main starting from the southern house should be 1½-inch, increasing at the second house to 2-inch and at the northern house to 2½-inch into the boiler. If the outer houses of the range have glass on their outer vertical side, an additional 1¼-inch pipe should be added on these sides either at the eaves or in the path, as preferred. The water line of the boiler must be below the floor line of the greenhouses.

I do not approve of short span to the south houses, but if your correspondent has a preference for that form, the arrangement of construction and benches is good. The short span to the south house will not warm up in the day time as will one having a longer southern exposure, and on account of the long northern exposure more fuel is required for heating. Henry W. Gibbons.

MOVING AND BUILDING.

H. R. B. writes from a town in Kansas that he intends moving his greenhouse "to a better location" and has acquired a lot 94 feet front. Depth of lot is not given. Can he build a house 100 feet long by 16 feet wide and put in two partitions, making three compartments, one for carnations, one for roses and one for general stock, using the middle portion for roses? He also asks whether one flow and three returns of 3-inch pipe on side will heat this house, or would it be better to make the four pipes go up one side and return to heater on the other side. He also mentions that he wants to build so as to have as "little waste ground on his lot as possible."

Now it's quite likely there is to be a dwelling house on his lot and he can afford no more room for greenhouses, for just as sure as this town grows he will want to add to his houses. Florists, however, especially beginners, can't afford acre lots on "Main street." I would make the house 18 feet wide, 16 feet necessitates two paths that makes the benches very narrow. The extra cost of another two feet will be but a little more glass on first cost, but will give you 200 square feet more of bench room as long as the house lasts.

One partition is, I believe, enough, for this reason: The compartment devoted to "general stock" cannot suit everything, and as bedding plants and greenhouse flowering plants are most likely to be the leading articles wanted, then a carnation temperature—say 50 to 55 at night in winter—will be the best suited for the general stock, so that no partition will be needed between the carnation and the plant house. Supposing you make the house 18 feet wide then. To be safe in the coldest weather—and remember you should always pipe a house to be at the right temperature in the coldest days of winter, not the moderately cold—then four 3-inch pipes on each side will do for the carnation division, and five 3-inch on each side for the roses. By all means let the flow and return be on both sides of the house. You will get much better results than if you carried the pipes all around the house. One flow and three returns of equal size is not good. Make it two flows and two returns, and in the rose house two flows and three returns.

If the house runs east and west the boiler shed will shade one end slightly, but I am not informed anything about aspect. I would rather make the end farthest from the shed the rose compartment, as this end would be glass and would be lighter. In the bright winter days of Kansas a house running north and south would be about as good as one running east and west and cooler in the summer, which is quite a consideration in the almost torrid spells that pass over Kansas, so I am told. In either case I should build equal span with 30 inches of upright glass on both north and south walls, or east and west, as the case may be. This side light is a wonderful help whatever plant you grow. William Scott.

ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS SEED.

At what stage should the seeds of Asparagus plumosus be picked? I have a bed full of seeds. In the green pods the seeds look to me perfectly ripe and plump, while some where the pods have turned blue and shriveled the seeds appear to be shriveling also. Also let me know if the seeds can be sowed with the pods on, as where there are several thousand, hand-picking them all is quite a task. A Subscriber.

The seed pod or covering of the seeds of this plant is quite variable in color. Always green at first, it is sometimes white or red and then blue and finally black. No harm comes of the pod shriveling; it is only perfectly natural and cannot affect the vitality of the seed. To pick each seed off before the pulp began to shrink would be a tedious job. Let the last fruit be ripe, then gather the whole crop.

If you want to sow the seed yourself it will most decidedly germinate if sown just as you pick it, as nature would handle it, but if you intend to sell it to a seedsman he may either buy it as gathered or want it cleaned of its covering. By rubbing thin layers of it over a sieve you can separate the seed from the pulp. The cleaning of seeds is an expert business and in a large way must be most expeditiously done, but with a sieve and a little wind most of our own grown seed can be handled well enough in a small way.

LONGIFLORUM LILIES.

P. O. asks "When should longiflorum intended for Decoration Day be potted, from cold storage, of course?"

A question about the same as this was sent to me very recently and answered to the best of my knowledge. I will say to begin with that a few years ago we had a thousand bulbs of Japan longiflorum which arrived late and no attempt was made to force them for Easter. They were potted early in November, brought into the house at New Year's and kept in a house which was usually about 40 degrees at night. They came along very slowly. You may say they just advanced with the season and they came on exactly right and were particularly fine. Perhaps this is not the most economical way of occupying your bench, and it is certainly not answering the question.

You cannot let the lilies remain in cold storage until after Easter, and as your bench room is not as valuable now as it will be two months from now, I see no advantage in postponing starting them at once. Nothing is improved with cold storage, and every day that natural growth is arrested there is some loss to the future vigor of the plant, so I would pot them at once and start them in a cool house. In a night temperature of 40 degrees for the next two months you cannot miss it. A little retarding, if necessary, is easily done in May by shade and ventilation, and a little progression is still easier accomplished in that bright spring month. Get them out of cold storage and into soil at once.

A hint worth remembering is the fact that with almost all bulbs brought out from cold storage, and particularly is this so with lilies, that they should when first started be kept in a very cool house, or the top will make a growth with no roots to support it, and until the roots are active no encouragement should be given to push up growth. Many failures with cold storage lilies arise from putting the bulbs at once into a warm house.

NOTES OF A WAYFARER.

Arriving in New York in time for the Florists' Club meeting, thither we went, knowing we would see a goodly number of old, familiar faces. The largest and no doubt the most pleasant-looking one was that of "The Bard," J. Austin Shaw. It was election night and zero weather, but a large crowd was present. Refreshments were served and no doubt this was one of the drawing cards; it always is, and to keep up interest in a club there is nothing like it. We listened to the report on the financial outcome of the recent flower show, which made everyone feel a little blue; however, our spirits were soon revived to see the way in which the substantial members came to the rescue with donations. No other city could have made a bigger failure, neither could any other city have recovered so quickly from it. We predict that when the New York florists make a success of a flower show it will be a big one.

The next few days we were calling on florists in that vicinity. At the Cottage Gardens Mr. Ward's force was busy filling wire hanging baskets with Lorraine begonias for Christmas; $1,200.00 worth hanging there, all sold, was a sight we appreciated, but no more so than the crops of carnations, which were commanding what seemed to us fabulous prices for that date, just double Chicago market prices. As a matter of course we were interested in the crimsons. Mr. Ward's name will go down in history as the "Crimson King"; no matter what other hybridizers raise in future, it seems that they must use Ward's blood to insure success. Harlowarden has some of it.

Mr. Ward is now working just as strenuously on other strains. His new cerise, Mrs. Roosevelt, will make a good commercial variety. President Roosevelt is a fine crimson, being a great improvement over the Governor and Harry Fenn. Sub-irrigated benches show a great improvement over surface watered, especially so in the case of the Lawson plants. Prosperity was seen in fine shape and those houses of seedlings will be a treat for the conventionists in February.

The Dailledouses, at Flatbush, were as usual in good shape. Floriana is one of the best commercial varieties grown here, although Alice Roosevelt, the variety just withdrawn from distribution, was not bad by any means. Fragrance was another fine thing, as was also Blush Seedling, and the new white May Naylor was very free. A house of Cypripedium insigne, producing more than half double flowers, was a novel and interesting sight. I should have also mentioned a new white carnation as large as Prosperity, finer form, more substance and a stem that holds up the flower. Isn't that a wonder? You'll see it. The five-inch carnation is in sight.

We were not particularly interested in ferns, but after seeing Nephrolepis Piersoni exhibited so many times we could not restrain ourselves from going out to Tarrytown to see how this new fern looked in its home. Nearly the whole of the establishment was being devoted to the propagation. You are already aware that it is a great acquisition to the trade in general, but as a grower it surprised us. We did not expect to see it such a rampant grower as it appears to be. It seems to throw out its feeders with more freedom than the Boston and develops the young plants in shorter time. Even the 2-inch pot plants show the character of the variety. Judging from the favor with which the Bostoniensis was received by the trade, we cannot see why on earth Mr. Pierson lets this one get away from him this year, but, as we said before, practically the whole place is filled with it and he has no room to build, therefore must presume it is Hobson's choice with him.

Our next call was at Florham Farms, Madison, N. J., where the president of the C. S. of A. wields the magic wand. We were particularly struck with the landscape work. Although the ground was covered with snow, we could see those long, graceful curves and the effective and practical planting of the tender and hardier shrubs and trees where each is given its own peculiar location, where it will grow the best, and at the same time the desired effect is maintained. We were first introduced to several houses of Adiantum Farleyense, which was wonderfully well done. A very large house for storage of the more hardy ferns and bay trees was a very practical building for the wintering of the handsome specimens contained therein. The growing houses and the service buildings attached makes a model place, everything seems to be arranged so conveniently.

The orchids were in fine condition. Cypripediums were just in the height of their glory, and a splendid sight they were. Mr. Herrington seems to have gotten a corner on Cyp. villosum. He has an immense stock of it. The flowers bring nearly double the price of those of insigne. A house of Gros Colman grapes was a sight to make your mouth water at this time of the year. The color of the berries was fine for this variety and one eight-pound bunch was still hanging, perhaps for some particular occasion.

Carnations? Yes, they have a few, and some great seedlings among them, of which you will hear about in the near future. We met Brian-Boru for the first time. He is Mr. Herrington's right bower, and after a short chat soon discovered that we had played marbles in nearly the same alley and one of our party traveled over the same pike as Mr. and Mrs. Herrington. You know how people do talk then. Those are little incidents that go toward making a long journey seem short.

James Hartshorne.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market is tremendously active. All flowers are in brisk demand and in rather short supply. Many varieties are extremely scarce. The shortage in fancy roses creates a lively demand for some other flowers not generally sought at this season. Carnations are selling well. White continues scarce. The commoner grades of colored sell better than a week ago. All fancies are eagerly sought. Bulbous stock is slowly increasing in quantity. Freesias and daffodils are pretty good. Tulips can be had in several colors, but are still a bit short in the stem. Easter lilies can be had in quantity; S. S. Pennock sold over 1,000 last week. Double violets and valley are good and quite plentiful. White lilacs are very fine. E. G. Asmus is sending some superb long stemmed stock to this city. Francois Supiot is cutting heavily.

The First Assembly.

The first assembly was held last week. The hall itself was beautifully decorated, but it is the private dinner parties before the ball that are of especial interest this year on account of their floral arrangements. The assemblies are our city's oldest balls and the dinners before the assemblies are famous. The idea this year was to return to the flowers used by our grandpa florist for our customer's grandpapa. Probably the most effective of these decorations was the following: In the center of the table a ball of carnations, around which were laid the ladies' bouquets made of white camellias. Each bouquet was edged with a narrow border of another flower—one mignonette, another sweet peas—and was tied with a large bow of ribbon matching the border flower in color and stamped with the intials of the lady for whom the bouquet was intended. Each bouquet was laid so as to come opposite the proper plate.

Down in Jersey.

They are very busy at the Dreer place this week potting up 65,000 roses into fives and sixes. They are always busy at Riverton; in fact, the band of workers might best be described as systematic hustlers. It is this systematic hustling that keeps the entire place in perfect condition, neat and trim, so that one is only conscious of here a bench to be filled by shifting and there a cement walk to be finished, without having the feeling that anything is so pressing that a big palm or azalea order could not be shipped off without seriously delaying the regular work. One fancies that when they catch up with the work, which must sometimes happen, then one man goes abroad, another on the road, a third chooses the time to get ill (they can't ordinarily spare the time to be ill at Riverton), and the rest are so scared lest the work get ahead of them that they pitch in like blazes and keep it down.

Be this as it may, the place is in very fine condition now and always. Geo. A. Strohlein, who is at the helm during the absence of J. D. Eisele, is justly proud of the vast palm fields. "We have got the upper hand of the insects," he said, "by keeping eternally at it"—arecas, kentias, latanias in all sizes and stages of growth. All looked well and promised freely to keep up the firm's reputation for fine stock.

The quantity of fern spores sown is unusually large, the business of selling small ferns in flats having been added to that of sending out 2 to 3-inch ferns, and larger.

The coloring on Pandanus Sanderi is vivid, and Mr. Clark, who has this novelty under his especial charge, is justly proud of its appearance. He considers it a rapid grower and easy propagator.

The new range of twelve houses, Dietsch pattern, built last summer, are of great interest. These houses are strong and light, showing great economy in room, and appear easily heated. While each house is rather narrow, the fact that twelve houses are open between (with one exception, a temporary division) gives a volume of warm air far greater than that contained in any ordinary house, or even houses. This range is entirely filled with azaleas in from 5 to 10-inch pots, presenting a beautiful sight. It has never before been my good fortune to see so many azaleas at one glance. All were in fine condition.

There were two interesting novelties which I hope to describe later.

Notes.

J. D. Eisele has arrived safely on the other side. He expects to return next month.

William J. Baker is receiving some fine carnations. Gov. Roosevelt, Lorna and Estelle are among his favorites.

S. S. Pennock is out of town for a day or two on a flying trip.

Geo. M. Moss is receiving some fine freesias.

George Morrison read a paper on Hawaii before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society on Tuesday.

R. G. Palmer entertained several of his business friends at his home at Doylestown on Wednesday and showed them his place and one or two others, including that of John F. Andre.

Charles E. Meehan says the only mistake Mark Mills ever made was growing scarlet Due tulips.

Mr. John Burton, of Wyndmoor, will build two houses, each 150x27, on his new place, and will rebuild four large houses on his old place, using Lord & Burnham iron posts, plates, gutters and all roofing material in the entire six houses.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Though there is no material change in quotations the prices on roses are more sharply maintained, as they continue very scarce. The quality is fair for the season and comparatively few are sold at the lowest figures quoted. In carnations there is a sufficient supply of color, but none too many white. Almost any kind of a white carnation will bring $2 and good ones sell quickly at $3, while the best reach $4. It is only the poor colored flowers that sell as low as $1.50 and a few down to $1.

Violets are the only flowers of which there seems to be a surplus and there is an abundance in the market. A few of the choicest dark ones reach $2, but the great bulk of the receipts is disposed of at 50 cents to $1.

The outlook for the relief of the rose scarcity in the early future is not encouraging, judging from a glimpse into the houses of several growers. In half a dozen places the indications are that the cut cannot fail to continue small for several weeks.

The general demand is fair but not what was anticipated at the season.

Various Items.

An effort is being made to secure an appropriation from the state legislature for the erection and maintenance of greenhouses at the state experimental station at Urbana. Prof. Blair, of the State University, was in the city Tuesday and in conference with committees from the Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club a draft of the proposed bill was made and will be presented to the legislature. It calls for an appropriation of $30,000 for the first year and $15,000 for the second year, and the objects are stated as the investigation of diseases affecting greenhouse plants, experiments with soil for such plants, etc. Every florist should use his influence with the representative of his district in the state legislature to secure favorable action on this proposed bill.

There was a fire Monday morning in the building at the corner of Wabash and Randolph, in which so many wholesale florists are housed. Fortunately the fire did not enter any of the wholesale houses, though the big glass window in John Muno's place was broken and a flood of water poured over his desk. A few doors were forced in other places by the firemen while fighting the fire, but there were no losses by those in the trade, except possibly by the odor of burnt wood that pervaded the building.

N. G. Axtel, of Evanston, the sweet pea grower, died a week ago Sunday.

Paul Dailledouze, Flatbush, N. Y., and Fred Holton, Milwaukee, were recent visitors.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

State Society Meeting.

The Indiana State Florists' Association held its annual meeting at the Commercial Club rooms on Monday, Jan. 12, and in spite of the severe cold weather there was a very fair attendance. The most notable absentees were the out-of-town members, of which only a few were present.

The election of officers resulted in the selection of the following: President, F. Dorner, Jr., of Lafayette; First Vice-President, E. A. Nelson; Second Vice-President, William Billingsby, and the re-election of H. Junge for Secretary and J. Heidenreich for Treasurer, the latter four being from this city. J. Hartje, H. Heller, A. F. J. Baur, E. G. Hill and J. D. Stuart were elected an executive committee.

A very animated discussion was indulged in regarding the holding of a fall show next November, but nothing quite satisfactory was brought forward, so it is to be the special order of the next meeting. A committee was also appointed to direct a movement against the exorbitant express rates charged by the express companies to work with the national movement along this line.

Between the afternoon and evening sessions there was an elegant supper served to the members present, and after all had appeased their hunger Pres. Haugh called on several members for a few remarks, and some very enjoyable short talks were made by J. S. Stuart, H. Junge, H. W. Rieman, A. F. J. Baur, J. Hartje, E. A. Nelson, I. Bertermann, R. A. McKeand, F. Harriett, J. Heidenrich, F. Huckriede and others. These after-dinner speeches are very enjoyable and they are good for our younger members, who can through them become accustomed to hearing their own voices in public; good training, I might say.

There was a very nice display of cut flowers, but the severe weather kept away a good many blooms and especially pot plants, of which there is usually a good display at these annual meetings. The S. A. F. silver medal was awarded by mistake to the new rose, Franz Deegen. This rose being an importation makes it ineligible to compete for these medals. The blooms were fine and were shown by the S. Park Fl. Co., New Castle, Ind. The bronze medal went to J. Hartje for a white carnation of fine size and quality all 'round. Baur & Smith's pink carnation Indianapolis was awarded a certificate of merit, as was also a pink shown by F. Harriett. Baur & Smith's new red carnation "The News" was a center of attraction on account of its large size and fine stem, and they were awarded honorable mention. Stuart & Haugh brought down some fine roses and carnations, several varieties of each. The Golden Gate are certainly fine, and they swear by Avondale for a money-making pink carnation. Genevieve Lord does splendidly with them, and their Lawsons are fine. They were awarded honorable mention for their display.

We missed some of the veterans who are always on hand at this meeting. E. G. Hill, F. Dorner and J. A. Evans failed to make good this time, a rare occurrence. The former two no doubt had to stay home to watch their coal piles dwindle away, but the latter, how we envy him. His ventilator machinery won't freeze, and he can sit back and smile while we poor growers worry our brains about where our next car of coal is to come from.

Items.

Here, as at other cities, there has been a great shortage of coal, and a few places have had narrow escapes, but no one has been frozen out. Some are running in a from-hand-to-mouth manner, however, and if all get through the winter safely it will be a wonder. Those who made contracts last summer are being taken care of, and the Island Coal Company, which supplies all the larger growers about here, assures us that we shall have plenty, and is doing the right thing, in some cases sending it in wagons a distance of five miles when they can spare no car. A rather discouraging aspect of the situation is that we are in danger of having another shortage next season and that it may not be possible for the growers to lay in a full winter supply next summer even if they want to. The contract between the miners and operators in this section of the country runs out in April, and unless they can come to satisfactory terms there may be a shutdown of the mines for a time. The miners meet in convention in this city beginning Jan. 13, and it is known that they intend to ask for a large increase in wages, and unless the operators are willing to concede their demands there may be trouble.

We were honored one day the past week with a visit from one of the crack carnation growers from the east in the person of Mr. P. Dailledouze, of Flatbush, L. I. We had known this gentleman by reputation for a long time, but had never had the pleasure of shaking his hand. If there is anything you want to know about carnations just ask him. He was on a trip through the middle west. A. B.

BUFFALO.

We have had lots of weather the past week. Zero and snow to burn, or rather to melt. All this is seasonable and if things were normal we should say "let her come." As conditions are we pray for and are in a joyous mood when the wind is in the south and the sun is shining. Charles L. Dole reports that he saw a robin sitting on an apple tree in Lockport last week, and a neighbor of his saw the same species of bird in the same locality and they were of opposite sexes. Both of these good people must be ornithologists of advanced knowledge to distinguish the difference, but that's of little consequence so long as it was "Robin Red Breast" for surely, although this joyful spring songster (and afterwards nuisance) is frequently a few weeks too early in his migration north, his appearance here so soon after the shortest day must give us hope of an early spring.

Perhaps the lonely bird was mistaken in his course and intending to make a flight from southern Texas to Louisiana had been carried north just as drummers take sudden and peculiar flights, and that reminds me that there are several in town, but luckily I have interviewed only one, and he a very old acquaintance. Times were when the famous house, or firm, or establishment of Pitcher & Manda appeared in the heavens and on the earth and its brillianey and splendor, like our sun, made all else but planets and satellites. The central sun has vanished and the minor bodies still exist. During the most resplendent period of this terrestrial semi-celestial body, it sent out an army of more or less able young men to proclaim that they were the light of the world and had the goods. It was a hortieultural department house. Among these young men was Harry Bunyard and he traveled north, and if all the drummers for that firm had done as well as he it may have helped some. And so after seven or eight years of absence he appears again as bright and chipper as ever. Harry is not one of those Englishmen who calls himself "'Arry"; he is bright and educated, and Dean Hole in his most lovely book calls Harry's uncle "The Emperor of Popomology." But Harry was not talking stone fruits or pomaceious fruits. He was "spieling" for Clucas & Boddington Co., and you all know that they have everything to sell from a Russian mat to a mole trap.

I regret that last week I posted my notes too early to tell you of the sudden death of Sam Smiley, of Lancaster, N. Y. Mr. Smiley began the growing of flowers at Bowmanville, a village twelve miles east of Buffalo, some twenty years ago, and later moved to Lancaster for better railroad facilities. He grew cut flowers and plants for the Buffalo market. He was about forty years of age, a most hard working, industrious and unassuming man, and was respected by all who knew him. Going out to see over his houses in the evening, he was later found dead in his boiler shed.

NEW YORK.

An Auto Trip.

Mr. Langjahr, the Brooklyn wholesaler, did me the courtesy of a short trip through a part of Carnationville, Flatbush, last week in his auto, but the visit was not comprehensive and many of the great growers could be seen only in imagination.

Our first call was on Papa Zeller, whose vitality is remarkable, and a fair hope exists that this grand veteran among carnationists may be well enough to attend the February convention.

Away out in the "rhubarbs" of Flatbush—a mile southeast of Dailledouze Bros.'—is the range of Suydam, whose schooling with the brothers graduated him from a vegetable grower to a producer of novelties. He has a "strain" of mignonette which readily brings at wholesale from $2 to $3 a dozen. It has no name and the seed is not for sale, but it is a Suydam good article and for size and sweetness it stands at the head of the procession. Mr. Suydam also has a grand pink carnation, a child of Scott and Daybreak, double the size of Scott, with 2-foot stems, and exactly like Scott in color. This also is an "uncrowned king" and of the no name series, but the price it brought at Christmas was enough glory for the season. Here, too, are Cervera, pink and yellow, a nearly white seedling from Bradt and Flora Hill, and a very productive light pink seedling of great strength and some fine stock of Prosperity and Gov. Roosevelt, Gomez and Queen Louise.

A little farther out in "the wilds" are the establishments of C. & W. W. Kouwenhoben, once—before the "lettuce microbe" arrived—large growers of vegetables, now carnationists and mignonettists of no mean calibre, and finding at the cut flower market in New York a steady demand for all they produce. They grow about the same varieties of stock as their neighbor, Mr. Suydam.

The shades of night were falling as our auto sped homeward after a call on our friend from "bonnie Scotland," Davy Mellis, whose beautiful new home is artistically painted and decorated with scenes from the land of the heather, including the old homestead, "a wee bit house," he calls it, where he first began the nursery business. Mr. Mellis has thirteen fine houses devoted to about everything a florist grows. His lilies are superb. Close to one of the largest cemeteries in the country, his business in the planting season is enormous. Sixteen men are constantly employed and his charming daughters are in charge of his two offices. He is the principal grower of shamrocks in the east and his wholesale trade in this "17th of Ireland" necessity is extensive. The surplus of his cut flower stock goes to Mr. J. V. Phillips, of Brooklyn. Mr. Mellis will be with the Flatbush bowlers at Milwaukee.

Items.

Hanft Bros. had the bridal and maids' bouquets for the Gruner wedding. The bride's bouquet consisted of orange blossoms, white roses and lily of the valley, and the bridesmaids' of violets and gardenias.

At the Hotel Netherlands the decorations for the Reid wedding were artistic, the dining room being a bower of smilax and roses. At the Church of the Incarnation only lilies and Bride roses were used with palms.

Hodgson, of Fifth avenue, and Alex McConnell report very busy times with their parties, of which there seems to be no end. All the Fifth avenue stores seem to be "in the swim" in this respect and there is little complaint of dull times.

Wadley & Smythe had the De Mauriae wedding last week, with a carte blanche house decoration. The muff bridesmaids' bouquets for this event were charming constructions.

The Fernery, on 33rd street near the Waldorf, reports a fine holiday trade, and many decorations and dinners. The ladies who have built up this business unaided and so rapidly are a credit to "the woman in hortieulture" and deserve their success.

Mr. Scallen, of 1259 Broadway, has been a sufferer from rheumatism during the past week, confining him to the house.

One of the dinners of the year was that of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish last week, where unique floral decorations prevailed. Sixty guests were seated at five immense tables over which hung gigantic umbrellas of flowers and asparagus with innumerable electric lights suspended by white moire ribbons. White tulips, primroses, hyacinths and roses were used in the table decorations.

The Astor ball last Tuesday established a new record for society and it is now the "six hundred" instead of the "four hundred." It was a brilliant affair. American Beauties and orchids were the prineipal flowers utilized with an abundance of pink azaleas used in arches and pink roses in festooning. Manufactured rose trees formed aisles and banks and were divested of their blossoms for corsages and boutonnieres. The two great mansions of the Astors were turned into floral bowers. These are but the beginning of events that promise great opportunities for the floral profession daily until Lent arrives.

Preparations are complete for the big dinner of the Florists' Club on Saturday, January 31, and a fine attendance is assured.

C. W. Ward, of Queens, and W. A. Manda, of So. Orange, have been disseminating knowledge over in Trenton, N. J., at the meeting of the New Jersey State Horticultural Society, discoursing on "Plant Breeding" and on "New Privets and Roses for Hedging." Their addresses were much appreciated.

Among the last week's visitors was A. N. Broadhead, of the Jamestown, N. Y., "Lake View Rose Gardens."

The sick list has among its numbers John N. May, of Summit, and James W. Withers, of American Gardening, the latter gentleman contemplating a trip to the tropics to hasten his recovery.

The golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Allen, of Floral Park, will be celebrated on next Tuesday afternoon and evening and a cordial invitation is extended to all their friends to "come and make merry." Mr. Allen is still a "young" man in all that goes to make life worth living and an illustration of the splendid results of "right living" that makes the word "old" unnecessary. May they "live long and prosper."

To the majority of the florists of this country the shortage of coal and exorbitant prices are a sufficient burden to bear. Add to this the calamity of fire completely destroying everything, houses and plants, and you have some idea of the misfortune that has befallen Geo. Zeiner, of Flatbush. The loss is over $3,000, with no insurance. Mr. Zeiner has the sympathy of all in his trouble.

The coal situation is as discouraging as ever. There seems no hope of relief in this vicinity and an early spring is about the only probable relief.

Paul Dailledouze has been enjoying a business and pleasure trip among the western carnationists, and doubtless has stirred up a good deal of enthusiasm as to the convention. He can't say too much in behalf of the coming Carnation Society's meeting in Brooklyn next month, for it will be a record breaker, and unhappy will be the man who cannot come.

Mr. Frank Clarke, of Clarke Bros., the leading florists of Portland, Ore., is in New York, and took in the bowling contest at Flatbush last Thursday. Mr. Clarke and his sister are talented musicians and have come to the city to take a course of lessons from the best teachers, with a view to a grand opera career. The two establishments of this firm at Portland and San Francisco, with their 60,000 square feet, place them in the van in the great northwest in the florist business.

Wm. Sampson has arranged his wholesale business interests in connection with the Cut Flower Co. His principal stock consists of Lawson, Prosperity, Genevieve Lord and Flora Hill and excellent mignonette.

Mr. Ruppert, of the H. A. Dreer Co., was in town last week and reports business excellent and a wide demand for their new pandanus.

Mr. Eisele, of this house, sailed on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse on the 6th for a business and pleasure trip in Europe, which will be prolonged until nearly the end of February.

For the last four years B. S. Slinn, Jr., has decorated the Arkwright Club for their annual banquet and made an especially elaborate display of Beauties this year in honor of the popular guests, Governor Odell and Admiral Schley.

Mr. L. B. Craw, of the Lord & Burnham Co., is now out of danger and rapidly recovering after a long siege of typhoid fever.

Mr. Paul Pierson, of Briar Cliff, was a visitor to the city Saturday last and reports so general a demand for Beauties that even his immense plant cannot keep pace with the demand.

Wm. Ford, of Ford Bros., the wholesalers of 30th street, has been very ill for a week with quinsy. He was able to be out again on Monday.

Mrs. Hafner, mother of Lawrence Hafner, died on Friday last and will be buried today (Wednesday). Mr. Hafner has the sympathy of his many friends of the craft in his bereavement.

Mr. Patrick O'Mara intends joining his brother and sister shortly in Florida for a few weeks' recuperation.

Geo. Hildebrandt, with John Young, is recovering from a tonsilitis attack, a complaint that has afflicted many of the florists this month.

Chas. Koch, of Flatbush, is nursing a lame limb.

Mrs. William Plumb has been very ill at the Mineola hospital.

At 4 o'clock Monday morning Roberts & Grunewald, retail florists at 247 Columbus avenue, suffered a serious loss by the complete destruction of their handsome store by fire.

The meeting of the Brooklyn Horticultural Society was held on Monday evening at the society's rooms in the Germania building. As the convention draws near the enthusiasm of the society increases. The largest possible attendance has been anticipated and provided for. All the committees reported not only progress but completed work.

Cut Flower Trade.

The cut flower trade during the past week showed some improvement, which was very gratifying indeed, although the transient business was a little quiet. The improvement was in the line of decorations and table work, so report some of the large establishments in the West End. Quite a number of orders for weddings, receptions and dinner parties have been booked for the near future. This kind of work should be in good demand from now until Lent.

The weather the past week was most beautiful and a few days quite warm, which of course made flowers of all kinds more plentiful and caused prices to tumble some. Violets especially, which had recovered greatly since the holidays, suffered the greatest setback, and the figures realized were not more than one-half what our growers expected. They sell for 50 cents per 100 and cheaper in 1,000 lots, and the fakirs are peddling them on all street corners.

Carnations are again down to 2 cents; that is, colored ones. The white are in greater demand, which keeps the price up on them. Although the quality of the stock is fine, many of the colored are left over after the morning sales and are dumped the next day.

Roses are improving in quality, but not enough white are coming in to supply the demand. Good firsts in Beauties are very scarce in this market, and always are when you want them. In bulb stock Romans and paper whites are coming better just now. Freesias are in and sell well. Some fine valley was seen the past week, which moved lively. Callas are plentiful, but no Harrisii lilies are in as yet.

Shipping trade has also improved considerably the past week and should be fairly active from now on, so say the wholesalers.

Notes.

Miss Millie Young, daughter of John Young, was married last Wednesday to David Millar, of Chicago. The happy couple left the same night for Chicago, where they will reside in the future. Miss Ellison, daughter of William Ellison and cousin of Miss Young, acted as one of the bridesmaids. The wedding took place at the residence of the bride's father, which was tastefully decorated.

Fred Weber, Jr., celebrated his twenty-first birthday on last Saturday, January 17, at the residence of his parents, 4326 Olive street. A very pleasant evening was spent by those present.

John W. Kunz is back from Cincinnati and is now in the employ of Uncle Sam, distributing mail.

W. E. Jordan and wife are back from Omaha, where they went to attend the funeral of their brother-in-law, J. J. Dickey. Willie says the floral designs sent by the Omaha florists were large, beautiful and tastefully arranged.

The St. Louis Carnation Co., of Clayton, Mo., are fast disposing of their 50,000 rooted cuttings of standard varieties. The stock is of the best, as the cuttings are from well-grown, healthy plants.

The Lupe Sisters, formerly with Ellison & Tesson, have opened a place in the Columbia candy store, at 515 Olive street, and report that business has opened up fine.

George Waldbart, on Grand avenue, has imported a fine lot of plants from Japan, which came in fine condition. Mr. Waldbart says that business in plants and cut flowers was never better.

Arthur J. Ellison, late of Ellison & Tesson, left last week for Butte, Mont., to take charge of the State Nursery Company's floral establishment. The florists in Butte will find Arthur a first-class fellow in every respect. The bowlers here very much regret his leaving, as our strength in the next bowling match at Milwaukee is lessened about 75 per cent. We banked very much on Arthur's bowling ability to win for us.

Wm. Trillow, of Chicago, is in town, calling on the trade.

Mrs. Chas. L. Connon has opened the store lately vacated by Ellison & Tesson, at 7th and Locust streets, and Charlie is her manager.

The Riessen Floral Co., on Broadway, is making a fine show of cut blooms in their large windows, and reports plenty of decorations and funeral work since the holidays.

Mrs. F. J. Fillmore has inaugurated another series of raffles for three fine araucarias, which will take place just before Easter. Tickets are 25 cents. The three plants were grown by Frank from cuttings and are in the best of condition and of fine shape.

Mrs. Emily C. North, head of the North Floral Co., at 914 Olive street, and widow of the late Joseph W. North, died at her home in Kimmswick, Mo., at 5 a. m. Saturday after a short illness. Mrs. North leaves a number of grown children and many friends in the trade to mourn her loss.

Almerin Hotchkiss, superintendent of Bellefontaine Cemetery, died Saturday morning at his home in the cemetery, at the age of eighty-seven. Mr. Hotchkiss had been superintendent of this cemetery since 1849. The funeral was held Sunday, and many in the trade who have known Mr. Hotchkiss for a number of years were present. Frank, his only son, who is assistant superintendent, survives him.

BOSTON.

A very good week and enough of everything but smaller grades of roses, coal and money! Newcomers among the "flowers that bloom in the spring" are a few double jonquils via Mann Bros., and a few Dutch hyacinths now and then brought in by Sutermeister.

The local supply of American Beauties is badly shortened, as is usual at this time of the year, and imported flowers come a bit too high. There are some fairly good Meteors, and both the Waban Rose Conservatories and rose houses of W. H. Elliott are beginning to crop some excellent Liberties, the latter showing a surprisingly active growth and bloom.

A strong move is being made among lovers of antiquities towards preserving Park Street church on account of its age, style of architecture and religious associations. Looks like costly sentimentalism, especially when Boston boasts of so many historic landmarks.

The Chicago Carnation Co. shows its enterprise by forwarding a box of sample blooms to Boston for exhibition purposes.

Express Rates.

The following resolutions were passed by a mass meeting of florists at the American House on Saturday, Jan. 17. Your correspondent was unable to attend and extends thanks to the chairman, Wm. J. Stewart, for the following:

Whereas, The transportation of cut flowers to the Boston market has been carried on for years almost entirely by the Adams, American and National Express companies, who have always carried cut flowers as first-class matter and have charged the highest rates on their schedule, but have since Dec. 10, 1902, arbitrarily and unreasonably increased the price of hauling said goods fifty per cent without in any way increasing the efficiency of their services.

And whereas, Experience and modern means of conveyance and the establishment by these companies of local offices and branches in all sections of the country has very much lessened for the express companies the cost of transportation and the risk of handling said goods, which are regularly forwarded every day in the year and consequently they should be transported at reasonable rates instead of the increased rate now levied.

And whereas, We feel that the present rates are a discrimination against our business and therefore unlawful.

And whereas, This increase of tariff by the express companies is in line and following the leadership of the great trusts of this country in increasing their prices, not because better prices are deserved, but to multiply their earnings and because they feel they are powerful enough to force the public to agree to their terms.

Therefore be it resolved, That we, the flower growers, flower shippers and merchants in and about Boston and vicinity assembled under the auspices of the Society of American Florists, protest against the unwarranted, unprecedented and oppressive advance made by said companies for the expressing of cut flowers, and that we demand a speedy return to the old rates for such transportation, which amply and sufficiently repay said express companies for any and all risks of handling and the labor and expense of transportation.

W. J. STEWART, Chairman.

W. W. TAILBY, Secretary.

The following committee was appointed to interview the express companies: W. E. Elliott, P. Welch, E. R. Shaw. Numerous letters were read from parties unable to attend, showing need of this action and that the movement is taking root in other places.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

A scarcity all along the line marked the advent of the past week, and despite the fact that the sun was very much in evidence most of the time there was no material increase in the supply. Trade was good, the demand being greatly in excess of the supply; especially so in white flowers, which were most in demand. The death of Mr. Pogue, the well-known dry-goods merchant of this city, caused a great deal of high-grade material to be used.

Roses are still scarce, but with a continuance of this kind of weather there ought to be an increase in supply shortly. It was almost impossible to get any Brides. Maids and Gates were some better. Liberties were scarce. Beauties were in better supply, especially long-stemmed ones, which found a ready market. Meteors were the only ones of which there was a surplus, which was due more to poor quality than anything else. There was a decided improvement in the quality of all roses and the outlook is very good.

Carnations are coming in somewhat better, and at times there are about enough to fill all orders. Notwithstanding the large quantities of white that are being cut, the past week proved that we could use more. Reds were also scarce. Pinks were about equal to the demand. The prospects for a large cut of carnations in the near future are very good.

Bulbous stock had its innings this week and sold out clear at high prices. Harrisii are still held at top-notch figures. Narcissus and valley sold well. Romans must be sold at too high a price to go well. There is but little money in them for the grower, and very few will be grown next year. Callas are selling well and bring a good price.

Violets are still very scarce and bring a high price.

Cut cyclamen find a ready market, especially white ones. They have good keeping qualities and many people mistake them for small orchids. They seem to be well adapted for cut purposes.

Various Items.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Society the members passed resolutions protesting against the excessive rates charged on cut flowers by the express companies. W. Murphy, E. G. Gillett and H. B. McCullough were appointed a committee to look after the matter. A petition was also circulated among the craft and signed by all who could be seen in time, which has been mailed, together with the resolutions of protest, to the secretary of the S. A. F.

George Meyers, of the Avondale Floral Co., is reported very low with typhoid fever.

Mr. Weltz, of Wilmington, O., was a caller. C. J. Ohmer.

BUTTE, MONT.

It was the best Christmas we ever had in Butte. It was beyond all expectations. Trade was mostly all cut flowers and prices were as follows: Beauties, $18 to $25 a dozen (with the $25 grade all cleaned up); Brides, Maids and Meteors, $3 to $5 per dozen; Perles, $2.50 to $3; Lawson and Bradt carnations, $2.50 to $3 per dozen; all scarlets, $2 to $3; ordinary flowers, $2; Romans and paper whites, $1; stevia, $1.50. Everything was cleaned up.

We have had the largest funeral ever seen in this section, that of Mrs. W. A. Clark, Jr., the most popular lady in the state, who died on New Year's day. Every flower that could be bought between here and Chicago was shipped in. The florists were completely played out.

The Butte Floral Co., who had the family order, got their designs mossed up Saturday and Saturday night and starting at 5 a. m. Sunday worked steadily, the whole force, till 9 a. m. Monday, making up. They alone turned out sixty-seven designs, in addition to thirty-six bunches. They also lined the grave and decorated the family lot. The business for the three days amounted to $2,500. This was a record breaker for Butte.

Law Bros. and the State Nursery Co. also made up numerous pieces and it took seven carriages to carry the flowers. A beautiful gates ajar arrived from the Salt Lake Floral Co.

A meeting of the florists has been called to organize a florists' club.

During the week ending last Saturday the market was in a normal condition and prices held on an even keel. Few, if any, changes were noted. Towards the close of the week the weather became sunny and the supply increased. Roses especially have held their own, and some extra fine Beauties, Maids and Brides commanded higher rates than above quoted. Violets had a bad week, though quality is good. Grand bunches of 100 extras went for $1.00. On Monday violets continued to arrive in shoals. Several wholesale houses handle over 100,000 weekly. The books of one house show a total sale to date this season of three and one-fourth million. The first fifteen days of January are always dull, and an improvement is looked for soon in market conditions.

BURPEE'S "Farm Annual" for 1903 has been issued. The colored cover is embossed and bears pictures of Burpee's Black Beauty egg plant, Burpee's Matchless tomato and Burpee's white Evergreen sugar corn. There are also colored plates of four varieties of onions, Burpee's "Halbert Honey" watermelon, seven varieties of sweet peas and seven nasturtiums. There are other taking novelties and the list of standard varieties is full and complete, as usual. The catalogue contains 184 pages and cover. Intending buyers of seeds can undoubtedly obtain one by addressing W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia.

THORBURN'S 1903 seed catalogue is at hand. The list of novelties and varieties is as full and as interesting as ever and it is very handsomely illustrated by fine half-tone engravings from photographs. Such illustrations, when well printed on fine paper as these are, are much more satisfactory than any other. The catalogue is dignified in tone and appearance, as becomes a house established in 1802. Buyers of seeds who have not received a copy can no doubt obtain one by addressing J. M. Thorburn & Co., 36 Cortlandt street, New York.

SEDALIA, Mo.—Gelven & Son will build two more 85-ft. rose houses in the spring. Chas. Koeppen, who was in the business here for a number of years, has moved to Columbia, Mo.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

A Banquet.

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society's fourth annual banquet was enjoyed on Wednesday evening, January 14, and a jolly company of over fifty attended. Anticipations of the usual good time were fully realized. The Florence hotel maintained its reputation. A dinner "like mother used to make" and without the necessity of "the flowing bowl" detracted nothing from the enjoyment of the evening.

President David McFarlane made an excellent toastmaster, and told an experience with his mule on the occasion of the last Poughkeepsie banquet that convulsed the company and prepared them for the flow of wit and oratory that followed. The decorations were of carnations and Nephrolepis Piersoni.

Mr. A. Brown, president of the village, gave an interesting tribute to the intellectuality of the organization and the credit to the town which the society demonstrated.

The Dutchess County Society was ably represented by Mr. Clarence Reynolds and Mr. W. G. Saltford, of Poughkeepsie. Mr. Reynolds gave a very interesting address, full of congratulations and good advice as to the summer outings of his society at the different private establishments. His beautiful allegory on the birth of the colonies of the roses was a masterpiece of descriptive oratory. Mr. Reynolds is one of the lecturers at Vassar College and an amateur florist of no mean accomplishments.

M. D. Reynolds, of the "Argus," followed in an eloquent address, lauding with enthusiasm the achievements of the society and its power for good in the community.

Mr. Butterfield, of the "Exchange," sang his "Wreath of Roses" to the evident delight of his audience and was in excellent voice.

He was followed by the representative of the REVIEW in recitations, including some original lines on Tarrytown.

Dr. Russell told some of his inimitable stories. Mr. Whyte sang. Mr. Elliott "discoursed sweet music" on the violin. Mr. Cobb, Mr. Scott, Mr. Withers, Mr. Lawrie and Mr. Kirby made addresses and the evening's festivity closed in the wee small hours as usual with "Auld Lang Syne." SHAW.

FLATBUSH, N. Y.

The prize bowling contest last Thursday evening was well attended and proved to be a very hilarious gathering. The "old guard" were at their best and after the regular battle was over scores were made of 192 by Siebrecht, 197 by Raynor and 199 by Thielman.

The first game recorded below indicates the prize winners in order of success and the articles chosen from the "mixed up" packages where the element of uncertainty and the public unfolding added interest and hilarity to the occasion.

No. 1—W. H. Siebrecht, 177 (193)—Silk muffler and box of coal.
No. 2—David Mellis, 167—History of the Boer War.
No. 3—Jno. J. Raynor, 165 (104)—Knife.
No. 4—John Thielman, 163 (129)—Morocco cigar case.
No. 5—Louis Schmutz, 153 (118)—Fifty Havanas.
No. 6—Patrick Riley, 146 (175)—Marble vase.
No. 7—Eugene Dailledouze, 144 (182)—Bottle of the "Crather."
No. 8—Henry Dailledouze, 137 (124)—Box cigars.
No. 9—Alfred Zeller, 132 (114)—Two boxes of tobacco.
No. 10—S. S. Butterfield, 130 (95)—Box of cigars.
No. 11—G. E. Irwin, 126 (114)—Automobile.
No. 12—J. A. Shaw, 120 (147)—Box of cigars.
No. 13—Frank Clarke, 110 (112)—History of the Spanish war.

All the prizes were valuable and most of them fell into the right hands for immediate use. These contests should occur more frequently; they are conducive to fraternity and enthusiasm. But one is always sure of a pleasant Thursday evening at the alleys of the Flatbush Bowling Club.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

During the past week there has been little improvement either in the condition of the market or of business. Business in general is not any better than last week. The weather was very cold and stormy.

Maids and Brides are a little more plentiful, but not enough to supply the demand. American Beauty roses are very scarce. Red and yellow roses are also short in supply.

Carnations are not moving briskly at all, and values are hard to maintain at last week's figures. There has been little or no improvement in the carnation situation. The finest grades of common varieties have been freely offered this week at $15 per 1,000, with good, ordinary blooms at $10 per 1,000; even at these figures it was impossible to dispose of all of them.

Fancies bring from $3 to $5 per 100. Paper white narcissus are not so plentiful and sell only fairly well at $3 per 100.

In Allegheny the demand for funeral work was good. E. C. Ludwig and Gustave & J. W. Ludwig made up some very large designs last week. Britenbaugh Bros. had a very large decoration at the Concordia Club.

Streiff & Neigel report business very good. Frank Faulk is the narcissus dealer and he always has plenty of them.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Company is receiving large quantities of white lilacs and fine double violets.

Black Diamonds.

The coal question is still an unpleasant one to all of the growers in this section, great difficulty being experienced in obtaining car-load lots of these black diamonds. It seems the dealers cannot get coal from the mines fast enough to meet the shipping orders.

J. W. Wyland, of De Haven, Pa., is using natural gas as fuel under his boilers. Mr. Wyland has his own gas well and had an ample supply during the recent cold spell.

Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Elliott, of Cheswick, Pa., sailed last Wednesday for Jamaica, to make a six weeks' trip through the West Indies.

Visitors: E. Bernheimer and S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, and E. C. Beatty, of Oil City, Pa.

Hoo-Hoo.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

Mrs. William Seward Webb—Color white, a sport from Mrs. Bradt that has not reverted in three years and is therefore considered as fixed and a distinct variety. Flower very large, the original being small in comparison, very double and deeply fringed. More healthy and vigorous than Bradt, with a longer stemmed flower that is fragrant. By P. J. Fay (gardener to Dr. William Seward Webb), Shelburne, Vt.

Tiger—Color orange striped pink, size two and one-half to three inches, calyx very strong, seldom splitting, type that of Mayor Pingree, habit stiff, needing no supports, foliage a dark green and an early and continuous free bloomer. By Henry Eichholz, Waynesboro, Pa.

With the American Carnation Society, ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y, Lancaster, Pa.

FREEPORT, Ill.—Louis Bauscher reports Christmas trade as good with an increased demand for potted plants, especially plants in bloom. Evidently the custom of sending friends beautiful plants as Christmas gifts is increasing. And all our deliveries had to be made on Dec. 24 with the thermometer registering but 7 degrees above zero and a brisk west wind. The florists no doubt appreciate the change in custom and should supply good stock in order to stimulate this demand, but it is to be hoped that better weather for delivery will prevail in future years.

CANNOT get along without the REVIEW.—W. A. Herbert, Wellsville, O.

TORONTO.

Trade around town has been slow since New Year's, and colored stuff has moved very slowly. It is fortunate that there is no great supply. Especially is the shortage noticeable in roses, which have gradually decreased in supply since New Year's. Single violets have been selling well, while double have been stocking up. Colored carnations have been overplentiful, but the scarcity of roses has helped them off. Bulb stock is plentiful. The demand, however, at present writing shows considerable advance, and the prospect of some big receptions and weddings in the near future is expected to run off considerable stock.

Most of the growers are now making preparations for their new stock for the coming season, and many are on the lookout for some of the best varieties of carnations to grow for the coming season; especially does this apply to the small growers who have not the chance to try stock a couple of years before going into the varieties extensively.

We hear some of the growers sighing for something new in the rose line, many of them believing that the old standbys, Brides, Maids and Meteors, are running out, but at present there is nothing in sight to take their places. Liberty, with a majority of the growers around here, is not a huge success, as it seems determined to take its rest in the winter.

Your correspondent in his rounds has noted some of the varieties of carnations that seem to be in a general way the best for regular commercial trade. They may not include the best varieties for exhibition purposes, but in a general commercial way they are considered the best. Of the varieties that have been tested, Lorna, Queen Louise, Norway and Glacier, for white, even up pretty well. Lawson, Mrs. A. E. Nelson and Cressbrook, for pink, seem to be the favorites that have done the best generally, while we see odd places where Dorothy is doing well, but with a majority it is not a favorite. In light pink, Mrs. Higinbotham and Morning Glory. In red, Mrs. Potter Palmer, J. H. Manley and Estelle seem to be favorites. In crimson, Harry Fenn and Gov. Roosevelt. In the variegated, Stella, Viola Allen and Prosperity are the best. This list may be attacked by some growers who find in it varieties that have not done well with them, but the majority must rule.

We had a visit the past week from Mr. Ned Dale, of the Dale Estate; Mr. Geo. Stewart, Goderich, and Dr. Roe, Floral View Greenhouses, Georgetown.

UTICA, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Utica Florists' Club was held at its rooms, Mannerchor building, January 8, with a very fair attendance, although several of the boys were on the sick list. It was decided to have our next meeting, February 5, a carnation meeting, and the club will be very much pleased to receive any of the new carnations. If sent to J. C. Spencer, secretary, 111 Oneida street, Utica, N. Y., he will see that they are well displayed and due notice given of them.

Our Prof. Geo. C. Hodges gave us a very interesting description of his trip to Florida during the holidays, which was more than enjoyed, and the boys who were not at the meeting do not know what they missed, as what he did not see would not be worth looking at. One thing I wish to mention, which is the nearest thing to our hearts these cold days, and that is that he stood on the place where some of our future coal is to come from. In fact, his description of everything was fine. When he said he was in swimming on Christmas day and lay on the sand, we all wished we were there. We are in hopes the professor will take another trip soon. It certainly is the next best thing to going yourself to hear his description.

Our next meeting will end with a smoker and we want all the boys to come.

Bowling.

The Utica bowlers turned out in good numbers, and although the scores were low, we had a very pleasant evening. Perhaps the most sport was in the last game, where everything was reversed and the lowest man was highest. It would have pleased you to see the boys try to pick off the side pins and go in the gutter, which counted ten. We will not dare to give the score of this game. Following is the score of the two games rolled straight:

CROMWELL, CONN.

Mr. R. G. Ludwig, bookkeeper for A. N. Pierson, left on Monday for a week's trip through western Massachusetts and New York state in the interests of the firm. Grafted roses, palms and carnation stock are to be given special consideration.

Orders for stock of carnations have been coming in very fast and two of the best sellers seem to be Governor Wolcott and Dorothy. Of the latter kind we intend to bench several thousand and are obliged to refuse orders for it constantly.

Among recent visitors are W. S. Allen, of New York; Mr. Boddington, of New York; Julius Roehrs, of Rutherford, N. J.; T. Malbrane, of Johnstown, Pa., and A. Squires, of Waugatuck.

MADISON, N. J.

The annual smoker of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society was held on Wednesday, Jan. 14, in the Brittin building, and proved like its predecessors, to be a howling success. No slur on the singers intended. About fifty members were present, as were also delegates from the New Jersey Floricultural Society and the New York Florists' Club. A business session was held before the serious business of the evening, when the newly elected officers took their seats. The officers for 1903 are as follows: President, Charles H. Totty; Vice-President, R. McMullen; Treasurer, William Charlton, and Secretary, Charles H. Atkins. The treasurer reported no debts and a balance of over $350 in the treasury, and the secretary also made an encouraging report.

After the business session the smoker was taken up in earnest and everyone claims to have had a royal time. The entertainment was furnished by New York talent and was very clever and original. There was the greatest abundance of good cheer of every description. The claret punch as brewed by the members of this club has been for years famous. That furnished on this occasion was fully up to the standard (10 above proof) demanded by the concoeters and consumers. The composition of this punch is a trade secret, but owing to the fact that certain fruits are used in the blending it is referred to by the name of "Tooty" Fruity. It is a treat to see Messrs. Duckham, Herrington and others we could name but won't, as they are prominent Y. M. C. A. members, hovering 'round the anteroom with anxious face until the fact is assured that the brew is O. K.

It is now some years since this society voted to do away with the formal dinner and substitute for it the free-for-all—sail in everybody—it's your own fault if you don't have a good time—smoker. It is now an established function, that brings the members into the closest kind of fellowship and mutual good will, and helps them for once to forget the price of coal and other annoyances. A true fraternal spirit is a great blessing in a florists' society.

MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. CYPRIPEDIUMS AT FLORHAM FARMS.

Probably Cypripedium insigne is the best-known of any orchid in cultivation today and the reason for this is not far to seek. It is comparatively easy to grow and under almost any conditions will produce some flowers. When well grown it is a fairly profitable crop, as the crop of flowers in the house depicted in the illustration will testify.

This house is a narrow lean-to, 168 feet long and 11 feet wide, facing due north, and contains about 500 plants. The cut this year was 6,000 flowers and the quality of the very best. The house has often been the subject of flattering comment on account of the healthy appearance of the plants, and the size and length of stem of the flowers. Many flowers were cut with stems 18 inches in length, but the average length was from 12 to 15 inches. This length of stem in the present age of long stemmed flowers greatly enhances the value of the flowers and the crop went off with a rush as soon as cutting commenced.

Undoubtedly much of the success that has attended the culture of C. insigne at this establishment is due to the house the plants occupy. As before stated it is a lean-to, facing north and this permits of the plants being grown without any shade whatever, for seven months in the year. The path is dug out and the beds are down to the ground level outside. This keeps the house cool and moist during the hot summer months, and a uniform degree of moisture is one of the most important points to look out for in growing cypripediums.

The plants are top-dressed in the spring with a mixture of moss chopped fine, horn shavings and a little leaf soil, and the way the roots come up and run through this mixture is ample evidence that they like it. Potting is done in the spring, when necessary, which is about every three years. Cyps flower much better when pot-bound, but when the foliage runs small it is a sign that the plants are starved and need a move. We pot in peat only, with all the fine particles retained that fall out when the peat is being pulled to pieces. In the early fall when the nights are getting cool and the flower buds are just appearing in the growths we run the house warm for a little while, 65 to 70 nights. This draws up the stem considerably and will not harm the flowers or plants if not too long continued. When flowers are open, 50 at night is ample, and this temperature can be maintained all the winter.

It is a common practice among growers to put the plants out in frames during the summer with a little shade on the glass, "to ripen up the growth," as they say. We don't like this idea. It ripens up the growth too good, and while the plants flower freely enough, the stem is very short and stubby, and the crop not nearly so satisfactory as when the plants are kept inside all the season.

One often sees a lot of plants here and there on commercial places through the country, but it is an exception to find them in good shape. The foliage should be of a glossy dark-green instead of looking like a peach tree struck with "yellows." I believe too much direct sunlight and not sufficient water responsible for this condition.

The second illustration shows a well-flowered typical plant of this species. It is in a six-inch pot and carries 19 flowers. These flowers wholesale at 15 cents, which makes such a plant worth $2.85, with the comforting assurance that every year it will increase in value if rightly handled.

The third illustration shows a bench of C. Leeanum, 100 feet long, and while it hardly shows up as good as the insigne house, the crop was nevertheless a very fine one. C. Leeanum is a garden hybrid between C. insigne and C. Spicerianum and while it costs more to stock up on than insigne, it is a good thing to handle. It is very attractive, with its broad, pure white dorsal sepal, and wholesales readily at 20 to 25 cents each.

C. Leeanum succeeds admirably with the same general culture as C. insigne, with the exception that it should be kept warmer during the winter months. The plants illustrated are growing in a cattleya house and seem to like their position. These plants were received from Belgium two years ago and were potted in the leaf soil compost that is now almost universally used for orchids in that country. With the exception of 50 plants that were retained in the leaf soil for the purpose of making a good test as to its merits as a potting medium, the whole of the plants were potted in peat.

There is no difference today in the plants, all being equally good, so that it is an act of simple justice to record that the leaf soil has proven as good as the peat, and this, in view of the fact that it is admitted that cypripediums show less beneficial results from the use of leaf mold than other orchids, I would not from this say that I prefer leaf mold to peat. Extreme care in watering is not necessary in the case of plants potted in peat and, therefore, peat will remain, in my humble opinion, the standard potting medium for the American climate and conditions.

most pernicious being a little brown fellow that makes the foliage look rusty. The only effectual way to get rid of this thrips is to dust the plant very heavily with tobacco dust. Let it lie on the leaves for a week and then wash it off, or else lay fresh stems thickly over the plants. This will clean out any thrips and will not hurt the young growth.

After an attack of thrips the young growth often is injured, though we believe the injury is caused by the insects while the leaf is in an embryonic state rather than by the tobacco. Friend Scott's advice to sponge the plants thoroughly is excellent, but your correspondent will find it slow work if he has many plants. It is very possible that he may have another species of thrips to contend with and has already tried the tobacco stems, but they have always effected a cure in our case. Chas. H. Totty.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Now that the days are getting longer when we may expect more sunshine, plants will begin to recuperate after the dull and cloudy weather of the last two months; roots will again begin to be more active and a new crop of wood of a stronger and more vigorous character can be looked for. In order to secure this we must make sure that the plants have plenty of good feeding material at hand, as the nutritive elements in the soil will have become exhausted. A good rich mulch of about one inch thick will supply those feeding roots which are now near the surface with the desired elements.

To make it more easily assimilated it should be made fine by passing it through a ¼-inch screen, and a fair sprinkling of desiccated bone added; three pounds to each bushel of compost is not any too much at this season. Meteors and Beauties can use it even stronger; this should be added just before using.

From now on for the remainder of the season liquid food should be given at least once a week. Choosing for this work a bright, sunny day, begin by giving it rather weak, increasing its strength as the plants become accustomed to it.

Coal being still a scarce commodity, there will be a strong temptation to use every means to economize on that item, and great care and good judgment will have to be exercised so that in practicing this no injury may accrue to the stock.

The night temperature can with safety be reduced as low as 46 degrees or 48 degrees, but of course at considerable sacrifice in the quantity of the cut (the quality of the bloom will if anything be improved), but no attempt should be made to husband the coal by trying to keep the houses at the normal by a radical reduction, or entirely giving up of ventilation, as this at once begins to affect the general health of the plants, and reduces the prospects of a future crop to a minimum.

The care of the cutting bench and the young stock in pots should now be one of the principal duties of the grower, as on these depend his weal or woe during the next season, when, let us hope, the coal question will be a thing of the past and we can again resume our equanimity. Ribes.

ROSE SOIL.

I send a sample of soil. Is it all right for roses? If not, can you tell me what it lacks? J. R. E.

This soil, in my estimation, is in no way suitable for indoor rose culture, nor in fact is it fit for any kind of greenhouse work, being nothing but a marly mud with a small deposit of decayed vegetable matter mixed with it, and has to all appearance formed the bottom of a lake at some not very distant period.

I have mailed a sample of good rose soil. This is the soil which rose growers are continually in search of and it is possible you may find some in your locality. The compost should be four of soil to one of decomposed cow manure. Ribes.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

General Behavior of Varieties.

Early in the season the idea was advanced by me that the different varieties should be reported on from time to time, so will endeavor to inform you upon subject, taking the date Jan. 25, one month from Christmas.

Mrs. Potter Palmer, with which we had no acquaintance until this season, is behaving nicely. Blooms measuring from 3¼ to 3¾ inches have been cut the past week and our customers tell us it is a good keeper. This variety is blessed with a strong appetite for liquid manure and requires a temperature of 50 degrees at night. A good supply of cuttings is obtainable which root readily. Would advise rooting early so as to have strong plants at planting time.

Cressbrook has furnished us with an enormous supply of bloom but a large per cent being imperfect. I cannot say that it is in favor here. We shall, however, propagate a small quantity for experimental purposes, also owing to the fact that a bursted calyx has not as yet appeared. First week in February will be early enough to put in sand.

Nelson is covering itself with glory. It is easily handled and with its long, graceful stems is a pleasure to grow it. Complaint has come to me that cuttings of this variety are difficult to root; allow me to suggest that the sand be kept less damp, especially if your propagating bench is of wood or slate. I had a sample lot of plants on trial last year and found our brick bottomed bench gave much better results than an old bench of wood now discarded.

Crane has not gone back on us yet, but from various sources it is said to be dying off badly. In view of this we are using extreme care in selection of cuttings. There seems to be a tendency for reds to drop behind sooner than other colors; a case in point being "The Stuart," which when in its prime gave flowers of an ideal scarlet but it went to pieces very suddenly. Perhaps some of our friends, the hybridizers, could give us some light in this direction.

Estelle, though not giving as long stems as Palmer or Crane, is well liked for its beautiful color and keeping qualities. It is a profitable variety to grow and would suggest that cuttings of this variety be handled as in the case of Nelson.

White Cloud, although a little later than Queen Louise, has given us better returns on account of its superb form and long, stiff stems.

Queen Louise requires feeding well to bring out the size. Its habit of dropping the lower petals over the calyx is against form and in consequence it is not so desirable for vase work as White Cloud. However, we need both and shall continue another year.

Marquis and Floriana, almost identical in color and form, are giving about equal quantities daily at present writing, but taking the season thus far the returns are in favor of the latter. Floriana is more grassy in growth than Marquis, but comes in earlier, furnishing an abundance of cuttings. Being a rapid grower in the field, it is best propagated rather late, especially in this latitude, where conditions forbid planting out before May 1.

Avondale, while of soft growth, has been a money maker here. Being a sport from Armazindy, we are very careful when selecting cuttings to take none but from stems holding perfect flowers.

Last but by no means the least worthy of mention is Mrs. Lawson. We have had it since first sent out and it grows better every year. With what little time I have to visit other places I notice with regret that in handling this variety, either none too careful selection of cuttings has been made or some growers will not or do not take or read the trade papers.

In closing would say that in view of the fact that we grow almost exclusively high-grade stock for use in vase work, I may seemingly lose sight of the quality deemed fit for design work. Such is not the case, however, as the supply of this grade is usually to be had without extra effort on the part of the grower.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

New Varieties.

I was very glad to receive with some of the shipments of new carnations a few instructions in regard to their special needs in cultivation, etc. I have advocated this very thing for several seasons and to me it seems the proper thing. Before many years it will become a general practice, because it will be demanded by those who buy the cuttings. There was a time when a carnation was a carnation and all varieties were treated alike and those that did not like the treatment they received were discarded. The rose growers learned long ago that to grow Meteor in the same temperature as they did Bride would bring them only off colored blooms or bullheads and that to grow Beauty in a Meteor temperature would bring only a lot of blind wood and black spot, etc. There is just as much difference in carnations as there is in roses and when a man sends out a variety that differs from most varieties in some respect it is his duty to tell his customers of it so they will not have to lose money on the variety after having paid a good high price for the stock to begin with.

Of course it sounds nice and no doubt helps the sale of a variety to be able to say that it is an easy doer and that it needs no special culture, etc. At the same time it is no more difficult to grow a variety that needs some change in treatment from the ordinary if you know what that change is. It is the lack of knowledge on this very point that causes most of the failures. There would not need to be so many cases of giving a variety a second year's trial if we knew just what was required the first year. The fact that a variety needs a high or a low temperature, a heavy soil or a light one, or that it is a strong feeder or a very light one does not need to count as a fault against it. The up-to-date grower does not mind that in the least, but he does mind when he is told that a warm-blooded variety will succeed well in a medium temperature. Of course, we can find out all those things for ourselves and in most cases we have enough patience to find them out, even though we may lose money by it.

The disseminator would not necessarily take upon himself any responsibility regarding the success of the variety and if he wished to do so he could state it on the slip of instructions. It stands to reason that after a man has grown a variety for three or four years he ought to know its peculiarities thoroughly and if it requires any special treatment he ought to know it, at least we give him credit for knowing. He knows whether the cuttings should be made early in order to get a fair plant, whether it makes a soft quick growth and needs a heavy shade when housing, whether the blooms are good during warm weather or whether the blooming shoots should be kept picked off later than most varieties. Whether it wants a heavy or light soil, whether it wants much feeding or none at all. If the calyx splits in a low temperature. If it needs close pinching to form a shapely plant. If it is a special favorite of red spider. Whether it does best inside all summer or if it needs early or late planting to do its best. All these things and many more should be stated.

The statement might begin in this manner: In growing this variety we have had the best success by following these instructions, but we cannot guarantee you success in case you see fit to follow them. They are given merely to give you the benefit of our experience with this variety in so far as you may be able to apply them to your mode of culture, etc.

Any grower with common sense would know enough not to follow them blindly, but if they differed very much from his mode of culture and if he had followed his own way and there was no success he would know where the mistake was made, and in many cases he would be more on his guard and quicker to notice when a variety rebelled at unsatisfactory treatment.

It would also show that the disseminator took more interest in his variety than merely to get as much money out of it as he could. I have talked with many growers on this subject and I have never heard a reasonable objection raised against it. There is no reason why it should not be done and there is every reason why it should be done.

RUST.

I send some infected carnation leaves. Please tell me what the disease is and the remedy. Is it very hard to get rid of?

TEXAS.

The leaves are badly affected with carnation rust. You can rid your plants of it by picking off the affected leaves and burning them. Dust the plants with slaked lime, and water only at the roots for awhile, dispensing with syringing altogether unless you see signs of red spider.

SUMMER BLOOMERS.

Which are the best varieties of carnations in white, light and dark pink for summer blooming in the field in a light sandy loam soil well enriched?

What could be expected of, say, 5,000 plants propagated in November? Do these plants need support of any kind in the field.

I. G.

The best white variety for summer blooming, or, in fact, during warm weather, is Flora Hill. I know of no variety that will give as good returns during warm weather as it does. A friend told me recently that Queen Louise is also a good summer variety, but I have not tried it yet. Some growers still hang onto old Mrs. Fisher and you might try it, too. In bright pink there is no variety that can come within hailing distance of E. Crocker for summer blooms, especially in quality. We grow Elma for light pink and it gives us lots of fine large blooms. I do not know of any other light pink that blooms well in warm weather. I believe it is claimed that Fair Maid is an exceptionally good summer variety, but I have not grown it.

Five thousand plants should give you a good lot of blooms during July, August and September. Cuttings that were rooted in November and grown right along ought to produce from 6 to 10 blooms per plant during these three months.

They will need no support except, perhaps, to protect them against heavy rainstorms, etc. Under ordinary conditions the stems will support the blooms unaided.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Lilies.

I have had several inquiries of late on the all important question of the earliness of Japan lilies for Easter. Easter is not so very early this year—the 12th of April, without referring to the almanac. Some of the best growers of this Easter plant do not do much forcing before New Year's, but after that they rush them right along. If your plants are five or six inches above the soil and you have the facilities to give them 60 degrees at night from now on, you will be all right. Look out for green fly. There is nothing more evident to an observer than that the twisted, "busted" bud is caused by the aphis stinging the bud when it is in a very young state. It is well for every florist to have a pocket microscope. It is so easy to be skeptical over what injury these minute creatures can do to a plant, and too many wait until the injury is very visible and take no precaution against the author of the injury.

Any of you who have read Gulliver's travels will remember where poor Gulliver was hiding in the wheat field when a mower came along with his scythe and discovering Gulliver, lifted him up for close inspection, and when Gulliver was opposite the giant's eyes he was seventy feet from the ground. Supposing he had been dropped to the ground as we may drop a toad, what would have been the consequence? He did not drop him; he put this full sized English sailor in his pocket and took him home when his day's work was done and presented Gulliver to the Queen of the Court, who had a cage made and carried him around fastened to her waist belt, as an Italian carries white mice. I never visited that island and never want to see a princess over five feet and nine inches, but the marvelous story is written just to show you that all things are large or small only by comparison. A very moderate lens will show you flocks of aphis, red spider, thrips and other vegetarians as ferocious and formidable in appearance as a flock of wild boars driven up for Kaiser William to slaughter with his rifle.

It is almost impossible to get tobacco smoke down into the thick growth of leaves when the buds are forming, and therefore it is time and money well spent to go over them every two weeks and inject a little liquid tobacco preparation into the crown of leaves. You can make your own tobacco water, but the strength will be uncertain and it is very important that you should not overdo it in this operation. The "rose leaf extract" diluted 100 to 1 is strong enough.

I am sorry to see among some lots of Japan longiflorum the appearance of disease of both kinds, and which I cannot name, but they seem distinct. One is the old trouble that destroyed so many of our Bermuda importations, and that may be called the jaundice or spotted fever, and the other is a wilted and scalded look of the leaves. How did that disease get over to the Japs unless some of our American representatives took it over? We suppose that too premature lifting after flowering is the cause, as it was in Bermuda.

Azaleas.

Keep your eye on the azaleas that are for Easter. You can't treat them all alike. Mme. Van der Cruyssen will want the coolest house you have above freezing, while Emperor of Brazil will come along on time in a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. These are perhaps the two extremes, but you can judge by the advance of the buds what temperature they will want. And don't let the young leaf growth make any headway, or you won't get any flowers. Rub them off as they start.

Deutzias.

You should allow about eight weeks in a night temperature of 50 degrees for Deutzia gracilis to come out in good style. It's better when not hurried in strong heat.

Rhododendrons.

Rhododendrons which have perhaps been kept quite cool should now be put into a house at 50 to 55 degrees at night, and keep them syringed. Our importers now know just what varieties will force and you are not likely to get hold of any of the slow varieties. Some of the grandest varieties of rhododendrons are entirely unsuited for this purpose, and we have had them remain without a move for two months in a strong heat.

Like the azaleas, these plants imported last fall have made little or no roots in the soil you gave them when potting, and while cool they would not suffer if slightly on the dry side, but when you begin to give them a warm house and the sun shines brightly the flowers are quickly ruined if the ball of roots is dry. In fact, if the water passes freely through the soil, you cannot very well overwater them. Our method of treating these newly imported plants is very abnormal and you must use unusual methods very different from what you would if it was an established plant with a pot full of working roots.

There are some Azalea mollis grown for Easter. They should be out in a cold frame now the same as any other hardy shrub, but seven or eight weeks should be given them in the house. They can be forced in shorter time, but are all the better to come along slowly.

Lilium Lancifolium.

We are receiving now some bulbs of L. lancifolium album and roseum, and we think they are very useful for us in July and August, and later if you can retard them. They fill in a gap in midsummer. The two above mentioned are beautiful, and no one can object to the odor, but we draw the line at the gorgeous auratum, grand flower as it is in the border or in the conservatory. It can't be endured in a room, and a design with these lilies in would be as good taste as a wedding bouquet sprinkled with the essence of Limburger cheese.

We began a plan of treatment of these L. lancifolium some years ago, which we have never had occasion to alter, and which is one of the few original gardening inspirations emanating from a bald head. Lily bulbs don't improve out of the ground or in dry soil or moss where no root growth can proceed. So when received pot them in 5-inch, or three bulbs in an 8-inch. Let the soil be moist, or as you would use soil for any plant when potting or shifting. Don't water them; the moisture in the soil is enough, and place the pots beneath a bench in a cool house. I like to cover the surface of soil with ½-inch or so of sphagnum moss. They will remain like this for two months without making much growth, and you don't want them to make much. When the growth is up to two or three inches you must get them on the bench, for then they want the light, the season being then well advanced. Nothing but the coolest house is ever needed. In fact, the slower you can grow them the better they will be, and if you can have them in flower in September they will be worth more to you than in July.

Brides' Bouquets.

I read with pleasure the well written article on wedding bouquets by Mr. Wienhoeber, and the illustrations were in keeping with the article—fine. Such illustrations as that are a real help to all of us. May we have lots of the kind from the same talented young man, for they are up to date, which really means that they are in advance of the date of most of us.

I would just mention—not in the way of criticism, goodness knows—but as a comment on Mr. Wienhoeber's article, that he assumes that a bride leaves to the florist the style of bouquet which she is going to carry. Not on your life! The tall stately brunette or the little flaxen fluffy has each made up her mind months before what the flower is going to be and has intimated the same to Alphonse, who will have that and only that. And if they, he or she, are open to suggestions and will take advice on such a momentous question they should receive the thanks of every florist as a woman or man of surpassing judgment and the florist's friend.

The advice from Mr. Wienhoeber on originality, and to break away from being merely copy books, is fine. Let's have more of it, and often.

STEAM HEATING.

BY F. B. CALL.

[Read before the St. Louis Florists' Club, January 8, 1903.]

Being an amateur in the steam heating business I can only give you views from a very limited experience. What experience I have had, however, leads me to believe that, very small establishments excepted, steam is the ideal method of greenhouse heating. But in being given the subject of "steam heating," I suppose I am not expected to argue the advantages of the different methods of heating, but merely to tell what I know about steam.

The boiler, of course, is the heart of the system and should have our first attention. My advice to anyone going into the market for a boiler would be to get a brick set, return draft, tubular; first, because there is more surface exposed to the fire than in any other; second, because less heat is lost from outside exposure and through the chimney than in any other; third, because of reasons first and second it is more economical in fuel; and fourth, it is easily repaired and repairs can be made in less time than on any other kind of boiler.

As an example, take our place. We have two brick set and one locomotive, or fire box boiler. We can bank the fire in the brick set boilers and they will run up to 40 or 50 pounds merely from the heat that is in the bricks and will make enough steam all day to heat our office and machine shop, besides running the steam pump to return the water. This is done on clear days, when we have no heat in the greenhouses.

But although we have bricked our fire box boiler in the same as a brick set, just as soon as we bank the fire the steam drops. The bricks around the boiler only keep in the heat that is given off from the outside of the boiler, while in the other boilers they absorb the heat direct from the fire and act on the order of the storage battery.

In regard to flues, we think a happy medium is struck in the 4-inch. A smaller flue chokes up too quickly and a larger one, unless you have a very large boiler, does not give the surface, besides being harder to clean. The cost of flues larger than 4-inch, should one or more give out, makes quite an item on the repair bill, and consequently increases the expense account.

Boilers should also be cleaned out thoroughly at least every 30 days. Some clean them as often as every 7 or 8 days, but this is a question of the water that is used, and what kind of work the boiler is subjected to. Our water is very clear and free from lime, and we find that after using our boilers all winter there is scarcely any scale on the tubes. Those of you who use city water in your boilers will probably find them half full of mud in 30 days. Others may have clear water, but it may contain lime, alkali or other substances that will scale the tubes very quickly. But even if the water contains neither mud nor lime the boiler should be cleaned at regular intervals, as scale and dirt from the pipes will find its way eventually to the boiler. If enough of this is allowed to collect you will find a hole burned in the shell some morning when the thermometer stands at about 5 below zero. I might add that we had an experience of this kind.

To conclude the boiler subject, I would say, give it plenty of grate surface, a good draught and set it at least two feet below the level of lowest return pipe, when possible. When this is not possible the water will have to be returned by a trap or steam pump. Or if it is only one or two pipes that are low the water can be run off and the higher pipes returned by gravity. I would not advise, however, running the water off, as it is a very expensive economy. For every drop of hot water that is lost an equal amount of cold water must be put in the boiler, and, of course, the more cold water the more coal.

After the boiler come the piping and method of arranging same. The three systems in use are as follows:

First, pipes running clear around the house, flow on one side and return on the other.

Second, mains at opposite ends of house, and house heated by flows under the benches.

Third, mains at same end of house and heated by overhead flow, with returns under benches.

While we have houses heated by all of the above arrangements of piping, we prefer the latter. We believe there should be at least one overhead pipe to take the chill off of any cold drafts that may come in through the ventilators or broken and imperfect fitting glass.

Of course it is not necessary to go into details, such as leaving plenty of room for expansion, air cocks at ends of returns, etc., but it never does any harm to remind ourselves of details, as an instance of our own experience will show.

Last year, when we put in a gasoline engine and pumping outfit, we knew that the building would have to be heated in cold weather to keep the engine from freezing, but were busy with building all summer and fall and neglected the heat for our shop until finally a cold snap came along. While it didn't freeze the engine jacket, the water pipes froze and burst and caused us more trouble generally than I will worry you with. The result was, of course, that we made up our minds that, just as soon as the weather moderated we would drop everything else until the shop was heated.

Now, we knew perfectly well that a 2-inch pipe would expand several inches in 400 or 500 feet, but we were in such a rush to get those pipes in that a small matter like contraction and expansion never entered our heads. We put the flow and return pipes together and covered them with sewer pipe about 2½ feet underground and proceeded to forget all our troubles. This was about the middle of January, and everything worked smoothly the balance of the winter, but when we fired up this year the fireman couldn't keep water in the boilers and our troubles began again.

We advanced theory after theory and cause after cause, only to find them all wrong, and to say we were puzzled does not express it. After a few days of this we noticed some boiling springs or geysers appearing along the hillside, and we began to think of going out of the florist business and starting a hot springs health resort. Then the thought of our steam pipe running along in the same place occurred to us and the mystery was solved.

In taking care of expansion I would advise the use of the simple swing joint made by using three or four extra ells and nipples. This can be made to take care of any amount of expansion and will work under all conditions. By all means avoid the so-called expansion joint. We have one in our 6-inch main and the only thing it has expanded is our troubles, and it has done that so thoroughly that we will never need another one. They work all right as long as everything is exactly in line, but as soon as the pipe sags the smallest fraction they will bind and cause no end of trouble and worry.

As to the amount of piping necessary, it is a question of what is to be grown, climate, exposure, temperature to be maintained, etc. For growing carnations in this climate we find that from 135 to 140 feet of radiating surface to 1,000 feet of exposure is about the right amount to maintain a night temperature of from 52 to 58 in coldest weather.

We use 1¼-inch pipe for all of our heating coils, reducing to ¾-inch where pipe enters main return for economy in valves. We do not use the single pipe system at all, believing the two pipe to be more satisfactory under all conditions. In using the single pipe system I think 100 feet is the limit for 1¼-inch pipe and 150 feet for 1½-inch. Although about this I am not sure and would refer anyone contemplating the use of this system to some one who has it in operation, or to one who is more of an authority on steam heating than I am.

In returning the water to the boiler the gravity system, where possible, is, of course, the cheapest and most simple. Where this is not possible water will have to be returned either by a steam trap or pump and receiver. Never having had any experience with steam traps, I am not in a position to discuss them, but am told by parties using them that they are very satisfactory. We use the steam pump and receiver and are very well satisfied. In using the pump we also have the advantage of being able to pump water from a pond which we intend to build just outside of our boiler shed, thus getting double service out of it.

For coal we have always used pea, nut and slack, but this year are using what is known as No. 3 washed—a small lump having all dust and dirt washed out and about the size of hazel nuts or pecans. It is more expensive than the nut and slack, but we think we can get through the season with a car or two less than of the cheaper coal and save a few dollars in the end, and that is what we are all after.

HOLLYHOCKS.

We send with this a hollyhock plant. The seed was planted about August 1. We wish to know if the plants are large enough to flower, or make any kind of show the coming season. Would it be safe to sell them for good flowering plants this spring? W. & N.

The plant received has all the soil washed from its roots. As it comes from New Jersey, it may have been lifted from a cold frame. In our climate to be in its present condition, it would need be in a 3-inch pot in a cool house. It is a fine, strong plant, healthy in every way.

If they are in a cold frame, planted out, you must, of course, leave them there until spring opens, but if they are in a cool house, in pots, you cannot do any better with them than give them a shift at the end of February, but still keep them in the coolest, lightest house.

I cannot answer the questions given me better than to say, that you do not want any better plants for next summer's flowering, than the sample sent. The best hollyhock flowers and plants I ever saw were treated as follows: The seed was sown at the end of August, the plants kept in a cold frame until the end of November. Then they were kept in a cool house during winter. In April they were in 4-inch pots; end of April were planted out in a stiff clay, with plenty of manure. By end of July the central spike was 7 feet high, and the lateral growths made a plant 5 feet across. They were grand in every way. We have not been able to duplicate this performance of late years, not because the method was not followed, but disease has attacked the young plants in the winter.

I would advise you to dust these plants with Fostite or syringe them with some copper solution. You can prevent the fungus, but if it once gets started on the plants it is difficult to subdue. Your plants are all right.

EXPRESS RATES.

As a literary production the resolutions that were printed in our Boston notes last week are entitled to commendation, but as far as any practical result is concerned they might as well have been thrown into Boston harbor as soon as adopted.

There is just one argument that will appeal forcibly to the traffic managers of the express companies and that is that the increased rate will so curtail shipments as to reduce their revenue from the traffic, or that it will prevent its expansion. The Madison and Chatham rose growers who established a wagon express of their own to New York City, took the most effective step possible.

And if a strong committee could present the matter to the next meeting of the Express Traffic Managers' Association we feel sure there would follow a reversion to the old rate.

All will remember that at one time the rate on plants was doubled. In looking into this matter at the time the writer of this, while in conversation with the traffic manager of one of the companies, learned that the increase came about in this way: One of the traffic managers happened to visit one of the New York stations when the men were loading an immense rubber tree that a certain well-known florist was shipping up the Hudson. The tree had no packing whatever—simply a tag attached to the stem. To get it into the car it had to be laid down, and it took up half the car. He asked: "What rate do you get for carrying that?" And when told single merchandise rate he raved and said it was worth seven times single rate. At the next meeting he proposed the increased rate on plants, and the matter not being carefully considered the increase was made.

The chances are that the cut flower rate was increased in some such way. The traffic manager of some company that had had numerous claims on account of freezing and delay, or had noted some huge box of light weight for its bulk, probably introduced a resolution that resulted in the increase.

Traffic managers are human and they make mistakes. They are sensible business men and are amenable to reason. See that the facts—the actual facts—reach the understanding of these men and the mistake will be corrected.

That the increased rate will lessen the number of shipments is a foregone conclusion. How much will it lessen them? All know how the shipments have increased and multiplied under the old rate. How seriously will this growth be checked by the increase? These are the matters that interest the traffic managers. And aside from these questions that of being reasonable and just has a bearing. Reach the right men and present the case in a proper light. Don't stand off at a distance and call names.

THE "S. A. F. PAEONY ASS'N."

Following we print a communication that is self-explanatory:

THE S. A. F. PAEONY ASSOCIATION.

Some mild criticism of the S. A. F. Paeony Association has recently been indulged in. Nothing vital has been evolved and it is hardly worth noticing except that some might think that, saying nothing, there was nothing to say. For the information of the public, therefore, the following points are respectfully submitted:

1. The Paeony Committee appointed by President Burton had power to add to its numbers. A committee having that right of associating with itself other members of the parent body became "an association." It is only another name for that kind of a committee, but it publishes better the breadth and depth of the committee's work than the title of committee as usually understood.

2. Any member of the S. A. F. may ask a friend to join the S. A. F. Because one is a member of the Paeony Association does not deprive him of that right. If a candidate for membership in the S. A. F. happened to be a paeony enthusiast, the Paeony Association would naturally want him in their ranks, and they would have a perfect right to ask him, and it would not cost him anything additional. Why should it? If he pays $5 the $5 goes into the treasury of the S. A. F. The Paeony Association does as any other committee does as to finances—it draws on the parent body.

3. The advantage of having the paeony interests under the wing and the control of the S. A. F. is, briefly, that it avoids the policy of a practically self-constituted dictatorship in that section of the society's field of work. The powers given to the committee to gather to itself those especially interested within the S. A. F. are ample and subject only to the proper control of the executive officers of the S. A. F. They can also gather those outside the S. A. F. by the simple process of having them become members of the S. A. F. While that helps the paeony interests, it also helps to build up and broaden the S. A. F., and it is a practical solution of that vexed problem, "closer relations," which has been troubling the society for the past ten years.

4. The work of revising the nomenclature of the paeony will be a most difficult one and will take years to accomplish. That fact was early realized, as was the fact that to do it properly facilities for growing and comparing the different varieties (there are perhaps 1,000 named varieties of the herbaceous section alone now in commerce) would have to be provided. An amateur paeony enthusiast offered to do this, but his place was a little difficult of access to visitors. While the committee was holding the matter under consideration a gratifying solution was presented to them by the Commissioners of Fairmount Park through Ogiesby Paul, the landscape gardener of the park. It is now arranged to have the collection in the park under the care of Mr. Paul. Each contributor's donation will be carefully labeled and kept separate, and all the benefits accruing from a permanent exhibition will thus be secured to the donors at a central point easy of access. This arrangement relieves the society of all expense in caring for the plants, and removes all suspicion of self-interest from the members of the association. Field notes can be secured readily and frequently by the officers and by anyone interested. Further particulars as to this and to the matter of an exhibition will be given out later as things develop.

5. In conclusion, those who are working for the S. A. F. and the paeony at present are doing so at a sacrifice of their time and means for the benefit of all, and they will gladly welcome assistance from any source whatever. They feel neither prejudice nor malice towards anyone, and they also feel that they have some right to be treated with similar consideration. Let everyone with the welfare of the S. A. F. at heart turn in and do something. There is plenty of work for all and no time for fault-finding. Life is short and there's a great deal to be done.

GEORGE C. WATSON,
Sec'y S. A. F. Paeony Association.

This explanation reads well and there might be no serious objection to the turn given the matter were it not an evident effort to head off the gentlemen who had already begun the formation of a national peony society. The committee having been charged with exceeding its powers, it will be well to refer to the wording of the motion through which the committee came into being. According to the official record this motion was made by Mr. P. O'Mara and reads as follows:

"I therefore move that the president of this society be requested to appoint, at his earliest convenience, a committee of nine on the paeony, who shall report at the next convention the latest facts they may discover in relation to the paeony."

This motion was seconded by Mr. Ward, who had previously brought to the attention of the society the fact that a national peony society was already being organized, and was adopted without dissent.

The criticism that the committee exceeded its powers certainly seems to be based upon fact. How it could assume the right to form an association under the action taken at the convention in Asheville is a mystery.

In Mr. Watson's "explanation" printed above the deprecation of a "self constituted dictatorship" is interesting in view of the high-handed and unwarranted action of the committee. To the average mind, unfamiliar with the intricacies of thought occasionally affected by Mr. Watson, the committee and the secretary of the S. A. F. have already evolved a "self-constituted dictatorship." We shall be much surprised if their action in forming an "association" is not repudiated by the membership of the S. A. F. at the Milwaukee convention.

NEW YORK.

The past week dispensed the usual changes of climate so peculiar to New York and closed its strenuous experiences with a good old-fashioned Canadian snow storm. Monday was raw and depressing and the cut flower trade was depressed in sympathy. It has been a hard week for the retail department apart from the decorations elsewhere referred to. Nevertheless the florists' windows everywhere are charmingly decorated, and in many of them the "first harbingers of spring" already are abundant —great vases of spiraea, forsythia and double flowering plum and almond with azaleas and daffodils.

The back of the excessive coal price is said to be broken. A few days now, it is said, will see the price down where every florist may rejoice, and with even average weather the possibility of calamity is past.

Reports of extensive building of new greenhouses within a radius of 50 miles of New York this spring are well founded and the coming season indicates no let-up in the expansion of floriculture within and around New York. There will be enough violets grown along the Hudson next season to perfume the continent.

John Scallen, for twenty-two years a Broadway florist, died suddenly Wednesday morning of heart failure.

The next meeting of the Brooklyn Horticultural Society will be held at the Germania Club rooms next Monday evening, February 2. This will be an especially important meeting and a full attendance is urgently requested. Every member should be present. Subscriptions continue to arrive, new members are added, handsome premiums are donated, and little remains to be done but the finishing touches, ere the society's "welcome" is complete.

An added feature is now contemplated, and that is the opportunity for a bowling tournament on the grand alleys of the Flatbush Club, only a short distance by trolley from the place of meeting. There are plenty of alleys for a dozen teams, alleys for individual bowlers, and altogether a great night can be arranged for and may be, if present "simmerings" should boil; meantime outsiders might wisely telegraph their wishes as to this to Vice-President Langjahr, Brooklyn, so that complete arrangements for the tournament may be made in time should this added recreation seem generally desired.

The dinner committee of the New York Florists' Club met at ex-President Sheridan's office last Saturday and completed its arrangements. A fine attendance is assured and a menu "fit for the gods" has been acquired. The musical and vaudevillian part of the evening will be high class, and with President Troy as toastmaster and impromptu addresses and genial companionship this is expected to be one of the dinners that you read about.

Paul Dailledouze returned last Tuesday after a very pleasant trip and has very many complimentary things to say of his visit, not only in and around Chicago, but all through the west.

The John J. Crooke Co., the extensive tinfoil house, has moved to 155-163 Avenue D, New York, from 186 Grand street, where greater facilities are enjoyed. The florist trade of this establishment shows a steady increase.

The American Institute's show of roses, carnations, fruits and vegetables opens today (Wednesday) at the Berkeley Lyceum, 44th street. For a new rose not yet in commerce a silver medal is offered. There will also be a meeting of the Farmers' Institute at which Geo. M. Powell will speak and Professors Bailey, Jordan Hall and Johnson.

The Irvington plant of the Lord & Burnham Co. is growing rapidly and its capacity will be nearly doubled this season.

Theo. E. and Frank Hahn's store at 2574 Broadway, which opened last October, is a handsome addition to the florist invasion of upper Broadway and growing rapidly. Mr. Hahn is a son of the veteran R. F. Hahn, of Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, whose plant and nursery have done business there during the past 36 years. The Broadway house uses a large amount of the output of the parent establishment.

The Siegel & Cooper conservatory will revert to the company's own management, Mr. Louis Schmutz, Jr., having decided to return to the Flatbush establishment, giving up his lease on February 1. This greenhouse on the roof has had a checkered career and several moves have been made, more or less profitable since the opening when Mr. Henry Siebrecht, Jr., was in charge.

J. H. Troy, of New Rochelle, has been doing some extensive landscaping at Aiken, S. C., and has a large force of men busy there on three different estates. On their completion the whole force will begin a similar work in Virginia, near Washington, where Mr. Troy will go the week following the club banquet.

Chas. Jackson Dawson, of Jamaica Plains, is in the city in the interests of the nursery there.

Siebrecht & Son's windows are very handsomely furnished since the completion of their city conservatory and greenhouse at 409 Fifth avenue. No facilities are equal to these in the city. Spring effects abound and the rock and mirror effects in the large conservatory are unique.

Jos. G. Leikens, assistant manager for this firm, will be married on Sunday to the daughter of Colonel Cutter of this city. Mr. Leikens is a Californian and has been with Siebrecht & Son during the last eight years. The wedding trip includes the falls and Canada.

H. H. Berger & Co. have received a shipment of valley pips from Germany that are of unusually fine quality.

Some idea of the extent of the wild smilax shipments to New York may be estimated by the statement that during the first three days of this week Mr. Kreshover's share alone was 184 cases or about five tons. Reckon what this average indicates for the decorative season.

M. A. Bowe's corner on Broadway, opposite Macy's new store, is reaping the benefit of an increased transient population, and its windows are always attractively arranged.

The Collier "Japanese dinner" Sunday was truly Japanese in all its details and the musicale was made notable by the presence of Mme. Sembrich. The reception room was turned into an immense Japanese arbor covered with blooms of the Japan quince. Japanese silk cloth, Japanese plants and trees on the tables with a miniature lake in the center in which Japanese gold fish abounded. The walls were garlanded with Japan quince and plum blossoms and asparagus, the whole effect intensified by myriads of little electric lights.

At the dinner the guests sat down to twenty tables, each one distinct in decoration, and in the center of each a Japanese basket filled with corsages and boutonnieres, a tall candle in the center of the baskets surmounted by a handsome silk Japanese shade. Wadley & Smythe were the decorators and the entire force had a busy day of it.

The greatest decoration of the week and one of the most beautiful ever seen in the country was that of Mrs. Geo. Gould's on Friday, and about which the Metropolitan press still raves. The tables were 18x9 feet with inner tables lowered—12x3 feet—on which growing orchids were banked with adiantum. The end table was in horseshoe form of similar dimensions and construction. At the end of each table rose grand specimens of Dicksonia antarctica ferns with a spread of 6 feet and 8 feet above the surface; and from each one was suspended a hundred handsome orchids in glass tubes. The tables were connected with low banks of orchids and Farleyense. Some idea of its beauty may be gathered from the fact that nearly 2,000 orchid blooms were used in the work and the choicest stock of John Young and Julius Roehrs was drawn upon.

In the great conservatory the roof and sides were covered with asparagus interspersed with cut orchids in tubes. Banks of Dicksonias and kentias were numerous. The reception room was turned into a spring prophecy by an abundance of double flowering almond, Japan quince and spiraea prunifolia from the forcing houses of Chas. Bird, of Arlington. The mantels were of forsythia while the gold room reveled in American Beauties. Competent judges claimed it to be the most unique decoration ever seen in this city and its consummation reflects great credit on Alex. McConnell, of 45th street and Fifth avenue, under whose supervision the whole charming effect was accomplished.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business brisk. More flowers are needed. Beauties are extremely scarce. Tea roses are a little more plentiful than a week ago, but there are not enough good ones to go around. Carnations are coming in more freely and sell pretty well. Valley is plentiful. Tulips are increasing in variety and improving in quality. The flower market handles a good many.

Doylestown.

It is often said that a small party is often pleasanter than a large one. This depends a good deal on circumstances and may or may not be generally true. At any rate, it was a small party and a very pleasant one that went out over the P. & R. one day last week to Doylestown. There were Treasurer Palmer and Manager Meehan, of the flower market, and Phil. They passed Graham's place on one side at Logan, and Thomas Fould's on the other at Gwynedd, and then made a most wonderful connection at Lansdale, stepped across the platform into another train and off over some fine country, past the Farm School to Doylestown, after a run of something over an hour. Dinner followed, when the party was joined by Mr. Collins, who is associated with Mr. Palmer, and on the appearance of a horse and carriage started for John F. Andre's.

Mr. Andre was at home, and after a cordial greeting led the way through his rose houses. He has 20,000 feet of glass devoted to Maids, Brides and Beauties, grown both in benches and in solid beds. The tea roses were in the pink of condition. They had evidently produced a heavy crop in December and were making strong shoots which should come in during February. The present cut was light, but the flowers were of very fine quality, not generally the case between crops. The Beauties were strong plants that had produced freely during the late summer and fall. Mr. Andre believes in early planting and early cutting. His results show that he is right. A finer lot of Brides and Maids would be hard to find anywhere. It is an old saying that "What is one man's meat is another man's poison." That we can all cut heavily from September 1 and get paying crops in the winter, as Mr. Andre does, I don't in the least believe.

The arrangements for water are most interesting. The rain that falls on the roof of the houses is carried into a cistern under one of the houses and from there it is pumped into the pipes by a steam pump worked by a small upright boiler in the shed. When rain water is not to be had another pump fills the cistern from a deep well near by. The natural grade of the ground is unusually favorable, sloping gently towards the south. The houses run rather more east of south than is usually seen.

Leaving Mr. Andre's, Mr. Palmer drove his friends through the town, past some fine public buildings and pretty houses to his own place. Here Mr. Palmer stopped before entering. "My stuff is not as fine as John's," he modestly said. Possibly not, but a great deal finer than the stuff of a great many Johns it certainly proved to be. There were four houses about 125x16 feet, filled chiefly with Brides and Maids, rather between crops, like everybody else's who has cut heavily for the holidays, but producing a lot of fine ground shoots, marked "H. H. B. brand," that promised well. There was one bench of the old favorite Perle des Jardins that has done extremely well. The plants are all on benches. A little house across the ends of two other houses was filled with paper white narcissus. A small propagating house was busily at work earning its keep.

Carnations.

Robert Craig was earning the title given him in the Review last fall the other day. James Cole, a neighboring grower, was being helped over a crisis with four tons of black diamonds to be returned when a missing car appeared. The danger was so near that I must leave the natural pun to someone else. The thought that a man's all may so easily be swept away in these coal famine times is appalling. Mr. Craig chatted a few moments about carnations. It is wonderful that the orders for rooted cuttings of two varieties, Enchantress and Adonis, should together already exceed 500,000. Both are grand sorts and the florists realize that they must have the best.

Prosperity is a variety that has come up well this season. In this section it is flowering much earlier than in the past, making it a profitable sort for the grower, as well as for the retailer.

Notes.

Paul M. Pierson, of Scarborough, was in town last week. He visited the great rose places at Wyncote, Hillside and Wyndmoor.

Fowler & Co., of Silverside, Del., are sending some nice Brides and Maids to the flower market.

Eugene Bernheimer is receiving some fine mignonette.

Henry F. Michell reports that florists are buying spring bulbs, such as gladioli, tuberoses, etc., to start inside to insure early blooming outside.

BOSTON.

Various Items.

Business, retail and wholesale, fairly good. Of course this horrible coal phantom sits hard on the producing end of the florist trade and general calamities have been narrowly averted.

Roses are more scarce than anything else just now, especially good red ones and small ones of all other kinds. Mr. Elliott's N. H. houses are producing a large amount of smaller sizes of Beauties and a limited number of fine large ones. A queer fact in connection with the small rose scarcity is that in former years even with roses plentiful many buyers preferred white tulips for funeral work to a large extent. These are quite plentiful now and sell hard indeed at low prices.

The carnation market is in a bit of a bad way. There are not enough good ones and no one wants any but the best except in connection with funeral work, and this limits the color. Our best growers have taught the customers to demand something pretty good. The worst feature is that their own instincts (and the trusts) have taught them they must have it at a low figure generally.

Violets are coming in more freely and of better quality.

Yellow bulb goods are selling surprisingly well. W. W. Tailby informs me he sold in one day 2,000 blooms, and considers 1,000 a fair morning's work. Several have them on sale in the early minutes of Park street business, but late calls rarely get filled.

H. N. Eaton has usually had a monopoly of the lily business at this date, but has sharp competition this year from several points of the compass. There are consequently quite a few coming in, but all of them seem to find a way out again.

H. A. Stevens of stall 116, who has been bringing in a good supply of best grade violets and Lawsons and Gov. Wolcott carnations, was showing all hands an interesting freak of the latter a few days since. Two stems firmly united by a sort of vegetable membrane for nearly a foot and a half when they divided and each threw a matchless interpretation of that flower!

Calendars are not so plentiful as usual but of better grade. I have seen but few indeed from the florists, but Jack Delay and Mr. Fahey gave me little gems of ones, and Henry Penn followed the good example set with a beauty of a larger type. Penn is up to date indeed and in order to keep his customers there, too, he also supplies each with a most elegant little diary. J. S. Manter.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

There has been a remarkable change in the market since the last report and stock of all kinds has shortened up considerably. The weather clerk worked off two kinds of weather on us the past week. Half of the week was cold, with snow, and the other half was quite warm. Notwithstanding all this the retailers were kept quite busy the entire week with midwinter school graduations, funeral work and wedding decorations, and this is as it should be in the midwinter season. The wholesalers say that never before at this time of the year was stock so scarce and the demand so great.

In roses, Brides and Maids were about the only varieties that were obtainable. Meteors, Perles and Gates were very scarce and only very few Beauties were to be had. It seems that all of our growers and shippers are off crop at the same time.

During the past week any old thing in the way of colored carnations was gobbled up at not lower than 3 and as high as 5 cents. The general quality was very poor. Only a few of the fancies could be called fine.

Violets again went up in price and not enough came in to supply the demand. Bulb stock sold well, owing to the scarcity of other stock and the supply was fairly good. Owing to the demand the price went up a cent on such stock as Romans, paper whites, valley and freesias. Callas, and a few Harrisii, sold at sight.

Notes.

The committee in charge of the club entertainment has prepared a fine programme, everything is in readiness, and the younger folks are looking forward to a great time. This is a departure for the club and President Dunford says these entertainments will be given from time to time. Should anyone be overlooked in sending out the invitations make it known to one of the committee, which is composed of Messrs. Fillmore, Ellis and Beneke, and the omission will be rectified.

Mrs. Ellis, wife of Frank Ellis, who has been ill for some time, is still under the doctor's care, but is improving slowly.

The club meeting, which is to be held on Thursday, February 12, will be of great importance to growers and retailers alike. It will be our annual carnation meeting, and from reports a fine lot of new carnations will be on exhibition. The 1903 introductions will be of great value to the local growers, and they should set this day aside to spend a pleasant afternoon with us. All are invited. Mr. Winter's essay on carnations for this meeting will be just the proper thing. Mr. A. Jablonsky and Mr. R. F. Tesson each have an essay, left over from last meeting, which no doubt they will have ready for this big meeting. Don't forget the date, Thursday afternoon, Feb. 12, at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Chas. T. Meyer, 19 Barclay St., New York, was in town selling bulbs, plants and nursery stock. Mr. Meyer reports an excellent trade.

Mr. George M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., spent Tuesday in town looking for help for his large plant. Mr. Kellogg's answer to the coal question was that he was well supplied.

Mr. Daniel Parsons, Jr., of New York, expert on parks, is in town and a guest of Park Commissioner Ridgley. He visited Forest park Monday and begins work of fixing the amount of bond to be required from the World's Fair Company to restore the park after the fair. A bond of $100,000 has been given, which the commissioner thinks is insufficient. A commission of park experts, of which Mr. Parsons is one, was employed to estimate the cost of restoration.

Mr. Jacob Pflweger, formerly of J. M. McCullough's Sons and Critchell's, of Cincinnati, Ohio, is now a resident of this city. Jake reports for the benefit of his Cincinnati friends that he has an eleven-pound boy at his home. Jake is a bowling expert and stands high in the city league. This is a lucky find for us to take the place of Arthur Ellison.

BUFFALO.

Express Rates.

Our Florists' Club is by no means dead, although it hibernates occasionally, and contrary to the habits of most hibernating plants and animals, it woke up recently in midwinter and gave signs of life and vigor. Last Tuesday there was a fair meeting. Sorry President Braik couldn't attend, and still more sorry to learn that he was confined to the house from the kick of one of his driving horses. With the ordinarily constructed man this would mean a broken leg or worse, but the rugged captain's physique registered only a bad bruise. May he soon be around again.

The chief business of our meeting was to take some action on the increased express rates. A committee of three was appointed to draw up a protest and a prayer for the restoration of the old rates, same to be forwarded to each company doing business here and a copy to Mr. J. N. May. A kick and a remonstrance from the length and breadth of the land should do some good, but action by our national society will doubtless have the most effect, for a committee from the S. A. F. will go to the fountain head and interview the moguls who sit around the directors' table and by a few words in the shape of a resolution impose a tax of many thousands of dollars on the florists of the country, who already have their cup of distress full to the brim.

Buffalo has five express companies doing business here, but they are all united on this raise of 50 per cent. I hope to send you, Mr. Editor, a copy of our gentle remonstrance and petition, so any words about it are superfluous. I will merely say it has more honey and less ginger about it than the Boston protest, which is strong and vigorous. I personally do not believe that this exorbitant demand of the express companies is based on either the excuse that our boxes take up a large cubic space for little weight, or that they have or do give us special service. It hits the grower worst, and next the retailer who gets shipments from the commission man, and many of the former do their own carting.

The cause of this tax on us is, I believe, first, that our goods are most perishable, which is true, and next, and here is the secret, that there is a lot of men in our business too ready to make a claim on a very slight excuse, and they have made claims and bothered the express companies and collected from them until now the companies retaliate and the poor fellows that have been willing to bear a loss occasionally will have to bear the burden that is the fault of a wolfish, small, short-sighted policy. I have no one individual in mind, but well do I realize that there are a thousand florists in the country that would just snicker to bleed the express companies, and now we are all going to be bled.

Almost all of you know that when a claim is paid by an express company (unless it be in the case of a collision or fire) the amount of the claim does not come out of the treasury of the company. Oh no, the negligence is traced down to the messenger, driver, or some other employe and he has to pay it out of his hard earnings. I have never made but one claim to an express company in twenty-seven years, although meeting with many a trivial loss, and that was six or seven years ago. Some bundles of laurel wreathing coming from New Jersey had been thrown against the steam pipes in the car and about $12 worth was just black. The messenger had to pay it, and learning that we would not accept the amount.

We heard the other day on the very best authority that one of our most respected florists within a year or so had a just claim for complaint, whether frost or heat or avoidable delay I don't know, but the company granted him the claim and paid the money—something over $60. In a few days a poor fellow walked into the store and told Mr. P. that he had worked more than a month for nothing to pay his claim against the company. Mr. P. immediately walked back and gave the man a check for the full amount. I just fancy how gladly the man walked home to his family, and I will guarantee that friend P. felt just as good as the man. Don't think for a moment that we are any better a community of florists than elsewhere—far from it—but I do repeat that in my humble opinion the express companies have been annoyed and pestered by claims that should never have been made.

The "Mild Winter."

The only feature of the business for the past week was the great scarcity of flowers during the whole time, winding up Saturday night with every scrap used up. A good demand will partly account for this, and arctic weather will account for the rest. The typical Yankee farmer of the old school, who has drunk whisky temperately, but steadily all his life, and consequently has all his faculties left to bless him, noticed that the squirrels and chipmunks were not laying up much winter fodder in the way of nuts this past fall, hence we should have a mild winter. Oh dear! So much for signs! If the old observer had watched the florists putting in their winter coal in August and September he would also have said "We shall have a mild winter," but all these old signs are not infallible. Perhaps the only true foreboding of this kind was when Mr. and Mrs. Noah and their family walked the gang plank leading into the ark. He felt in his bones, as you may say, that we were going to have a very wet season.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Rain and fog have been served us in liberal amounts with so little sunshine that we have almost forgotten what it is like. In view of these conditions it is not surprising that the cut is small and that a scarcity exists even with the present light demand. Were the demand normal it could not possibly be met with the available supplies. The scarcity now extends to practically everything except violets. Naturally prices are well sustained all through the list.

In roses quality averages poor for the season and really first-class stock is hard to get. Carnations run better as to quality, but they also show the effects of the unfavorable weather. Conditions are certainly not very cheering at this season, when demand ought to be brisk and supplies increasing.

Tulips are now arriving in quantity. Some La Reines, noted at Kennicott Bros. Co., were very fine. They are used by many in place of white carnations and white roses, the color not being very pronounced as yet.

Another strenuous week in the cut flower market, with declining values. The highest quotations above are reached only for the best and in limited quantities. The days for excessive prices on violets have passed for the season. Few indeed can hope to reach the $1 mark. The shipments continue in excess of the demand. It looks like a dull month to its close. Apart from a few decorations amongst "the 600" the retail trade has had a melancholy week of it. Tulips, narcissus and Roman hyacinths are in evidence. Carnations are abundant. Considering the coal famine, the increasing shipments of the growers are remarkable.

On Wednesday the supply of flowers was lighter and prices were steady, with carnations higher.

Although the weather has brightened up and become much milder, stock is used up clean. White has the greatest call. Pink carnations come in heavily, but are being used up on account of shortage in white. Bulbous stuff is moving well. Roses are a little scarce, but with sunshine will soon become plentiful.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

By F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind.

Sibyl—Bright cerise pink of an exceptional clear, even color. Size three inches. Form, petalage well arranged. Stems always long and stiff. Calyx always perfect. Habit, strong, vigorous growth, an early free and continuous bloomer.

Penelope—White, a good late summer and early fall variety very early and free.

Lady Bountiful—(No. 123, 1900.) Color pure glistening white; size full three to three and one-half inches. Form perfect ideal for a high-grade commercial variety. Stem twenty-four inches and over, stiff and wiry. Fragrance spicy clove. Substance of the very best, a strong feature of this variety. Habit, ideal, strong, clean, healthy, upright growth, very early free and continuous flowering; will produce more flowers to the square foot of bench space than any other white carnation.

ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

For the American Carnation Society.

PIPING.

In reply to R. F. C., I would suggest adding one line of 1½-inch pipes on the outer side of the No. 1 house and increase the overhead pipe to 2½-inch in No. 2 house, adding one line of 2-inch pipes on each side, in No. 3 house adding one line of 2-inch pipe on each side and one additional overhead pipe either of 2½-inch or 3-inch diameter. These conditions are based on his requiring a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees on coldest nights. The boiler rated for 2,100 feet of radiation should have ample capacity to heat the three houses in question. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

BALTIMORE.

Trade Conditions.

We have had for the week ending today (Jan. 26) all sorts and conditions of weather from Maylike mornings to semi-blizzard nights, with a resultant shortness of cut flowers which affects seriously nearly everyone in the trade. Roses of the better class, and notably white ones, are extremely scarce, and the same holds true of white carnations. Violets continue in very short supply, and about the only things fully up to the demand are pink carnations and freesias.

The week was an active one all around. Balls, receptions, dinners and the ever-present funeral calls, kept the stores generally on the move for material, this in many cases not being at all satisfactory to buyers. Even callas and greens are short; with bright sunshine, in a week or two—but that will be another story!

Various Notes.

Since your Baltimore notes of a week or so ago went astray in Uncle Sam's mail-bags it will not be amiss to go back far enough to speak of the annual meeting of the Florists' Exchange of this city, which was held on the 12th. The year is the only full one completed in the present quarters and showed a gratifying increase of business, entirely justifying the removal from its former contracted and inconvenient site. The old managers were re-elected and Isaac H. Moss, of Govanstown, continues president of the corporation, and Alexander Scott, its painstaking and efficient manager. The main question agitating the direction is how to secure, not only ample but regular shipments of cut stuff. The business done is always restricted by the utter inability to accept orders in the absence of any certainty as to what growers may send in.

The stockholders ordered the board of managers to give hearty and active support to the movements to secure the rescinding of the recent advance in the express companies' shipping charges. It was suggested that, bad as is this new tariff, it is not half as bad as the service. A feature which bears with additional hardship upon the smaller shippers is that, whilst the nominal advance is 50 per cent, there is some juggling by which single boxes, such as many moderate establishments ship daily, really pay about 100 per cent over former rates.

The Gardeners' club took action on the same line with the Exchange.

The fuel question is still uppermost in the minds of many growers, for, although the supply is growing more abundant there are all kinds of uncertainties and disappointments in the delivery of cars, due to the congestion of the railways. Prices are declining, but this is due in part to the milder weather of the past few days and the dealers are liable to put on the thumbscrews at the slightest provocation suggested by a declining thermometer. Your correspondent has two cars somewhere between the mines and his boiler pit, but this morning saw the last barrow of that absolutely in hand go up in smoke through the stack.

Mr. B. F. Dorrance, of Dorrancetown, Pa., was a recent visitor to our city, and spent some hours at Mr. John Cook's establishment.

The venerable John Dick, one of the old-time Philadelphia florists, whose death was recently announced, was the grandfather on the maternal side, of Robert, Jr., and John Dick Halliday, composing the well-known firm of Halliday Bros. of this city, and was personally known to and esteemed by all our older gardeners. B.

QUAKERTOWN, PA.—The coal supply here was in very bad condition up to about two weeks ago. Soft coal could be had in small quantities at $8 per 2,000 pounds, and about half the time the yards were entirely cleaned up. E. I. Rawlings, who has the largest concern in this locality, reports that he has been burning nothing but green cordwood for the last ten days and says it was all they could do to keep from freezing out, but received glad news this morning that a car of coal had been shipped him.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—The city has sold $30,000 worth of bonds, the amount to be expended in acquiring new parks.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Since last week's report the market has shown some improvement.

The scarcity of roses still exists, but not as noticeable as the week previous. The outlook for a large supply in the near future is very encouraging.

In carnations there is a sufficient supply, and they are selling better than for some time, with prices ruling a little higher.

Bulbous stock is on the increase, excepting paper white narcissus, which have been so very plentiful all season, are now scarce and find ready sale. This can also be said of Roman hyacinths. The supply of Harrisii lilies is regular. Yellow narcissus are not plentiful.

E. G. Asmus and Francois Supoit are shipping quantities of very fine white lilacs to the Cut Flower Co., which sell as well as any stock being received.

Mignonette, sweet peas, valley and violets are plentiful and meet with a steady demand.

The writer saw some very good blooms of the new yellow rose, Franz Deegen, at the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co.'s establishment. Heller Bros., of New Castle, Ind., are consigning them.

An important matter to be discussed at the meeting of the Florists' Club, next Tuesday evening, February 3, will be "Express Rates on Cut Flowers."

Bridal Muff.

Randolph & McClements decorated the First Presbyterian church for a very fashionable wedding last week. The decorations were beautiful and elaborate. In lieu of the usual bouquet of flowers, the bride carried white violets and gardenias in the form of a muff, with pendant strands of ribbon, garlanded with white violets. The maids carried muffs of Liberty roses. These muffs made quite a hit.

Various Items.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lauch, parents of Wm. Lauch, the florist, of Carrick, Pa., celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Sunday. The celebration was of an informal nature.

B. L. Elliott is cutting some very good Maids and Brides, from his Cheswick plant.

A. M. Murdoch, who has been confined to his home by illness, is at his place of business again.

Visitors: Warren B. Craw, of Lord & Burnham Co., New York; A. Ringier, of W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago.

Hoo-Hoo.

Butte, Mont.—The Montana Florists' Club has been organized with officers as follows: President, O. A. C. Oehmler; vice president, Victor Siegel; secretary, Elmer Law; treasurer, Everton Law. Twenty members of the trade were present. A committee was appointed to formulate a constitution and by-laws.

Clyde, O.—The firm of Horton & Arlin has been changed to Arlin & Arlin. They have added new houses for carnations and report business excellent.

Fairbury, Ill.—Kring Bros. have received a car-load of glass to be used in the construction of their new carnation house, which will be 30x300.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The twelfth annual meeting of the American Carnation Society will be held at Brooklyn, N. Y., Thursday and Friday, Feb. 19th and 20th. It will undoubtedly be the most important meeting ever held by the society and the exhibition of new and standard varieties of carnations will unquestionably exceed any ever held before anywhere.

The meetings will be held in the Germania Club House, 122 Schermerhorn street, and the exhibition in the Art Gallery and Association Hall, 174 Montague street, which is only a short distance from the Germania Club. Intending exhibitors should obtain a copy of the premium list, which has been issued, and may secure same by addressing the secretary, Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa. The president, Mr. C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y., is sparing no effort to make the Brooklyn convention a record breaker in every way and success in this laudable endeavor is already assured.

The society has now been incorporated and the formulating of a constitution and by-laws in accordance with changed conditions will have to be taken up at the coming convention. As this will take up some little time no regular program of papers has been prepared and the time available will be devoted to informal discussion of matters pertaining to the carnation and to the question box.

The social features at the convention have received unusual attention. In addition to strong committees appointed by the Brooklyn Horticultural Society, the host of the occasion, the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, has appointed a reception committee of thirty-five members, with Hon. Richard Young as chairman, and forty ladies from the same organization, with Mrs. John K. Creevey as chairman, will act as hostesses at the reception to the Carnation Society.

In the premium list the leading classes for standard varieties are divided into these colors: white, light pink, dark pink, scarlet, crimson, yellow variegated, white variegated, and any other color. In each of these colors prizes of $12 and $6 are offered for vases of 100 blooms; prizes of $6 and $3 for vases of 50 blooms; and prizes of $3 and $1.50 for vases of 25 blooms. Then there are general collections and a host of special prizes in addition to certificates for deserving seedlings.

Freeport, Ill.—Louis Bauscher, the florist, read a very instructive paper on the care of house plants at the women's session of the Domestic Science Association of the Stephenson County Farmers' Institute on Thursday, Jan. 22, to a very large gathering.

Lyons, Kan.—Mrs. H. B. Smith reports Christmas trade as very good and that demand has kept up well since.

CINCINNATI.

There is an active demand for all grades and kinds of flowers; but aside from numerous large funeral orders it is not anything more than usual. The funeral of Phillip Deitsch, our deceased chief of police, caused a very great demand for funeral designs and bunches. There were over one hundred designs and bunches, besides a great many loose flowers. I judge they reached something over $1,000 in value. The work was very evenly distributed among all the stores.

Roses and carnations are so scarce at present that there is very little to be said of them, other than that there is a great improvement in quality, especially in roses. Maids have much better color, and Meteors are greatly improved. Carnations, in some instances, are inclined to be a trifle soft and go to sleep easily. Luckily, though, there are but few affected.

Bulbous goods are decidedly scarce. Romans and narcissus are having a good sale, and many more could be used. There is some good valley to be had, and it sells readily. Harrisii and callas go nicely and at high prices.

Violets, which so far this season have been so scarce, are now beginning to come from many quarters. This caused a drop in the price, but they are selling out nicely.

Ernest Hiehle, formerly with McGregor Bros. Co., of Springfield, O., is about to open a retail flower department in the store of the Columbus Dry Goods Co., Columbus, O. He was in this city during the past week making arrangements for stock, etc.

F. W. Ball has just returned from a trip to St. Louis.

H. H. Ritter, of Dayton, O., and Ernest Hiehle, of Columbus, O., were callers.

MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE BRIDESMAIDS' BOUQUET.

What a number of ideas the word bouquet can bring to mind. We think of an early spring-time tramp to a neighboring wood in which we have eagerly collected a little handful of hepaticas, coltsfoot and trilliums, or we think of the summer's day when the bright sunshine was more than reflected in our bouquet of dazzling poppies, bachelor buttons and daisies. Then we think, too, of the old-fashioned birthday bouquet which was purchased from the florist that it might contain the larger variety of flowers for our study, and might lengthen the time that it might take to choose our favorite flower. Then we also remember that we florists put a white paper collar with frills around the stems of the bouquet because we believed the bouquets looked more festive thereby for such occasions, and we had read that our cousins in France had done this and that the idea had met with approval.

Then flowers were also being sent my lady, to be carried at a cotillion, and with what care they were selected and what a special favor was being shown her by doing so, and how she really appreciated the beauty of the flowers themselves. But the custom of sending bouquets grew rapidly, and then in the rivalry to send a bouquet prettier than the one before, the florist began to add ribbons which became wider and longer and as the florist's ability to decorate his bouquets increased so did the sending of them become a matter of course and the young lady began to believe that these bouquets were a necessary gracing touch of her toilet.

And so the evolution has slowly come about that there are many ideas as regards the way flowers are to be arranged for wearing and carrying. The debutante of today is busy planning ways in which her social prestige will be won, and as one index of her popularity is the number of flowers which she receives, she naturally learns much about flowers and how they are arranged. At her first reception she receives many beautiful bouquets and realizes this too. She knows just how many she received, and remembers distinctly that immense bouquet of violets tied with that gorgeous velvet ribbon. As a part of her social position at such a time, these bouquets become "creations" to her and the intrinsic beauty of individual kinds of flowers is forgotten. These creations were made by the florist from the same roses that he has used for such purposes for several years past and still the bouquet to her seemed something entirely new. She saw style in it, and through all this would have detected a cheap grade of rose or instantly would have realized if the violets were fragrant or not.

Again we have these same ideas governing largely the likes and dislikes of the bridal party which is to carry bouquets. They know immediately if the flowers they are to carry are of the first quality or not, but think it also of the utmost importance that these flowers are arranged in the approved style of a leading florist. It is in the arranging of these bouquets that one florist distinguishes himself from others. Assuming that in certain kinds of flowers many florists can get equally good stock, the chance for distinction remains only to be shown in the making of the bouquet.

We begin to see that the real sentiment in flowers is often temporarily forgotten. The bridesmaids carry bouquets and not flowers. The bouquets have become the custom and are necessary. The bouquets must be carefully chosen as regards color and make up, and the matching of ribbons is only one of the details. How different is the bridesmaid's bouquet from the one picked in grassy hollows, and how natural the difference has come about. New fancies reign today, newer ones will be born tomorrow.

And so it is that we have rather distinct notions of different kinds of bouquets. Our notions are not those of specific differences, but those of general ideas. We know what bouquets are used at various occasions, but to tell exactly where the bride's bouquet ends and where the bridesmaid's begins, so to speak, is next to impossible. It would be just as difficult a task to draw a line through the spectrum distinctly separating the colors. The bride's bouquet is generally white, and so are the bridesmaids' bouquets, although they more generally are of a color. The shape of the bride's bouquet is a rather definite one and was commented upon at another time, and still bridesmaids' bouquets are often just like them, though more frequently they are quite distinct in their appearance.

However, the bridesmaids' bouquets are often distinctive and original in their make up because the florist has been given some latitude in their making. For example the carrying of flowers over the arm has led to the making of a distinct kind of bridesmaids' bouquet. It has been the custom to make these bouquets loose and graceful as may be noticed from the accompanying illustrations. Instead of massing the flowers, they have been arranged so that it appears that they have been loosely gathered together and the only thing that remains is to carry them over the arm. The idea is a pretty one, but if the graceful bouquet becomes a "bunch" of tightly wound flowers, then the effect is pitiful.

This style of bouquet has made it necessary to use the longer stemmed flowers, such as roses and the more graceful chrysanthemums. The Bridesmaid rose has been much used for this purpose and justly. It is one of the prettiest roses for bouquets that we have, for it is graceful, the color is good and it has a beautiful foliage. The flowers are of good size and make a good showing. In figure 1 such a bouquet is shown, only that the Madame Chatenay rose has been used instead. This new rose promises to win admirers, for the beauty of its out-curved petals is very pleasing. It brings to mind the far-famed La France of earlier days.

In figures 2 and 3 the gracefulness of the arrangements are to be commended. It is grace in these bouquets that is highly essential and the free and graceful placing of the flowers is a matter for study. It seems, however, that if the adiantum fern had been used a little more judiciously the effect would have been better. The point to be remembered in these bouquets is to have plenty of flowers and to make them show. At times the rose hidden by a little adiantum is very pretty, but in bouquets which are to be carried or worn, the color tone must not be lowered with the introduction of dark colors such as green.

In figure 4 we have an example of what is to be avoided. The massing of flowers in the round shaped bouquets does very well, but in the larger bouquets where the shape is not a very definite one, the massing of flowers is apt to produce a heavy shapeless mass. Some bouquets are made which are a burden to carry and not a pleasure as it should be.

Many bridesmaids' bouquets are made which are similar in shape to that of the bride's, and the uniformity in the shape of bouquets in a bridal party is a good one. Variety and distinction in these cases is sufficiently brought out in the difference of the flowers used and in the color. Sometimes all the bouquets are made in white, the bridesmaids' bouquets being made of daisies for example, and the effect is very pleasing. Then there are bridesmaids' bouquets which are more or less showy. They may be made of little hats of a delicate straw trimmed with flowers and carried suspended by ribbons. These little hats are trimmed by various flowers or combinations of them, and when the matter is given some thought real catching arrangements are produced. Or a similar treating of flexible baskets with ribbons and flowers is the carrying out of this same idea in a little different manner. These oddities would soon become tiresome were they freely introduced and therefore such things should not be urged too freely. Novelty must not be obtained in the florist business by sacrificing the use of flowers. Let us make our customers love them as we do ourselves and then they will want them doubly, first, because they will learn to see the calyx and corolla, and second, because custom requires that they should have them to grace certain occasions.

Seasonable Hints.

Those who have not finished their propagating should proceed with it at once, as it is much easier to control the conditions in a propagating house now than it will be a few weeks hence. This will also allow a longer season in which to get the stock into condition for planting.

Stock propagated early should soon be fit for a shift from 2-inch to 2½-inch pots. To keep these in a steady growing condition until planting time one-half inch of a shift is sufficient at each repotting; giving too large a shift has a tendency to cause too rank a growth, which does not ripen so quickly or form such stocky plants. Repotting should be done as soon as the young growth is ripe. This is easy to detect by the color of the young leaves changing from red to green and also by the roots assuming a nutty brown color. This repotting should be practiced after each successive growth until the plants are ready to bench. The different appearance of plants so handled from those overpotted or neglected is easily distinguished and the results when planted will amply compensate for the extra labor.

The young stock should have plenty of bench room, as overcrowding is frequently the cause of their losing the bottom foliage, and will be especially liable to do so in a season like the present, when from lack of sunshine they will be slow in drying out. Those who have no regular stock house should select the sunniest and most airy bench in a house, with a temperature of 56 degrees.

The care of the young stock should never be intrusted to any but the most careful and competent help, as any carelessness or neglect in watering, ventilating, etc., is ruinous and once they get into a stunted condition it requires a long time of hard work to get them back into a vigorous condition.

During this dull weather they should get no more water than is absolutely necessary. Many of the pots, owing to their position on the bench, proximity to heat, or being directly under the ventilators, will dry out much quicker than others, and should have their wants attended to more frequently.

Beauties and Meteors will require frequent syringings to keep off red spider, as, owing to the peculiar shape of the leaves and their closeness to the pot it is difficult to get at them with effect. If the weather should be warm and bright syringing should be done twice daily, in the morning and early in the afternoon, so that the foliage may be dry before night.

Greenfly will also give some trouble, and as it is difficult to get the fumes of tobacco to settle among the lower leaves, it is best to perform this operation in the morning when the glass is cool and the soil in the pots comparatively dry and evaporation at a minimum.

A strict watch should be kept for the first signs of mildew. Keeping the pipes painted is a good preventive, and on bright days a dusting over the foliage will help to ward it off. Ribes.

CASH RETURNS.

What should be the gross returns in cash, at average wholesale prices, from a three-quarter span house 22x150 planted to roses? W. J. W.

A house of 22x150 feet planted to roses (Brides and Bridesmaids) and cropped from September until May following should at the very least approximate one dollar per square foot of space covered, and can by skillful handling be made to produce much more.

A house of this size can be made to produce from 26,000 to 27,000 blooms of all grades, but as wholesale prices vary very much in different sections of the country, the gross receipts will have to be figured out according to locality. Ribes.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Topping the Young Plants.

Those cuttings that you potted or planted on the bench or in flats will begin to shoot up now pretty soon and you will have to begin topping them, as they need it in order to form shapely plants. There is a great difference in opinion as to the proper time of topping the young plants and I would say that under different conditions the proper time would differ as well, and also different varieties need to be treated differently. Take, for instance, Mrs. Joost. It is seldom that this variety needs to be topped more than once before well into the summer, as every eye will break and a bushy plant is its natural form of growth. On the other hand take White Cloud and you will find the joints are longer and instead of breaking from every eye it will break usually only from the two at the end of the shoot and if there are several eyes between these and the main branch when the plant makes more growth it will become top heavy and be inclined to lie on one side. Such varieties should be topped every time a couple of joints are made on a shoot. This should be begun when the plants are small, because then you will not need to cut off and waste so much growth later. Of these varieties you want a short stubby plant that is full of shoots and eyes, ready to run up into flower at housing time. Then you will not need to do any trimming and pruning to get them to stand up straight.

I started to tell you what is the proper time to top and that is where growers differ. Some take out only the very heart just as soon as the young plant has about a dozen leaves, while others say you should see a bud before you take off the top. Between the two I believe the latter is most reasonable, for the first topping is usually done when the days are yet short and often dark, but I think both go just a little to the extreme. We usually top the young plants when they begin to run up and we can see the stem between the leaves, and we find that it works well. We do not cut away so much growth which has taken time to develop, in which time the plant might have pushed out a crop of young shoots, and at the same time we are sure that the young plant has gotten a good start and has enough strength to make good strong breaks. When the young plants are growing in a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees the growth is apt to be pretty well matured right along and there is not so much danger of weak breaks as there would be in a higher temperature.

And now I want to warn you against one thing that I believe causes a good many failures with new varieties every year. Some growers will buy 100 rooted cuttings of a high priced novelty when in reality they want 200 for next season's planting. When the young plants come they pot them into a rich light soil and set them in a warm house, where they will quickly run up and produce a cutting by the middle of March or even earlier. The poor young plants are then cut down close to the soil, and when they come out weak and in many cases diseased the grower blames the variety and the man who sent it out. Now there are some cases when you can get an extra cutting from some of these young plants without injuring the plants, but they are seldom as good as the original cutting because by the time the young plant runs up high enough to give a fair sized cutting it will already contain the bud which would appear soon after. So this cutting is no better than a flowering shoot on the old plant which had begun to run up toward a bud, and you would not think of taking that for cuttings.

If you get your cuttings early and give them a good light place they will need their first topping when it is yet early enough to root these cuttings, and sometimes you may be able to get a good percentage of fair plants out of them, but always keep in mind that you should not cut the first cutting down lower than you would if you were only topping them. In short, do nothing to weaken your main stock, because 100 good young plants are worth more than three times that many weak ones, and more satisfactory to the grower.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Unrooted Cuttings.

I was pleased to read in the Jan. 24 issue of a contemporary, an article on the above subject viewed chiefly from the seller's standpoint, although some reference was made to buyers who, it is assumed, are the growers and for whose benefit I pen these weekly notes. Another pleasure was accorded me by reading notes published by another contemporary (same date) setting forth the advantages gained by the grower in availing himself of this method.

It is perhaps unnecessary for me to state that I agree with the notes as published by contemporary number two, having always been a strong advocate of the purchase of unrooted cuttings for reasons given in my notes of Nov. 20, 1902. The statement that there is no doubt that a cutting will ship better rooted than when fresh from the plant, is not, as far as can be seen, supported by any proofs or relation of experience; while for several years the unrooted method has shown itself, not only in my experience, but with others to whom I have shipped cuttings, to be apparently a step in the right direction, even if diverging from a beaten path.

If, as intimated, that it may be well for the buyer to obtain them in this way, it seems natural that it also may be well to give the method a trial, then if the grower sees any advantage, both buyer and seller may be benefited. Giving the buyer all the benefit possible is capital well invested, for without him the seller cannot exist.

The remarks of our worthy secretary in his notes (Jan. 24) regarding the packing of cuttings for shipment are timely words in connection with this subject, as herein lies the degree of success in handling cuttings, rooted or unrooted, although I believe rooted cuttings are injured more by low temperature than unrooted ones, from the fact that they are softer and the delicate roots very susceptible to cold.

Our experience this year with unrooted cuttings of Enchantress may be in order. Shipment was made from Joliet Jan. 6, arriving here Jan. 9; when taken from sand to be potted Jan. 30, 98½ per cent were heavily rooted. This may be in the man and not in the method, but I cannot accept any such theory.

Any method employed in the production of any article of commerce must needs have common sense back of it, else it fails of good results, and I believe all growers posses it, for witness the rapid strides made even in the past five years. With all my experience with the unrooted method and my natural inclination to be positive in my statements, I refrain from taking any decided stand in so far as others are concerned, but prefer that new departures or methods should be proven or disproven by trial to be a step forward.

The above is written, not in any spirit of criticism, but in support of my claim as to the advantages of my system, it being my aim, as well as duty, to submit readers of THE REVIEW with results of actual experience. Now that we have a case in which "the doctors do not agree," perhaps a topic for the question box at the convention presents itself.

The notes of our secretary (Jan. 24) and reference to catalogues in general seem to show the risk taken by purchasers, is and has been a case of must, so I do not see that we are very apt to be up against anything new in the question of loss in transit, rooted or unrooted.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

BEST WHITE CARNATION.

Which is the best white carnation to grow for all purposes where one has only a small amount of glass? I will bench about 2,000 plants in all, and want one-third of them white. Flora Hill is very good late in the season; Mary Wood does not bloom enough with me. I cannot afford to experiment with the new high priced plants.

H. M. M.

If I were limited to one white variety of carnation, from among all the standard varieties, I would choose Flora Hill, and next to that I would take Queen Louise. If you begin with healthy cuttings of Flora Hill and house good plants by Aug. 20th you should begin to cut good blooms by Oct. 1st, or earlier, even. Give it a temperature of 55 degrees during the winter months and it will give you a good lot of fine blooms on fair stems all winter and few bursted calyxes. Do not give it an over rich soil and do not feed it until toward spring.

Much the same treatment will suit Queen Louise, except that it does not need so high a temperature: 50 to 52 degrees will suit that variety very well.

We grow Flora Hill for summer, spring and fall here and White Cloud and Lorna for mid-winter.

A. F. J. Baur.

CARNATION RETURNS.

What should be the gross returns in cash, at average wholesale prices, from a three-quarter span house, 22x150 feet, planted to carnations? W. J. W.

Yours is a question that is pretty hard to answer in a satisfactory manner. The first answer that came to my mind was, "that depends on the grower." Then again it will depend largely on the varieties you plant, the grade of blooms you will produce and in what market you will dispose of the blooms. Also, if you expect to sell the blooms only, or if you can find sale for what cuttings you can make.

Your house will likely contain three 5-foot benches and each bench will hold about 1,100 plants, making a total of 3,300 plants for the house. A first-class variety handled by a good grower will bring about 50 cents per plant during the season from blooms and I feel satisfied that there are many growers in this country who could cut $1,500 out of such a house, but to do that every plant will have to be a specimen, and in a large majority of cases you will find a few weak spots in the benches here and there. Then again every place has a few varieties that do not sell as well as others, and you get hold of a variety every now and then that will not do well under your treatment. In fact, a thousand and one little things may turn up that will help to bring down the gross earnings of your house. I don't believe any grower in this country can say that he gets an average of 50 cents from every plant that he plants in his houses, although he may average much more from a few of his benches. I know it is so with us.

If W. J. W. can average 40 cents per plant from all that he plants on his benches he will have no room for complaint. That would give him about $1,300 from such a house. By being very careful in selecting his varieties and giving them a very high grade of culture he can of course raise this some. I may also add that there are many growers who would not average more than $1,000 from such a house, and they would be pretty fair growers, too.

Our method is not to set a certain sum for each house to reach, but our aim is to make each house earn just as much as we can make it earn, taking into consideration the varieties it contains, the time of planting and in fact everything that might increase or lessen the total earnings of the house.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Geraniums.

This is an excellent time to increase that most excellent bedding plant, the zonal geranium. We shift the September and October struck plants as soon after New Year's as we can. They were rooted in 2-inch and are now in 3-inch. They are now rooted and many of them will give you a cutting, which makes a good bedding plant and induces the older plant to branch out and make the strong bedding plant that you want. Don't, however, murder the plant to get a cutting. If the 3-inch pot plant will not give you a cutting without cutting it down almost to the soil, just nip out the top and be satisfied. Pot these cuttings in 2½-inch pots firmly. Water thoroughly when first potted and afterwards only when dry, and you will not lose 5 per cent. A light bench and 50 degrees at night is what they want, and it must be a very bright day if any shade is needed, and that only the first week after being taken off. Cuttings of the ivy geraniums put in the sand now will make the best of plants if grown right along. The ivy section, the silver leaf tricolor and the bronze all like a higher temperature than the zonal; 50 degrees at night will not be too high, while the zonals will be thrifty at 5 degrees less.

Gloxinias.

Some of our neighbors start these tubers now, so that they have flowering plants in May. I always considered they were a summer plant, filling up at a time when there were few flowering plants to be had in pots suitable for the window. My ideas may be old-fashioned. If they sell in May and June, by all means grow them for that time. We have never had better success with them than when started in 3-inch pots, and when the leaves have about spread to the edge of the pots and they have made some roots, shift them into the flowering pots—a 5 or 6-inch. They are most difficult plants to handle when the leaves are of any size. There is no pliability to them; they won't bend, but break. Leaf mold, at least a third, is the greatest help to them.

The gloxinias are plants that really require a gardener's attention. You can't splash over them with a hose. Perhaps on a bright morning you can be a little free with the water, for any moisture will quickly dry, but in dull weather each plant should be looked at and watered if it needs it; if not, passed over and attended to the next day, and wet the leaves as little as possible. The gloxinia is one of those plants that would repay the correct method of shading. That is, shade when the sun is bright, and give no shade on a dull day. But that is not important for the next two months, as the small plants are easily shaded if necessary. It is in the summer time when heavily shaded houses and no fire to dry up the atmosphere on rainy, dull days that the rust appears.

Lemon Verbenas and Lantanas.

Two plants that are in good demand in the spring for the garden are the lemon verbena (aloysia) and the lantana. I won't forget a bed of the latter at the Pan-American. It was L. Craigii, exhibited by Henry A. Dreer. Plants should have been grown in pots last summer and resting (but not dust dry) beneath a bench. They can be brought up to the light and started growing in a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. Shorten back the shoots and they will soon give you plenty of cuttings. The lemon verbena should be grown in the same way. A few plants in pots from last summer should be resting. Shake off most of the earth, repot and shorten back the weak shoots and start growing. They soon give all the cuttings you need, and in the ordinary cutting bed they root as easily and surely as a coleus; only don't let them wilt from sun or dryness.

Propagation.

Speaking of dryness of the cutting bed, there are thousands of florists doing business now, who knew little about a propagating bed when Peter Henderson published his book "Practical Floriculture." Many improved methods have been adopted since 1868 and the business has undergone a great change, but for all that the chapter on propagation is still sound, and when I first read it, thirty-five years ago, it was a revelation and an instructor of the greatest benefit. Brought up in the English orthodox school of gardening, or a small portion of it, we had seen bell glasses used. Even such a simple thing as the common verbenas were propagated by putting them into a 6-inch pot of sand; then the pot was plunged into tan bark, or some material that had heat; then a bell glass went over the pot, and every morning, or perhaps oftener, it was lifted off and the inside wiped dry. Just fancy such a performance! I will always have a great regard for Mr. Henderson's book, for it cleared away (at least with me) a lot of fog and fuss and darkness, and made propagating by cuttings the simplest and surest of operations. I dreamed one night that I rooted smilax in the sand and one day told somebody that I did root it. I told it so often that I began to believe it myself. You will notice that when you repeat a yarn of that sort often that it begins to sound at last like the truth. But future attempts on the smilax were failures.

Fungus of the Cutting Bed.

The very great majority of our plants root easily in sand, and for the great majority of things the sand at 65 degrees and the temperature of the house as near 50 degrees as you can keep it will be found ideal. A draught over the cutting is not good, yet there should never be a close, stagnant atmosphere. If the house seldom goes over 55 degrees, you will not be troubled with what Mr. Henderson called the "fungus of the cutting bed," but if the sand is warm and the house is allowed to go up to 65 or 70 degrees it will make its appearance. You can stand over the cutting bed, look down over the sand and discern nothing wrong, but stoop and look over the surface and you will quickly see the minute, film-like growths that from a small speck will cover a foot square of surface in twenty-four hours, and when once in the bed it is almost impossible to get rid of it.

Bridesmaid's Bouquet. Fig 4.

I was surprised on visiting some large and successful carnation growers last winter to find they considered it desirable to, and did, change the sand for every batch of cuttings. This I don't believe is at all necessary and must in some localities be a considerable expense. To prevent any fungus we always water the sand with a copper solution before we put in a batch of cuttings, and at the strength we use it would do no harm to even water the cuttings. At least I have never seen any the worse for it. Yet it is not necessary if you will water the sand before you put in the cuttings. The formula we use is one pound of sulphate of copper dissolved in two quarts of ammonia. When entirely dissolved put away in a stone jar and keep corked. One-half pint of this in twenty-five gallons of water will keep away any fungus. Incidentally I might mention that a tub of this solution is always standing near the bench where we propagate the carnations. When they are ready to go into the sand we just dip them for a moment into this solution. Perhaps the dreaded rust would have largely disappeared even if we had not done this, yet I cannot help believe that it has greatly helped the exit of that pest.

Watering.

To return to the cutting bed, the old bell glass kept the cuttings from wilting, because it was air tight and there was some moisture arising from the sand, but they were very sparingly watered. Nowadays we keep them from wilting by keeping the sand saturated. How much or how often to water the cutting bed is a question that should be no problem to the gardener. The weather will have something to do with it, and certainly more water is needed in April than in December and January. Plants of the texture of geraniums and begonias want only to be kept moist and may not need watering oftener than once in five or six days, while coleus, verbenas, tea roses, chrysanthemums and many others should be watered every day. And as the season advances more water is needed. I can remember not so long ago when we put up a mild hotbed to root chrysanthemums and poinsettias in June and July, we found out, or somebody told us, that the cutting bed was all right if we only shaded and watered enough; and sure enough, if you will water two or three times a day, you can root these cuttings in the hottest days of July and August. In making a propagating bed some years ago, after putting on the slates we ran cement between the cracks where they met, making it almost water tight. That was how not to do it. You must let the water pass away. Perhaps as good a propagating bed as any I have seen is at Mr. John Dunlop's, in Toronto. He has two or three steam pipes beneath the bench with valves so that he can use one or more. The bench is roofing slate and on the slate a common brick. From a steam pipe the slate would be too hot, but modified by passing through the brick it is just right.

Carnations.

Mr. Baur will excuse me touching on carnations. I did not mean to do it, but now I have put my foot in it; before I pull it out I will just add that the sand at 65 degrees is rather warm for carnations, and no bottom heat at all is rather slow. My ideal for carnations is 58 to 60 degrees in the sand and 50 degrees on top. The very plant I was speaking of, the lemon verbena, is one of those that want to be kept soaked.

GERANIUMS AND FUCHSIAS.

H. M. K. sends us some leaves of geraniums and fuchsias, both of which look troubled with the same disease. H. M. K. says the greenhouse is very cool at night, often below 40 degrees, and about 60 degrees in the day time. "The greenhouse contains all sorts of plants. The leaves first turn like samples sent, then yellow, and drop off."

I will first say that long before they get so unsightly as to drop off they should be pulled off. I cannot name the disease, but have seen it on geraniums. It is a bacteria of some sort destroying the tissue of the leaf. As the cure or remedy for this unhealthy state of things was the object of the inquiry, I will begin by saying that I don't know how you are managing your greenhouse. Below 40 degrees at night and 60 degrees in the day time, perhaps without ventilation, is an altogether wrong condition. Perhaps you water towards evening and let the cool night come on with the foliage wet. Perhaps your plants are dreadfully crowded, with the object of getting a great number on the benches. If so, you will have only a large quantity of rubbish not worth half the quantity of good, healthy plants.

A temperature of 40 degrees at night will winter geraniums very well, but not young, growing fuchsias. If 40 degrees at night is the best you can do, then whenever your house is 55 in the day time give ventilation. Give all the plants the proper space to have air and light between them. Never water the plants, even on sunny days, after 11 a. m., and dull days don't water at all. Plants in as low a temperature as you have can make but little growth and therefore need but little water. Pick off every leaf that is the slightest bit affected, and then dust them with flour of sulphur. Mix some sulphur with linseed oil until it is about like thick paint and paint the hottest pipe in your heating system—not all the pipe, say a length of 1 foot every 6 feet. But, above all, give air, and keep the house dry until you can be sure of a higher night temperature.

RECEIPTS OF A GREENHOUSE.

W. J. W. asks: "What should be the gross return in cash from a house, 22x150 feet, devoted to bedding stock, mums, etc.?"

Mathematics is my weak point. I would rather write an essay on the domestic trials of the rattlesnake than do a sum in long division. The above is not mathematics, yet it is most difficult to answer with any definite sum, and an approximate possibility only can be given. There are many considerations. Is this the only house you have, or is it filled up with stock from other houses from time to time? Besides mums, what do you grow? A house this size one-half filled with bedding plants in the fall would want two or three more houses to receive the overflow towards spring if they were well managed. You could grow some chrysanthemums, then fill up with lilies for Easter, some carnations to be thrown out after Easter to make room for cannas, coleus, geraniums, etc. Or maybe you grow several hundred azaleas and sell them at Easter. That would add largely to your gross receipts, but there would be a corresponding outlay for the azalea plants. The more and better one crop succeeds another, and the more of what you might call intensive culture you follow the more profitable will be the house, although the expense of labor will be much greater than if used for just one crop.

Presuming you begin in the fall cutting mums and follow on with flowering plants until Easter, always of course giving your bedding plants room and attention, and that after Easter until end of May your benches are filled with the shifted, spread out and propagated bedding plants, then I would say you would be doing very well if your benches showed gross sales of $1 per square foot of bench, and taking out 6 feet for three paths will leave you 2,400 feet of bench. Some things will return more than others. Some things will be in great demand, but your stock of them is short; what you are rather long on the people are a little tired of, and so on; but the above figures are about reasonable.

I will say without, I hope, any egotism that when I was first forced into business on my own hook, in 1876, by my employer saying, "William, you will have to rent my greenhouses." I did for the first few years make every foot of bench return much more than $1, but those were the days when I handled every plant myself, watered them, sat up myself to watch the temperature, got the fuel, if there was a foot of empty space, made cuttings, and washed pots by the brilliant light of a kerosene lamp. I did not go hunting or to conventions, read the Gardeners' Monthly in two minutes and fifteen seconds, had no idea that I would ever attempt to give my brother florists a hint, and when I was not holding the baby read Darwin, Huxley and Spencer, and am all the better for it.

ANTIRRHINUM.

Please tell me how to grow the antirrhinum or snap dragon. Do you grow them to single stem; how and what do you stake them with; how far apart do you plant them; what do you fertilize with; and what temperature do you keep? Southern Florist.

My experience in growing these is not very extensive, but I have noticed the method pursued on some fine benches of them. The antirrhinum we force is a variety of A. major and is a perennial. A very fine strain can be grown along by cuttings taken from the plants on the bench before you throw them out—say just after Easter. Don't attempt to grow the plants the second year. Either seedlings or young propagated plants should be planted every season. Sow the seed end of April, grow along in flats, and plant on benches early in August. They sometimes are planted 5 or 6 inches apart and grow to one single spike. We do not think this as desirable for the general florist as planting them 12 inches apart, and by stopping the young plants once or twice, getting five or six nice, moderate sized spikes.

A carnation house temperature suits it first-class. It should have 6 inches of soil, for it makes lots of roots. Any good loam with a fifth or sixth of stable manure will grow them well, but you can add a 5-inch pot of bone flour to every bushel of soil. The method of tying carnations now adopted by so many growers will do admirably for the snap dragons. This is a wire running the length of the bench between the rows of plants and a string running across the bench between the plants. You can, however, do very well with a slight stake and string or raffia encircling the plant 5 or 6 inches from the bench, as the antirrhinum is by no means a "floppy" plant. William Scott.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

R. R. Rates to the Convention.

The Central Passenger Association, the Trunk Line and New England Passenger Associations, have all made a rate of one and one-third fares for the round trip, on the certificate plan, to the coming convention of the American Carnation Society at Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 19 and 20. Be sure to get a certificate when you buy your ticket.

This includes the southern half of Michigan, all but a small portion of the northern part of Illinois, the whole of the states of Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland, Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut; also the northern half of West Virginia and Virginia and that portion of Canada south of Toronto.

This plan lessens the expense of attendance considerably and it is earnestly requested that all members buy their tickets on this plan. Parties who intend becoming members at the meeting can buy these tickets but if they do not join at the meeting they will not be able to get the return rate.

Albert M. Herr, Sec'y.

TORONTO.

Trade the past week has improved considerably from what it was during the first two weeks of the month, and this may be more noticeable as the supply has shortened, and it is at present, as a local dealer put it, "being chopped off at both ends."

Roses have been, and continue to be very scarce. The supply of carnations is fair and bulb stock is coming in in considerable quantities to relieve the strain.

The scarcity of coal is becoming more and more felt by the growers, and those who last fall considered they had enough to carry them through are commencing to feel anxious, especially some of the larger concerns.

It is at present a matter of considerable dispute between the retailer and the grower as to who is making the money this winter. The grower says that he is paying so much more for coal that the slight advance in price is no consideration. The retailer says he has to pay so much more for the stuff, and can get no more for it, that he is out. However, we will soon be able to ignore the coal man and sing "In the Good Old Summer Time."

W. J. Lawrence's establishment in North Toronto is in very good shape at present, although it is considerably off crop, yet the prospects are good. He cut his first daffodils January 26, and they were very good, both in stem and flower. Princeps have been in for a considerable time.

Toronto Floral Co., which has lately put in a forcing bench for valley, is now cutting some very good stuff.

Violet day, January 22, which has been inaugurated by the Daughters of the Empire to be kept in memory of our late beloved queen, made a big run on violets, as it was a nice day and flowers were worn extensively on the street.

We are informed, on the side, that the new Gardeners' and Florists' union, wishing to test its strength, took a fall out of one of the local employers and after the smoke had cleared away it was difficult to say just what had happened, but I guess we will not hear much more of the union. D. J.

A PRIVATE PLACE.

The accompanying engravings give some glimpses of the private greenhouses of Mr. H. G. Selfridge, Lake Geneva, Wis., where Mr. C. Gebhardt is gardener.

The houses contain a total of 8,000 square feet of glass and are of course devoted solely to the growing of plants and flowers for private use. One picture gives a good general view of the houses, with the gardener's cottage in the background.

The rose house is 24x100 and contains a fine assortment of all the leading varieties, and evidently all in the best of condition. The gardener on a place of this sort has to meet and solve many problems of a character similar to those that confront the small grower who is unable to devote a full house to each variety. The roses seen in the picture were housed June 1st and the photograph was taken last fall.

The chrysanthemums are flowered in the carnation house, shown in another picture, and as will be seen very satisfactory results are obtained.

into three sections by glass partitions. One section is devoted to East Indian species, another to Brazilian and the third to Mexican. Running through the center of the house is a cement water tank three feet high, seven feet wide and 85 feet long. Into this tank is collected all the rain that falls on the range of glass, and in addition to the tank there is a large cistern for storage. To the latter a large force pump is attached and the orchids are syringed with rain water only. The water in the tank in the house maintains the atmospheric moisture.

The walks are of cement and have depressions that will hold water. And alongside of the walk is an inch water pipe perforated every six inches. By turning a valve the entire length of the walk and under the side benches is moistened in a few minutes. The picture shows one side of the East Indian house and hardly does the subject justice.

Mr. Selfridge is a great lover of orchids and although he started to collect only about a year ago he now has one of the finest collections in the west. He has taken a very warm interest in the exhibitions of the Horticultural Society of Chicago and though a very busy man, has given of his time as well as his influence, financially and socially, to insure their success.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The quantity of flowers coming in town is increasing steadily. All roses, excepting American Beauties, are more plentiful than a week ago. White carnations continue extremely scarce, but colored sorts are in fair supply. Double violets and lily of the valley are almost a drug on the market, there being a good supply of both with no positive demand. Single violets sell better than double, especially the finer grade.

Bulbous flowers are coming in freely and prove a great addition to the varieties. Tulips are fine and in great demand. Daffodils, both single and double, can be had in quantity from both Leo Niessen and W. K. Harris. The former is also receiving the first Narcissus poeticus seen in this city this season. Campernelles and paper whites are still in their glory, but move rather slowly. Freesia is plentiful and the Giant strain very fine. S. S. Pennock has Easter lilies in quantity this week; they must be money makers at market rates. Both E. Bernheimer and Leo Niessen are receiving forget-me-nots. Greens are quite scarce, especially asparagus in bunches, which are virtually 50 per cent higher than a few weeks ago.

The Business Outlook.

It is gratifying to learn that good judges of the business conditions among florists feel confident that this season will by no means prove a disastrous one. They think that the worst of the coal famine is over, barring a possible blizzard, and that from now on coal can be had at fair prices. They say that had this coal famine come at a time of business depression the result would have been disastrous to many, but that business is now so good that the extra expense will mean decreased profits to most of the florists, but actual loss to very few.

Farmers' Institute.

A Farmers' Institue meeting for Philadelphia county under the auspices of the State Board of Agriculture, assisted by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and our Florists' Club, will be held in Horticultural Hall, Broad and Spruce streets, on Wednesday, February 11, from 2 until 10 p. m. There will be a number of interesting addresses on a variety of topics by well known speakers. The question box will be a feature of the meeting. All persons interested are cordially invited to be present.

In this connection it is of interest that Bulletin No. 97, issued by the State Board of Agriculture, is devoted to "The Management of Greenhouses," by Edwin Lonsdale. The subject is treated especially for the benefit of the farmer and truck-gardener, but is also of interest to every florist.

Notes.

There was a lively debate on the express rate resolutions submitted at the Florists' Club meeting Tuesday evening. Mr. Elliott, of Brighton, presented an outline of the Boston plan, which was adopted, the resolutions being referred back to the committee with instructions to see the express company managers personally and present a petition with many signatures asking former rate.

The testimonial given to David Rust by his fellow members in the Horticultural Society was a fitting recognition of the secretary's many years of conscientious work.

The first number of Floral Life appeared last week. It is beautifully gotten up and contains an interesting article on roses by Edwin Lonsdale.

Wanted—A receipt for making Beauties bloom in January and February. Apply to PHIL.

The flower market is quite a garden now. The foliage plant display has been brightened this week by a variety of blooming plants, primroses, cinerarias, azaleas, etc. Manager Meehan reports several new stallholders and general satisfaction among the old stallholders.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Craig have issued invitations for the wedding reception of their daughter, Miss Edna Mayne, to Mr. David William Lank, on Tuesday evening, February 17, from 8 until 10 o'clock.

There was an unexpectedly heavy demand for carnations on McKinley day.

Market Conditions.

Business seems very good indeed. But material is scarce enough to make it seem so against facts, if otherwise. If anything is plentiful enough it is lilies, and the best grade of roses, and perhaps other material never gets much more scarce. This condition keeps prices up a bit, as given in our regular list in another column.

The upsetting of a light at the establishment of W. S. Wilson, the Wellesley rose grower, started a fire which burned the boiler house, tools, boxes, etc., and the ends of three of the houses. The loss is $1,000, with no insurance.

Express Rates.

Those express rate resolutions that tasted so good to the meeting which passed them did not seem quite the thing when the committee reached express headquarters to read them to the high officials there. Consequently a new tack is made and a much different document lies upon the desk at Park street, which you are invited to inspect and sign if it meets your approval. The express companies, too, make a new move in charging a few cents more for return of empty boxes.

W. J. Dana's Establishment.

Marked improvements are the order of the day out at the rose growing establishment of W. J. Dana, Wellesley Hills, chief among them being a large amount of concrete walls for houses and carnation beds, the finest underground concrete vault for cut flowers and a huge concrete tank for preparation of liquid manure. This is placed high on the hillside to obtain gravity pressure in using the hose, and by an ingenious use of valves the same pipe that carries up the service water also brings back the prepared liquid.

Another improvement contemplated is the most up to date method of supplying water from a spring, thus cutting off the expense of town water rates, which are a bit high in this locality, anyway, and makes a big item in connection with 40,000 feet of glass.

All this labor in fall and early winter made him a little late in work on contents of his houses, but they are now in the finest of condition and showing a splendid "break" that insures heavy spring products and from which he is now cutting a few of the finest and heaviest blooms ever seen in this market.

J. S. Manter.

The Market.

The weather has moderated somewhat and the cold, frosty nights have been succeeded by damp, foggy weather. The sun has hardly been seen for several days, but the thermometer instead of being from 26 to 30 degrees, as in the past two weeks at 7 o'clock in the morning, has registered from 40 to 45 at the same time. This is considerable of a change and if the frosty spell is over the growers will feel easier.

Business still continues quiet. Very little doing except in the line of funerals. Carnations are selling at 50 to 75 cents per dozen for fancy stock; Lawson at 50 cents. Flora Hill, Estelle, Ethel Crocker, Triumph and Marquis at 35 cents and Scott and Portia at 25 cents per dozen. Roses are still scarce. Beauties are selling at $3 to $5 per dozen and short stems at considerable less. Brides, Bridesmaids and Liberties bring 75 cents to $1; Kaiserin from 50 cents to $1 according to quality. Roman hyacinths are somewhat scarcer. Plenty of valley and narcissus of all kinds. Violets are overplentiful and only the longest stemmed bring good prices.

Wild maiden hair is beginning to be seen and it fills a long felt want, as really good greenhouse maiden hair is always scarce at this time. The native variety grows in great abundance in Marin county, and is picked by Italians and shipped to San Francisco by rail. It retails for about $1.50 per dozen bunches, and as it is of a beautiful dark green color it comes very handy to arrange with flowers, and its cheapness is a great point in its favor. Good smilax is becoming scarce. Most of the growers cut very closely for the holidays and, the weather having been so cold since that time, it has not had a chance to grow much since.

Personal.

Mr. Chas. Mitchell, secretary of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, reports everything in a very prosperous condition, with several new applications for membership to be proposed at the next meeting.

Mr. Gustave Gagne is building a large greenhouse at his nursery on Lombard street.

Serveau Bros. report splendid orders being received for spring planting. This firm is composed of "hustlers" and they have two splendid establishments well stocked with general nursery stock.

The funeral of Miss Alice Boalt Tevis, daughter of the late Hugh Tevis, a multimillionaire, called for a lot of high grade flowers such as orchids, valley, etc. The Misses Worn, Pelicano & Co. and Sievers & Boland getting most orders for same.

Fred Abey, of Berkeley, is bringing in the best Beauties and Prosperity carnations. They bring the top price.

John H. Sievers & Co. is supplying the market with some very fine orchids, especially Cattleya Trianæ and Lælia anceps alba.

Geo. B. Jones has invested in a new delivery wagon.

H. Bourguignon, of San Jose, was a recent visitor. Mr. Bourguignon has 60,000 feet of glass devoted to the production of roses and carnations for this market. His place is heated by hot water and lately crude oil has been used as fuel, an electric motor supplying power to force the oil through the burners. The experiment has proven satisfactory, giving better heat at less cost.

Frisco.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Trade during the past week was very brisk. All stock was in good demand. Good roses sold higher than ever before this season; in some instances prices held up to Christmas quotations. Some special fancy Maids and Brides reached 20 cents, although the flowers were only in small lots.

The weather last week was exceptionally bright. We had more sunshine than we have had during the past two months. In consequence roses are arriving in larger quantities. The quality of the flowers is fine and they are of good color. American Beauty roses are still scarce; very few first-class blooms are to be had.

Carnations sold better than for some time. A general cleaning up occurred every day. The demand was very heavy on Thursday, January 29, due to the birthday of the late President McKinley. The supply of white carnations is still limited; many more could be sold. Ordinary grades of colored carnations (common varieties) sold at $1.50 to $2.50 per 100; the better grades were disposed of at $3 to $5 per 100.

Bulbous stock is selling very good. The quality of tulips has improved. Quantities of long-stemmed Yellow Prince and La Reine tulips are in evidence and sell well at $3 to $4 per 100. Roman hyacinths and paper white narcissus bring from $2 to $3 per 100. Harrisii lilies are arriving in larger quantities and sell at $12.50 and $15 per 100. Trumpet Major and Golden Spur narcissus are not plentiful; they are sold at $5 and $6 per 100.

The supply of sweet peas, mignonette, white lilacs, valley and violets is plentiful, and moving satisfactorily.

The Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co., at Bakerstown, is cutting quantities of special Maids and Brides.

M. C. Dunlevy, of Carnegie, is sending the Cut Flower Co. quantities of miniature Dutch hyacinths; the quality is extra good.

Mrs. E. H. Williams has been very busy with large decorations.

Various Items.

Lloyd Swarthout, of Washington, Pa., is receiving bids on four new carnation houses.

Jos. H. Seaman, of the same town, is contemplating the erection of a complete plant for the growing of roses and carnations.

William Falconer, superintendent of Schenley Park, one of the highest authorities on horticulture in this country, read a paper at a recent meeting of the East End board of trade on "Trees for the City and Their Care." He confined himself mostly to shade trees, and thoroughly canvassed his field for the benefit of his auditors. Mr. Falconer thinks that the planting of trees along our Pittsburg streets is yet in its infancy, and looks forward to the day when every street in the residence district will be a wide avenue, running between rows of forest giants.

The rate granted by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to New York, in connection with the meeting of the American Carnation Society, to be held in Brooklyn, February 19 and 20, will be $14 for the round trip from this city. This is a rate of a fare and one-third on the certificate plan, for the round trip. Tickets (and certificates) may be purchased at the Fifth avenue ticket office as early as February 16. They will be good returning February 24.

Visitors: R. C. Reynders, of Oil City, Pa., and George Schomer, of Connellsville, Pa. Hoo-Hoo.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The rose supply may have improved a trifle or the demand slackened a shade, for though they are still scarce prices are a shade easier. Very few now reach above $12. Otherwise there is no change in the market.

Tulips are arriving more freely and the best stock brings $5, though the bulk goes at $3 and $4. Lilies are also more in evidence. Harrisii sell at $2 to $2.50 a dozen, and callas at $1.50 to $1.75. Some good lilac is noted occasionally.

Monday demand was exceedingly brisk but had slackened perceptibly on Tuesday. Trade is certainly not what it should be at the season, but there wouldn't be stock to meet the demand were it normal.

Carnation Meeting.

The Florists' Club's annual carnation exhibition and meeting will be held next Tuesday, Feb. 10. A hall 42x28 feet on the sixth floor of Handel Hall building, 40 Randolph street, has been secured for the occasion. It is expected that the flowers will be in position and ready for inspection by 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and the display will be maintained throughout the afternoon and evening. Exhibitors who cannot accompany their flowers may ship them to either F. F. Benthey, 35 Randolph street, or E. F. Winterson, 45 Wabash avenue, who will see that they are properly staged.

Express Rates.

Mr. E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., 42-44 Randolph street, would like to hear from out of town people who will secure signatures from their local florists to a form of petition he is preparing to use in an endeavor to secure a reduction in the present rate. After a long conference with prominent express officials he believes there is a chance of getting the rate reduced to the old rate plus 5 cents per package if the petitions are numerous and general enough. Write him if you are willing to act in your city or town. And certainly every receiver of cut flowers by express is vitally interested in any effort to secure a reduction of the rate. The 5 cents on each package (if the plan goes through) is to form an insurance fund to liquidate claims for losses through damage to cut flowers in transit.

A New Club.

At a meeting held at the office of Benthey & Co. last Saturday steps were taken to organize a social club from among the members of the trade and allied interests that shall have a regular club room open all the time. The idea is to have a membership of about fifty, with dues at $40 a year, which would give an income of $2,000 a year for running expenses. After the matter had been discussed in its various phases, and many prominent members of the trade had expressed themselves favorably in the matter, a committee, consisting of L. Coatsworth, W. N. Rudd, C. M. Dickinson, Leonard Kill, G. L. Grant and Philip Foley, was appointed to formulate a plan to be definitely acted upon by a general meeting to be called when the committee work was completed.

Various Notes.

Prof. J. C. Blair, chief in horticulture at the State Agricultural College, Urbana, Ill., was a visitor last Saturday.

Mrs. J. Bombenger and family are spending the winter in Europe. They have visited several places of interest and expect to return to Chicago in about two months.

Mr. E. Enders is gradually recovering from the effects of a gallon of lithia water.

The St. Louis boys have left the date of the proposed visit of the Chicago and Milwaukee florists to their city to be determined by the visitors. Those wishing to take the trip should report to Mr. P. J. Hauswirth, 227 Michigan avenue, and express a preference as to date.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

This is ground-hog day, and as the weather is most beautiful and the sun is shining brightly, the troubles of the grower will not be over for the next six weeks. There does not seem to be any marked change in the condition of the cut flower trade among the retailers. In the wholesale market the demand for first-class stock is good and not enough comes in to supply it. Good roses are selling well and the demand no doubt will continue until Lent, or at least until the production is considerably increased. The shortage in the rose cut is general in this market. One of our wholesale men remarked the other day that in his opinion the shortage in the rose market was owing to the smallness of the cut and not to the increase in consumption. In carnations the supply is better and the demand is in keeping with the supply. Prices remain the same as in last quotations. White has the call and are sold out clean each day, while some of the colored ones are left over. There is no especial rush for violets, and the supply is large and quality good. The price went down today to 40 cents per 100. California is the only variety in this market at present.

Bulb stuff is becoming more plentiful as the season advances. Fine valley, Romans, paper whites and tulips were seen the past week at the usual prices. Callas are quite plentiful, but Harrisii are still limited in quantity. There was a big demand for wild smilax the past week, which indicates that decorative work was plentiful.

Although Easter is some time off, some of our growers are talking of having a discussion on Easter lilies at the meeting of the club next Thursday afternoon. This will be quite a feature and those who are interested in this subject should be present.

Visitors.

Hon. A. S. Halstedt and E. W. Guy, of Belleville, called on the trade the past week.

Arnold Ringier, the popular representative of W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago, was with us last week, and reports that trade in his line was never better.

Miss Belle Miller, of Springfield, was in town looking for help, which seems hard to find—that is, good help.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., was in town Saturday buying supplies. Fred reports that he is ready with his part of the entertainment.

Club Entertainment.

Invitations are out for the club's big entertainment, which takes place Saturday night, February 14 (St. Valentine's day), in hall No. 2 Odd Fellows building. Acceptance of the invitations must be in the hands of the committee not later than February 11.

Club Meeting.

The club meeting next Thursday afternoon will be a banner one. A fine lot of carnation blooms is promised from the growers in the East, who will send 1903 introductions, and the local growers will show their standard varieties of all kinds. The trustees have everything in readiness to stage the blooms. All blooms will be judged as to quality.

News Notes.

Mr. J. W. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, one of our best violet growers, has returned from a week's stay in Chicago in the interest of the chicken show held in that city. Pilcher visited some of the large plants around Chicago and is well pleased with his trip.

Hon. A. S. Halstedt, of Belleville, leaves Tuesday night for Chicago with a party of Belleville city officials. Mr. Halstedt will visit all the large floral establishments in Chicago.

J. W. Dunford, of the St. Louis Carnation Co., and president of the Florists' Club, accompanied by his wife, will leave this week for a two weeks' trip to Florida, to visit Mrs. Dunford's father, who has a large orange grove there.

The Ellison Floral Company incorporated last week with a capital of $2,000. The incorporators are: Claude P. Berry, Harry Y. Ellison and Alice Y. Ellison. J. J. B.

Seed Trade News.

Philadelphia.—Business is opening up well. The demand for tomato seed is unprecedented, not only from the dealer, but especially so from the planter. Very little seed was saved last year by the planter. Tomatoes sold well and at good prices throughout the season, which led many to sell the fruit and depend upon buying their seed. One very notable thing about orders coming in is that buyers are selecting the new, improved and higher priced varieties of all kinds. The demand for the cheap and low priced varieties is about nil. This is a very encouraging state of affairs and shows that the buying public not only has money to spend, but that it prefers to risk it on the higher priced varieties rather than on the low. The intelligent buyer usually associates high prices with high quality and vice versa. Take cabbage seed for instance. Five times more seed is sold at retail of varieties listed at $3 and $4 per pound than of sorts listed at $1.50 and $2 per pound. This is true throughout the entire line or both flower and vegetable seeds.

Philadelphia.—Henry F. Michell states that the business done in flower seeds so far this season shows an improvement over that of last season that is very marked. The supply has been sufficient to fill orders placed with the growers. The demand is starting strongly. Sweet peas and asters are especial favorites. Many growers of these two varieties for cutting have doubled their orders. This does not apply to specialists who supply the wholesale market, but to the growers who do a local business. Mr. Michell notices that there are not nearly so many novelties as in the past seasons. The difficulty is to raise anything that is really an improvement over existing sorts, and the critical market which justly scorns humbugs is responsible for this condition. He considers Howard's Star petunia of such unusual merit as to deserve special mention. Those who grew it last season are increasing their sowing now. There are several other seeds of unusual merit not in general cultivation, including a very fine daisy of the chrysanthemum family and a gaillardia. Phil.

Toledo, O.—Vegetable growing, throughout this section, has grown greatly the past two years. Most all gardeners have greenhouses, cold frames and hotbeds which give this market a continuous supply of fresh produce. This hurts the commercial growers of the south, for now the winter supply of cucumbers, tomatoes, cauliflower, beans, radish and lettuce is grown here. The farmers and truck growers all over the country made money in 1902—so this year we will see an increase of sowing, although the shortage of seed will be quite a problem to them. Peas, cucumbers and some varieties of beans will be very scarce.

Port Huron, Mich.—The McMorran-Gray Co., Limited, is a new firm of seed growers with headquarters in this city. They announce that they have purchased the entire stock of peas and beans from the Cape Vincent Seed Co., Ltd., and are now prepared to take contracts for growing same. Their Mr. M. B. Gray had charge of the seed department for the C. V. Seed Co. for 12 years and he will manage the same department for the new firm.

The demand for pickling cucumber seed seems to be many times larger than the available stocks. One local dealer in South Carolina writes to send him seventy-five pounds of cucumber seed, of any strain, no matter what, as he has a large negro trade that buys in one and five-pound lots. It may be unnecessary to say he was supplied.

Firms that import seeds are now having their troubles. On account of the season foreign seed dealers were very late in making shipment and after the seed arrives in this country it is held up in the custom house from ten days to two weeks or more, and about the only satisfaction the importer can get is that the shipments will be passed through as soon as possible.

The demand for Alaska peas is unusually brisk at satisfactory prices. This is no doubt due to the great scarcity of extra earlies. It now seems quite certain that all Alaskas will be well cleaned up before the end of the season.

Major Chas. P. Braslan, the well-known seed grower of San Jose, Cal., has about closed up his annual contract business in the east preparatory to an early return to the Pacific coast. He reports business very encouraging.

The demand for field corn in the eastern states is exceptionally good this year. One firm reports having already booked orders for nearly 10,000 bushels, and the corn selling season has only just begun.

Washington, D. C.—The House has passed the agricultural appropriation bill, after amending it so as to increase the appropriation for free seeds from $270,000 to $300,000.

The Jerome B. Rice Co., Cambridge, N. Y., reports increased business over any former year, demand in many lines being far in excess of supply.

NEW YORK.

The Club's Annual Dinner.

Over fifty members of the New York Florists' Club enjoyed their annual festivity at the St. Denis banquet chambers on Saturday evening. Some of the familiar faces of the old days were not in evidence. Sickness claimed many of the shining lights, and a few since the last jubilations in these rooms have joined the great majority. But many of the best known horticulturists of the east attended and the spirit of fraternity and good fellowship abounded. The dinner itself was up to the high standard of the hostelry and the little addenda "on the side" foamed and sparkled in sympathy with the eloquence and wit of the occasion. The Sunday midnight bells rang out their message as the jolly company united in the good bye song of "Auld Lang Syne." Everybody voted the evening one of the most delightfully informal and fraternal in the club's history.

President Troy demonstrated his ability as a toastmaster and his radiant smile kept the room warm and bright. John H. Taylor was called upon to "set the ball rolling" when the "feast of the reason" began. Mr. Taylor was in exceptionally good humor and waxed eloquent in his toasts to the president and the young element of the club. Mr. Taylor's eloquence was "on tap" throughout the evening and in a speech later he paid an eloquent tribute to the carnation and to the Madison Square Garden exhibition.

John G. Esler followed in a practical address to the toast "Our Sister Societies," in which he dwelt happily on the value of co-operation and loyalty, not only to the New York Florists' Club but to the Society of American Florists, expressing the hope that an attendance of 10,000 florists might crown the record of the great convention at Milwaukee.

Mr. Chas. Weathered spoke of the missionary work done by the New York club educating the "depraved taste of New York society," the labor and brains and money given to the cause of floriculture, especially during the past two years, and the proud position it has attained.

Mr. Wallace, of the Exchange, responded to the toast "The Horticultural Press," in a happy address, interspersed with stories of the aborigines and the Garden of Eden that were appropriate. He told of the wonderful progress of the trade papers, their power for good, their educational and inspirational achievements and their clear instructions on "How to catch the mighty dollar."

The committee's skill in providing entertainment was in evidence during the entire evening. A splendid orchestra, a fine singer and an expert elocutionist adding spice and variety constantly to the program so that every moment was crowded with the good things."

The event of the evening was the presentation of a handsome ruby and diamond pin to the retiring president, Walter Sheridan, whose services during the past two years have been universally appreciated. Mr. C. Weathered made the presentation speech, dwelling on Mr. Sheridan's affection for the club and personal sacrifices, on the strength he had imparted to others, his patience and integrity and the esteem and honor and love with which he was regarded by all his associates.

Mr. Sheridan's surprise was evident and in a modest response he acknowledged the advice and assistance of those who had so faithfully co-operated with him. His grateful speech was accentuated with voice vibrations of emotion and gratitude.

The closing hours were quite informal; the vaudevillians sang all the old songs, with the club joining in the chorus. Schultheis gave several fine baritone solos in several languages. Wallace and Butterfield waltzed around with "Annie Laurie" and "Sally in Our Alley," the REVIEW'S representative made a poetic flight to a better world where he "dreamt" he saw the club's members ('twas but a dream), and the night vanished to the old familiar strains of "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot."

The Carnation Convention.

The meeting of the Brooklyn Horticultural Society on Monday evening was well attended, over forty members being present. A good deal of interest and enthusiasm were manifest and everything promises a great convention for the American Carnation Society.

Thirty-four hundred yards of cheesecloth and twenty-five cases of wild smilax will be used in the decorations. Plenty of money has been received and is in process of collection to meet every possible requirement. Letters from Messrs. Dunlop, of Toronto, A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, and S. J. Reuter, of Westerly, were read, with generous offers of roses, ferns and carnations for decorative purposes.

The completion of the committees includes nearly every prominent name in the society. The Brooklyn "press" is giving the convention encouraging space and notice, a three column horticultural story by Alex Wallace in the Sunday Citizen being especially interesting and apropos.

Mr. Weeber, chairman of the ways and means committee, reported the receipt of many subscriptions and donations. Several new members were reported by the membership committee. The reception and entertainment committees reported official badges ready, appropriations for all purposes ample, menus and programs under way, and the "press" generously provided for. The finance committee has a nice balance on hand and is on "easy street." Mr. Plumb of the exhibition committee presented a letter from Caldwell The Woodsman, of Alabama, making generous rates for supplies and donating an abundance of needle pines and palm leaves. Mr. Phillips, chairman of the decorating committee, announced many donations and offers of assistance.

Toastmaster Woodruff's letter of acceptance was read and letters from many prominent men accepting invitations, and from Seth Low, mayor of New York; St. Clair McKelvey, of the Booklyn Eagle, and from J. Edward Swanstrom, with regrets on account of inability to attend.

Richard Young, of Brooklyn, and Frank B. Lowne, of Poughkeepsie, are among the prominent speakers already secured. The responsibility and care of the lady visitors was placed upon the broad shoulders of Mr. Langjahr and a liberal sum voted for their entertainment. A letter from Mr. Herr announced the securing of a one and one third rate from the railroads, dependent upon the usual number in attendance.

The next meeting of the society and the last before the convention will be held on Monday evening, February 16. Everything now indicates a grand attendance, and the most successful and important convention ever held by the American Carnation Society.

Items.

John N. May and C. W. Ward have about recovered from their indisposition, though neither of them was well enough to enjoy the club banquet Saturday evening.

The eighth annual dinner of the New Jersey Floricultural Society takes place this, Wednesday, evening in Elk's Hall, Orange, N. J. Quite a number of New Yorkers are going down and the usual good time is assured.

"Big floral dinners" is the way the Metropolitan press puts it when referring to the society functions which follow each other so rapidly nowadays and which gladden the bon ton florists' hearts. The coming weeks, prior to Lent, are crowded with these celebrations, and the displays of flowers and more elaborate decorations, have seldom been arranged for in New York.

Henry Hession, the wholesale florist, of Clarkson street, Flatbush, was visited Sunday evening by some expert and esthetic burglars, whose skill and taste were shown in the selection of every first-class carnation bloom in the establishment. Mr. Hession puts his loss at $150.

Mr. Taylor's reminiscences Saturday evening extended back to 1864, the year he sold his first roses in the New York market.

The seedsmen are evidently optimistic as to the spring trade and are already working overtime and with largely increased forces in preparation for the usual spring rush, which, according to Brother Scott, and the robins, and Noah, will be here very early.

David Clarke's Sons have had some fine dinner decorations lately. One, a centerpiece 10 feet in diameter, was especially novel. It was built in sections, completed at their store before delivery, using Dracaena terminalis, Pandanus Veitchii, crotons and primulas with Farleyense. Some idea of the brilliancy of such a combination can be imagined with innumerable electric lights interspersed and a tall seaforthia rising from the center and spreading from one end of the table to the other, with orchids in glass tubes, suspended.

A new brand of florist ribbon for Easter will be offered by Schloss Bros. to the trade by the name of "Sylvia Belle." The fact that Emil Schloss is rejoicing in the arrival of his first baby daughter will be ample cause for the novelty, and the baby's name will be perpetuated in the ribbon. The supply will be limited — he ribbon supply, of course.

Jas. W. Withers, of American Gardening, left for Jamaica a few days ago, a very sick man, but it is hoped he may recover in the genial climate of the tropics.

Dame Rumor whispers that a prominent retailer, who already has two big stores, is to open a gorgeous affair in the new building at corner of Forty-second street and Fifth avenue, in the near future. It's a fine location for some one with enterprise and money. Wall street has been kind lately, I hear, to several of the big florists, and this may "account for the milk in the cocoanut."

The galax leaf is still popular. McIntosh tells me he used 10,000 in five days last week in funeral wreaths and averages that quantity weekly.

The New York Florists' Bowling Club is still in statu quo. Several of the best members have joined the Flatbush Club. Looks as though the Milwaukee tournament would see no representative team from New York if some "waking up" isn't developed soon. Meantime Captain Lang has joined the Rosedales and last week made ten strikes in succession and a total of 289.

Carnation day last Friday was wonderfully observed here, thousands wearing the divine flower on that anniversary in honor of William McKinley's memory.

The American Institute's exhibition at the Berkeley Lyceum Wednesday and Thursday was well attended and most interesting addresses were delivered, several of them supplemented by stereopticon views. The "cyps" exhibited by H. T. Clinkaberry, of Trenton, N. J., were a fine collection. Wm. Slack, of Stamford, showed some fine Brides, Maids and violets; G. M. Hay, of Stamford, vases of Mrs. Lawson, Chicago and Mrs. Bradt carnations with a seedling of red and pink; H. Spavin, of Mt. Kisco, an orange crimson seedling and the new scarlet Mrs. Jas. Wood. The fruit exhibit was more extensive, and the apple supply was in variety and quality away above the average.

Hicks Arnold, a member of the American Rose Society, an orchid expert and one of the best patrons of horticulture among the wealthy classes of the country, died of pneumonia last week at the age of 66, universally regretted. His country home, "Byram Woods," at Port Chester, is one of the most beautiful places on the sound, and was just about completed. It was while superintending its great roadway system that he was taken ill. His orchid collection was one of the finest in the world.

The annual meeting of the managers of the New York Botanical Garden was held last month and Dr. Britton's report was a very interesting one.

Robert Craig was in the city last week, but was unable to stay over for the club dinner, which lacked, therefore, the "silver tongued eloquence" so much appreciated by his friends here, and a sample of which we expect to hear at the Carnation Society's convention. Lieutenant Governor Woodruff, the toastmaster, will have to look to his laurels.

Geo. Weston, of Hempstead, L. I., is building a new house 25x150, for carnations.

W. H. Elliott, of Brighton, Mass., the "Asparagus king," was in the city on Monday.

Mr. Krick, of Brooklyn, is still inventing. He has something of universal interest to introduce at the Milwaukee convention. But his latest is a concoction which will color any flower in 15 minutes any shade desired without injury to the flower or destruction of its perfume.

A fine stock of the new carnation "Judge Hinsdale," at John Young's, was much admired this week and readily realized 10 cents each. A dozen varieties of orchids of grand quality and an abundance of them were also in evidence.

Mr. Charles Lenker, of Freeport, L. I., has added a permanent coal business to his florist trade. Through his generous influence several of the Long Island growers have been able to purchase their coal at about half the New York prices. Over 500 tons have been handled by him. He will push the business on a larger scale next fall and winter.

Mrs. Wm. Plumb, who has been very ill, is now out of danger.

The announcement last week as to a bowling tournament during the convention was premature. It seems the only evening the alleys at Flatbush are at liberty is on Thursday evening, on which occasion the important business meeting of the convention occurs. But Brooklyn is full of grand alleys, many of them in and near the Germania Club House, and lovers of the amusement will have ample time and opportunity to indulge in it while in the city, and doubtless many impromptu matches will be enjoyed. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

HASTINGS, MICH.—J. N. Burroughs reports Christmas trade as never better. Everything sold and more could have been disposed of had the stock been on hand. Carnations sell quickly at prices twice as high as those of last winter, which evens up the high price of coal.

MOBILE, ALA.—The business of the late C. M. Ravier will be continued by his two sons, Louis and Frederick. They are both energetic, wide awake young men and will no doubt conduct the business on the same high principles that their father did.

HONESDALE PA.—E. C. Boss, formerly foreman for J. G. Marvin, Wilkesbarre, has purchased the greenhouses of Wm. J. Scheissler here, and will continue the business.

CINCINNATI.

The Market

Trade during the past week was good. The weather, which started out cool and nice, soon turned warmer, and now we are having regular spring weather.

Stock is suffering in consequence, and roses and carnations are getting soft. Roses are losing their color, too. Beauties are much shorter in supply and good ones are scarce. Short-stemmed ones can be had in limited quantities. The supply of Liberties has dropped to almost nothing. Brides, too, as a rule, are hard to get. Maids and Gates are in better shape. A good many Meteors are coming in, but they are very poor.

Carnations are gradually increasing in supply, but the warm weather has been very hard on them, and the quality is suffering. Many are coming with bursted calyxes.

A great variety of bulbous stock is beginning to arrive. Tulips are in in good quantities and bring from 3 to 5 cents. Von Sions also made their first appearance this week, for which 5 cents was asked, but 4 cents would be a good price. White Dutch hyacinths are also in and bring 6 cents. They are selling well. Callas are moving well and Harrisii lilies are a very good article to have, especially so as they bring $2.50 per dozen, and $20 by the 100. Romans and narcissus are in good supply and are selling well. Valley is also in good demand and some fine stock is to be had.

Violets, both single and double are coming in by the thousands and the market is fast becoming overstocked with them. The quality is very good, but the price is dropping rapidly and only the very best reach as high as $1 per 100; others considerably less.

On January 29 the anniversary of President McKinley's birth, there was a very lively demand for carnations. Thousands were sold for this purpose, but there were not nearly enough and anything like a carnation bloom was sold.

Rose Exhibit.

Saturday, February 14, is the special exhibition of roses, held by the Cincinnati Florists' Society in its club rooms, and the following prizes are offered: Best vase American Beauty, 12 blooms, 1st, $10; 2nd, $6; 3rd, $4; best vase containing 25 blooms each, Bridesmaid, Bride, Meteor, Perle des Jardin, Golden Gate and Liberty, 1st, $4; 2nd, $3; 3rd, $2; each variety. Best display of violets, 1st, $6; 2nd, $4; 3rd, $3. Best general display, $10.

The supply is increasing and prices falling. Bulbous stock is especially abundant. Prices somewhat lower on carnations. White lilac and orchids are plentiful, and the best valley is selling at $3.00 per 100. Plenty of everything. Violets still depreciating.

RICHMOND, VA.—Frank Mosmiller reports business as having greatly increased with him since he moved to his new quarters last October. Christmas trade far surpassed his expectations. Demand is still heavy, especially so for funeral work.

Continued dark weather, with increased calls for funeral flowers, created shortage in everything. When white is not procurable, almost any color is resorted to and brought into use for funeral work. The outlook for the near future is not very promising. Indications are for a shortage all around for February, at least. Stuff is being used up too close, especially in roses. The writer predicts a shortage until along in March, notwithstanding bulbous stuff will soon be plentiful. DILGER.

OMAHA.

The past ten days has seen a variety of conditions—good, bad and indifferent weather, with trade in accordance. But on the whole, the latter has been quite satisfactory. Several large funerals and weddings added life to things generally.

The quality of stock is good in many respects, but with a tendency toward weak stems in tea roses. American Beauties are very largely off crop, although what stock is received is good. Violets are coming in quantity, and tulips were in the market the past week. Plant trade has been very good with no favorites, and brings fair prices. Prices on cut stock are a trifle lower than for the corresponding period of last year, and the tendency is to "bear" the carnation market.

Mr. Lloyd Vaughan, of E. H. Hunt's, was a recent visitor. J. H. B.

CLEVELAND.

Various Items.

Business since Christmas has been unusually good. With weddings and receptions, the demand for cut flowers has exceeded the supply. Since the holidays roses have been decidedly on the short side as regards supply, some days it being almost impossible to secure any for design work except No. 1, which are almost too good for that kind of work. Carnations have been in very good supply, but have been no drug, all classes of stock finding ready sale. Tulips and daffodils are becoming more plentiful and of course will help out the shortage.

A visit to J. M. Gasser Co.'s Rocky River place found everything in good condition. Its new range of glass is devoted entirely to roses and they are in the very best condition, showing a fine, healthy growth which forecasts a large crop of extra fine flowers. Its carnations show the effect of a very wet summer, but for all that they are looking very well indeed. J. M. Gasser, president of the company, has been quite ill for about two weeks. It was thought that he was threatened with pneumonia, but he is better now.

H. A. Hart's place was in apple-pie order as usual and shows that the man at the helm understands his business. He has just got his roses, spiræa and other plants in for Easter. He informed me that he expects to go to Europe this summer. So money is being made by some regardless of the coal bills.

M. Hovarth, our genial park forester, whose face is always wreathed in smiles, will now greet you with a broader smile than ever and will pass you a cigar. It is a girl and he is as proud as he can well be.

Another one of our craft wears a beaming countenance, and that is our friend, Charlie Schmitt, of Glenville. He has one plant of Lawson carnation that produces white flowers. A Lawson plant sported with him last winter and he succeeded in rooting four cuttings from that flower stem, one of which is the aforesaid plant. Success to Charlie and also to his white Lawson. If we can only get a white Lawson!

There will not many go from here to the carnation convention.

TENEP.

TOLEDO, O.

All florists are astonished at the way trade keeps up; so far this year trade is far ahead of 1902. The fine weather has kept many firms from closing, as coal here has been limited. Even as it is, florists must receive a little advance in prices on all blooms.

Roses are plentiful, bringing $1.50 to $8.00 per dozen; carnations, good, 75c to $1.50 per dozen; violets, $1.50 to $2.50 per 100; Roman hyacinths, $1.50 to $4.00 per 100; narcissus, $1.00 to $3.00 per 100.

If you have the right varieties.

YOU don't want too many of the very early ones. You want the large, fine blooms of the second earlies. I have watched the market carefully for several years and found that it is there where you make your money in Mums — to have the right varieties — those that come in at the right time. In yellow there is nothing better than Monrovia and Robt. Halliday.

The first is a few days or a week earlier but the latter is the best bloom. They are both money-makers when grown right. I also have a white sport of GLORY OF PACIFIC. It is a large and better flower than its parent and I have grown it for my own use for three years, and it is the best second early white I know of. The only trouble is that I have not made enough fuss about it or given it a fancy name. I have a large stock of the three above varieties—fine, sturdy, cool-grown stock from 2 and 2½-inch pots, ready to ship. You can get many cuttings from each plant if you buy now and keep propagating. Also a few Appleton, Eaton, Bonnaffon, etc. All at $5.00 per 100. No better stock in the market.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

During the past month trade has been fair. The cut of roses, while not large, was of fine quality and as a rule has been cleaned up daily. The same may be said of carnations. Bulbous stock, such as daffodils, tulips, hyacinths, etc., are beginning to come in and the quality is fine. Lilies, particularly Harrisii, are fine and as yet have shown very little disease; longiflorums also are particularly good.

Propagation of roses and carnations is of course the principal occupation just now, and from all appearances the design is to considerably increase the quantities for the next season. G. Van Bochove & Bro. are completing plans for five new houses which they will begin to construct as soon as weather will permit. They have recently built as an adjunct to their floral establishment a model mushroom house, which is already beginning to give some product. If the product can command remunerative prices in the market this will be but the beginning of a more elaborate plant.

The weather has been dull and cloudy with short intervals of sunshine, but fortunately in these times of coal troubles the thermometer seldom has reached zero. Sterne says something of "the wind being tempered to the shorn lamb." It is very applicable in the present instance. R.

THE LORD & BURNHAM CO.

The Lord & Burnham Company, of Irvington-on-Hudson and New York City, are making extensive additions to their plant at Irvington. These additional buildings will comprise a large wood working mill equipped with the most modern machinery for the preparation of cypress wood capping, bars, etc., for their standard iron construction greenhouses, also for the manufacture of cypress greenhouse material for the trade for the "all sash bar" construction (the demand having outgrown the capacity of the present mill); a power house on their new dock for the installation of new steam boilers and engines; also additions to their foundry and shops for making the well known "Burnham" heating boilers.

The enlargements referred to, taken in connection with its present works including the extensive iron working shop built three years since, will nearly double this firm's present facilities, making it possible to not only fill all orders very promptly but also to handle its rapidly growing business in completed greenhouses and all kinds of greenhouse material.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—The Central Michigan Nursery gave a banquet to its employes January 20 and it was a very successful affair, the after-dinner addresses being very instructive and interesting. Chas. A. Maxson responded on behalf of the management, Fred W. Remington for the employes, C. A. Krill for the nursery salesmen, W. C. Cook, manager of the greenhouses, for floriculture, and E. C. Foster, for landscape gardening. The banquet took place in the Auditorium and the officers and employes present numbered 100. A full report, including the addresses, appeared in the Gazette-News of the next morning.

BALTIMORE.

Various Items.

The weather history of the week ending today (February 2) is clouds and fogs and rains, the mercury scarcely falling day or night to the freezing point, but with infrequent glimpses of Old Sol's shining face. From this it may be naturally inferred that good stuff continues scarce, but there is a perceptible increase in shipments. Violets appear a thing of past history, though, as if to give this a flat denial, there is one shipper who sends to the Florists' Exchange as fine flowers as ever found their way thither, showing the default is not entirely due to the clouds and heavy precipitation of the season. Roses lack color, size and stem; but here, too, there are exceptions enough to prove the rule. Isaac H. Moss is marketing now some fine Ivory, but he seems about our only grower who produces the variety.

Carnations do not as yet come up to the average either in quality or supply. Whites are noticeably deficient. There was a brisk demand on some sides for the divine flower on McKinley day, but other stores report sales below what they had been led to expect. A fine vase of Enchantress, a sort not much seen here as yet, was lately on show in Mr. Halliday's window, but the color is not a popular one in this immediate bailiwick —savoring too much of old Daybreak.

One of our older florists recently pointed out a change of the current in trade between this city and Washington. Some fifteen years ago a number of our storekeepers, when local supplies proved short, would get into the train and run over to the Capitol city for flowers. Now much more stuff goes thither each week from here than is received.

The coal famine has its back broken. Supplies are increasing, prices tumbling. As the days lengthen and the sun gains power, we all congratulate ourselves that the season of distress and uneasiness is about over—let us hope, never to return! B.

BUTTE, MONT.

Never before in the history of the northwest has there been such an amount of funeral work turned out in so short a space of time. From January 1 up to date, January 28, the Butte Floral Co. has turned out $3,500 worth of funeral work alone. Law Brothers have been busy and report business good, with stock very scarce.

The Florists' Club met on the 24th, appointed a committee on by-laws, and arranged for a good time at our next meeting. Mr. Sigel, who has charge of the Columbia Gardens, had some fine Prosperity and Potter Palmer carnations to show the boys. He invited the club to hold its second meeting at the Columbia Gardens, offering to furnish transportation. The invitation was accepted by the club and it is expected that all who attend will have a good time. The club is a decided success, as nothing else could bring the boys together as the club has done. We will meet again February 7.

MILWAUKEE.

Trade is not very brisk, but what little stock there is in the market is cleaned up. If the demand were heavy there would not be half enough stock to go around. Roses never before were so scarce as they have been the past month, and no immediate change in sight. Carnations are moving well, but the principal call is for white. Violets are more plentiful and only the choicest find ready sale. Tulips are in market, but are too short-stemmed to bring good figures. Some fine freesias are also in and sell well.

The Florists' Club will hereafter have bowling night on the first and third Tuesdays of each month, and regular meetings on the second Tuesday of each month. It is regretted that the Chicago boys missed connections on the annual winter tour to Milwaukee, but we take the blame; it was all through a misunderstanding of dates.

Thanks to the man whose happy thought created Carnation Day in memory of McKinley's birthday. It is a boon to the carnation grower and will be the banner day of the year for this flower if its inauguration day is any criterion of its future custom. Dealers were wholly unprepared for the large demand and were cleaned out early. A noticeable feature was the large number of school children who were wearing the flower. The news item through the Associated Press, which gave it mention in nearly all the papers in the country, was an advertisement worth thousands of dollars to the trade.

C. C. P.

PIPING.

How much 4-inch cast iron pipe would be necessary to heat to 50 degrees in zero weather a house 165x18? House runs east and west, has board wall 5½ ft. high (covered with tarred paper) on north side and 4 ft. on south side, with 3 ft. of glass. Highest point inside is 9 ft.; 12 ft. of glass on south side of roof and 7 ft. on north side, and glass in east and west ends.

Southern Florist.

In reply to Southern Florist, for heating a greenhouse 165x18 having glass on the roof and two ends and three feet of glass on one side wall to 50 degrees on the coldest nights, from 1,100 to 1,200 ft. of 4 inch cast iron pipe would be required.

MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.
Yours very truly, ROBERT C. BANCROFT.

BANQUET DECORATION.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a simple banquet decoration. As will be seen by the picture small vases of roses and carnations were used at intervals on the tables and these were supplemented by sprays of asparagus on the cloth. In the center of the speakers' table, at the right in the picture, was a plateau of roses, while to the cloth on the inner side of the central triangle chrysanthemums were pinned, the bloom rising just above the edge of the table and the stems slanting downward. Some drapery of asparagus was also used here as will be noted. In the center of the triangle was a low mound of palms, some of the plants being tilted over to finish the group at its base.

The decoration was for the last annual banquet of the Chicago Florists' Club in the banquet room of the Auditorium hotel last November, and was arranged by Mr. P. J. Hauswirth.

The placing of the tables in the form of a triangle appealed to us as an exceedingly good idea. The speakers' table is at the right and by this arrangement every one of the banqueters faced this table and there was no necessity for any one to turn around in order to see or hear. As will be seen by the chairs guests were seated on the outer side of the triangles only.

A Simple Banquet Decoration.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

American Beauties will now begin their spring growth and should be encouraged by liberal supplies of liquid food. This season there are many complaints because of the wood continuing to reach in length instead of forming buds. This is a usual cause of complaint during the winter season and of course the long sunless period we have had this season makes it more aggravated and no doubt the receipts from Beauty houses will be considerably smaller than in former years. There may be some consolation in the fact that we are all experiencing the same kind of weather.

To help check the growth and encourage the formation of buds the soil on the benches should be allowed to become dry almost to the wilting point, and the temperature reduced to 54 degrees for a week or so. A strict watch will have to be kept so that the tips do not wilt when the sun does shine. If the foliage is very dense so as to exclude the rays of the sun from the surface of the soil a judicious picking off of the bottom leaves and plenty of ventilation on all favorable occasions will materially help. As the busy season of potting is now on, tying, taking off laterals and keeping the benches tidy should not (as is frequently the case), be neglected as blooms, however good the quality may be otherwise, are reduced in grade by crooked and unshapely stems. The laterals should be removed while they are quite small, say two inches in length, as if they are allowed to become strong they deprive the bud of its nourishment and spoil the gracefulness of the stem. Brides and Maids particularly will be likely to suffer as the growth is soft and in order to obtain straight stems tying should be strictly attended to.

I have recently had several inquiries as to the best method of forcing Beauties and other roses in pots for the Easter trade. It is too late in the season for this to be regarded as a "seasonable hint" as these require a much longer period than the few weeks now at our disposal. To force Beauties successfully in pots they should be potted early in December in ordinary rose soil and given ample drainage. The soil should be thoroughly moistened.

Underneath a bench where there is plenty of head-room and light in a house with a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees is a suitable place for them until the eyes begin to break. During this period they must receive careful attention, syringing them at least every alternate day and keeping them clear of any over-head drip. When the eyes begin to break and root action has well advanced they should be transferred to a light, airy bench in a house with a night temperature of 55 or 56 degrees. As the leaves expand the temperature can be raised to 60 degrees.

When the pots are well filled with roots liquid manure can be applied with advantage, beginning by giving it very weak and increasing in strength as the plants increase in vigor. If they appear to be coming into bloom too early they can be retarded by reducing the temperature, but this must be done very gradually, as any sudden reduction will result in mildew.

RIBES.

GRAFTED BEAUTIES.

Are grafted Beauties better than those on their own roots? I am not particular about six and seven-foot stems, but prefer three or four-foot stems with good flowers, and thought probably grafted stock would produce such blooms more abundantly.

H. T.

Mass.

It is still an undecided question if grafted stock of Beauties are any better than stock on their own roots. Some experts prefer them grafted, while others again do not. My own experience with grafted stock is that they do produce finer canes and better quality of blooms, but are behind those on their own roots in productiveness.

As far as length of stem is concerned I have never been able to detect any difference that could be credited to the mode of propagation, the selecting of close jointed wood for propagating purposes either by cutting or grafting having more to do with the character and quality of the future stem. By carefully selecting this class of wood from the freest-flowering plants and persisting in it year after year, a freer blooming and shorter stemmed class of stock can be acquired.

Some growers claim that two-year-old stock properly handled produces greater quantities of medium stems, but I notice that very few have recourse to this plan a second time, especially if they have plenty of young, vigorous stock. Carried over houses generally have a ragged and unequal appearance and lack that vigorous freshness and uniformity which is the beauty of a well handled house of young stock.

RIBES.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Asters.

If you want some extra early asters, they can be sown at once. They never should at any time while under glass have a higher temperature than 50 at night, and always the fullest light. If allowed to run up into spindling little seedlings, either for want of light or too much heat, you have given them a bad start. Just as soon as they develop their first leaf after the two seed leaves they should be transplanted into flats, one inch apart. These early sown asters will want another transplanting, either into a 2½-inch pot or into a flat at least two inches apart. The aster lends itself to transplanting almost as well as a pansy, and I would rather have them in flats a couple of inches apart than in a small pot.

While on this subject I may digress a moment and say that in planting out many plants from small pots, let it be roses, carnations or any other plant, there is often a great disappointment because the ball of roots is so confined that it takes a long time before there is a good, healthy root action. The reason of this is that in many cases the roots have become inactive, or what a scientist may call "non-functional," and there is a decay instead of a grasping hold of the ground. It is true that there are a few plants that don't like what is called a disturbance of their roots, but they are not as numerous as the old orthodox school believed, and if you will give the living, vital roots of almost any plant a chance to take hold of its new environments and feeding ground, it will quickly do so and to its great advantage.

Bougainvilleas.

This is about the time that you should give your bougainvilleas a good strong heat. About 65 degrees at night will do very well for the next six weeks, and if the bracts are well out you can give them a lower temperature, but never below 50 degrees. It is truly a tropical shrub and might lose its foliage. Yet the lower temperature will only add a deeper shade to the bracts, so-called flowers. Give them plenty of water and a daily syringe on bright days and a light house.

Camellias.

There has been quite a fad this year for camellias. In form they are most beautiful, but most difficult to handle. Their petals are soiled even by the most tender touch. As the specific name, Camellia Japonica, implies, they are from Japan and China, and the finest varieties have been produced by European and some American growers. They will endure 10 degrees of frost, but that is not at all essential. As some florists may be induced to invest in a few, knowing nothing of their culture, I venture a few remarks. To grow them profitably, if it will ever pay a northern florist to grow them, they should be planted out in a solid bed. This bed should be well drained, that is, a foot or so of broken up brickbats or clinkers, and on top of that, 18 inches or two feet of compost. This compost should be a turfy, heavy loam chopped into pieces, never in size less than a hen's egg. There used to be an idea that you must have peat added to about one-half of the compost, but that is not at all essential. If the loam is too clayey, then put in a bushel of charcoal to every cubic yard of loam.

The principal thing to remember is that they are a shrub or evergreen tree and have their seasons of growth and rest, and their growing season would be naturally soon after they have flowered. The flowering season with us is from November to February. Soon after flowering they will show signs of starting to grow and then is the season to give them a nice, warm, growing atmosphere with plenty of water at the root and a daily syringing. By the month of May they have made their season's growth and "set" their buds; then a cool, shaded house is what they want for the summer. They will develop their flowers finely during the winter in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. After the buds are set in late spring an occasional syringing will do, but at all times they want a moderate moisture at the roots.

Unfortunately you cannot pick this immaculate flower with any stem, because if you do, your plants would have to be wonderfully vigorous to make a growth that would give you a flower, and the leaf buds near the flower is what you depend on to give you the growth that will mature a flower bud for next year. While I have written about their treatment in solid beds, all I have said will apply to their cultivation in pots, only don't overpot them. When in pots or tubs you have one advantage. You can give them the ideal position during our hot summers, and that would be outside under a lattice shade where they would get a subdued light and the fullest amount of fresh air and plenty of it.

It's not likely that many of our florists will go into the camellia business. Yet I see tempting offers from European nurserymen of young plants. The camellia was one of the first of Flora's treasures that I had care of when some fourteen years old, and I can well remember what a dark house it was, even in a dark and sunless country compared with ours, and yet they flourished like the "green bay tree," and many a morning I have had to take off the border a half bushel of the snow white petals and rap the great bush to loosen all that were on the verge of dissolution "just for tidiness' sake, don't you know." Yet for all, I don't believe they want such a dark and dreary house. Light and warmth when they are growing in the spring months and just a little shade during the lightest hours of our summer is what they want.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Care of Young Stock.

After having gotten your rooted cuttings in soil, whether potted, in flats or bench, give them close attention. In a large batch of young plants it is not surprising to find some which show signs of disease, and it goes without saying that the loss is insignificant compared to what it would be after they had struggled along until lifting time.

The plants being small they can be kept more directly under your eye, so remove and burn all plants in any way affected, with the exception of those showing signs of rust, in which case the affected leaves should be picked off and burned. We have long since ceased to be alarmed about the rust. Of course it is objectionable, but we feel satisfied if we can keep it confined to the lower foliage. It seems as natural for some varieties to be rusty as it is for a dog to have fleas.

Last year our young stock of Nelson commenced to rust as soon as potted, and some plants were pretty much clear of leaves when planted out, but in two weeks' time they doubled in size and grew very rapidly, lifting without a sign of rust. I mention this, in case growers securing this sort this year for the first time, may judge rather hastily. Mrs. Potter Palmer and Estelle are two others which are apt to show rust early, but perhaps not to such extent as Nelson.

These varieties are money-makers, notwithstanding, and from all accounts will be grown extensively next year as will the athlete Adonis, which is arriving here rusty, but which fact does not deter us from believing it a superior sort.

About the worst thing that can happen to young stock is to get infested with aphis; they invariably occupy the most tender part of the plant and are very hard to dislodge. Prevention by regular fumigation will keep the plants clean, besides being cheaper and less tiresome than inventing excuses.

A bench upon which the sun has full play should be chosen to hold this stock, and by all means have this bench in a house that can be abundantly ventilated, for there is nothing so conducive to strong healthy growth as a constant change of air.

It will be but a short time before old Sol will get in his work, raising the temperature in our houses very fast between the hours of 11 a. m. and 3 p. m., so if you can arrange to have your stock on a bench near a side ventilator it will be an advantage in early spring. We use a west bench in a north and south house, ventilated at ridge and west side. You may think this bench an unprofitable one, but to digress a little I will explain other uses to which this bench is put. Immediately our carnations are planted out, geraniums, etc., follow; next come chrysanthemums to be lifted and potted about Sept. 1, then the bench is filled with field-grown dwarf stevia, which almost every grower who retails, needs to set off his carnation blooms.

Even though the product is wholesaled and no bedding plants or chrysanthemums are grown, the stevia can be handled at a profit and when gone you have a vacant space at about the right time to receive stock which deserves a much better place than is often thought to be needed.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Packing Blooms.

The carnation convention is now only about ten days off and a few words about packing your exhibition blooms will not be amiss. You know it is one thing to grow a fine bloom and it is quite another to send it in perfect condition over a thousand miles or more. At every exhibition you will see a few lots of blooms that were ruined in transit and in many cases it came principally from improper packing. If you could lay your flowers carefully into the box and carry it along as you do a made-up design, it would be all right, but when you are obliged to trust the box in the gentle hands of the expressman to be tossed around and likely as not stood on one end (and always on the wrong end) that is another proposition.

In the first place every bloom should be secured so that it can not move about in the box and no bloom should be crowded so as to be mashed out of shape. Proceed thus: Take a wooden or heavy card-board box and line well with newspaper and paraffin paper inside of all. Make some pillows by rolling up some paper into rolls an inch thick. Place one on the bottom about three inches from the end and lay a layer of blooms with the calyxes resting on this pillow, then lay in another pillow and a row of blooms and so on until the box is full. Lay some wet tissue paper between the stems occasionally to keep them moist and also nail a cleat across about every four rows to hold them in place.

If you are a decorator you will likely have some of those little glass tubes that Mr. Kift's fertile brain invented and they are just what you want, for long distance shipping especially. Put one of those on each stem and pack just as described above and if the blooms do not arrive in good shape you can safely blame the express company.

Never lay a second layer of blooms on top when you are shipping show blooms, as they will surely crush those below to some extent and damage them. If you wrap the box well on the outside with heavy paper you will not need to use much lining on the inside, and I guess it is best to wrap well outside.

Remember that all standard varieties must be up by 1 p. m. Thursday, so ship on time, and if you go yourself to set them up, see that you have them up on time. There are usually a few who stand around and talk when they ought to be hustling as hard as they can hustle, and when they are reminded that they are late they will feel offended. You know how it is. I also hope that you have written to the secretary for what labels you need as he is a hard worked man during that week and you should do what you can to make his burden lighter.

Cuttings.

If you have some more carnation cuttings to make you should do so now as soon as possible. Conditions are very favorable now, but in a few weeks we will have some very warm days and propagating will not be so sure then. What Brother Scott said in the last issue about using sand over the second time is quite true, and many firms are very wasteful in that respect. When I take out a batch of cuttings and there are no dead ones and no decayed leaves I do not hesitate to use the sand for a second batch, after allowing it to dry out thoroughly to sweeten it up some. A coarse sand will be found best in this respect, as it does not sour so quickly as a fine sand. I do not use the copper and ammonia as Mr. Scott recommends, but I do not mean to say a word against it. If I see any danger of fungus I do not use the sand over, but take it out and get in some fresh. You will have to watch your cuttings closer now on bright days because the sun is gaining strength and your houses get quite warm when it is bright. Sprinkle them oftener and shade closer and beware of draughts when the ventilators are up. Do not let them remain wet over head at night though too much.

In the last January number Mr. Osborn refers to the trouble some growers are experiencing in rooting Mrs. Nelson cuttings and he tells how he roots them successfully. I have not lost 3 per cent of all the Mrs. Nelson cuttings I put in sand this winter, although I can not say that is an easy rooter. My experience with it has been as follows: The first two weeks it will look just like any other variety, crisp and fresh, but about the third week it begins to wilt badly and then is when you want to watch it. Do not spray it overhead too much, but give plenty of water at the roots, shade closely and keep off all draughts. About the fourth week they begin to root and the danger is over. If you keep spraying them too much you will start rust and fungus, and that is what many complain of. Another thing that will help you is not to keep your plants too moist. This variety grows very strong and the young shoots are apt to be soft, which of course increases the danger of wilting, etc. Water just a little sparingly, but do not let the plants suffer, and your cuttings will be more matured and they will root more readily.

CARNATIONS AND LETTUCE.

Is it practicable to grow Grand Rapids lettuce and carnations in the same house? Will they thrive well in the same temperature, with same ventilation, etc.?

Would be obliged for a list of standard and new carnations that would make a desirable collection, and advice as to the percentage of each color to be grown.

J. W. M. & SONS.

Ohio.

I am not a lettuce grower, and I do not know just what the ideal conditions are for growing it, but I have several times seen lettuce and carnations growing in the same house and apparently with good success. Only a few weeks ago I visited a friend and he had a whole house in lettuce right next to a carnation house and no partition between the houses. The carnations were good and the lettuce looked good to me. Neither one wants much heat, but I do not know if lettuce needs any thing that would injure carnations, or if the smoke for instance, needed by the carnations, would injure the lettuce.

I do not know what varieties of carnations you have, and so I cannot know if your list is up to date or not. Here are some good ones in the various colors: Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. Nelson, Mrs. Joost and Dorothy, for pink; Flora Hill, White Cloud, Lorna and Queen Louise, for white; Crane, America, Apollo and Mrs. P. Palmer, for red; Gayety and Stella, for variegated, and Roosevelt, for crimson. Divide them as follows: 40 per cent pink, 20 per cent white, 20 per cent red and 10 per cent each varie-gated and crimson, and you will have about the right amount of each if your market is about the same as the average. If you have been growing carnations you should know what colors your market wants in quantity.

THRIPS.

I send some blooms of Goodenough carnations. Please tell me what is the matter with them. The plants are in the same bed with Norway, Bon Homme Richard, White Cloud and Flora Hill, none of which have this tendency. On the same plants there will be perfect and imperfect blooms and buds. The plants are strong and healthy and it is generally the smallest blooms that are affected. Goodenough is one of the most prolific bloomers I have. I. B. S.

Oregon.

The blooms you sent were badly dried up, in fact they were dry as hay, and I was unable to judge by them. From your letter, however, I judge that you are troubled with thrips, and the remedy is nicotine in one form or another, and a good lot of perseverance. Take one of the half-opened buds and pull the petals apart, watching all the time for a tiny insect about one-sixteenth to one-eighth of an inch long and of a yellowish brown color. That is Mr. Thrips, and he does just what you say is being done to your carnation blooms. I am not acquainted with the variety that is troubled and so I cannot say as to whether the variety is in the habit of throwing imperfect buds or not, but it is possible that such is the case.

HOW TO FIRE WITH SOFT COAL.

By the Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance Co., Hartford, Conn.

To burn bituminous coal without smoke has long been the hope of inventors and engineers, for it is generally admitted that an enormous waste occurs when any considerable amount of smoke issues from the chimney. It is true that smoke is a sure indication of imperfect combustion, but the vapor ordinarily seen coming from the chimney is not all smoke. The dense black smoke sometimes seen comes almost entirely of unconsumed carbon, but the composition of the lighter smoke is entirely different. The black smoke is usually given off when long flames of yellowish or reddish hue lap along the whole length of the boiler and perhaps pass into the flues. When the damper is right, the draft good and the fires well laid, so that all parts of the grate are evenly covered, the lazy smoke flame is changed to a short flame of intense brightness. Too much air is as capable of producing smoke as too little; for by its chilling air it makes perfect combustion impossible, and causes the same dense cloud to appear at the stack. In charging fresh coal it is a good plan to leave the furnace door ajar slightly until the fire has burned up a little so as to admit an extra supply of air, that which passes up through the grate being checked for a few moments by the fresh fuel. If the door is kept wide open the boiler will be cooled down and may be severely strained; big columns of cold air will pass right over the fire in a body and right up the chimney. But if the door is kept half or three-quarters of an inch ajar the air that is admitted will distribute itself through the furnace pretty uniformly, and will consume the gases given off by the fresh coal. As soon as the gases burn off the door again should be tightly shut.

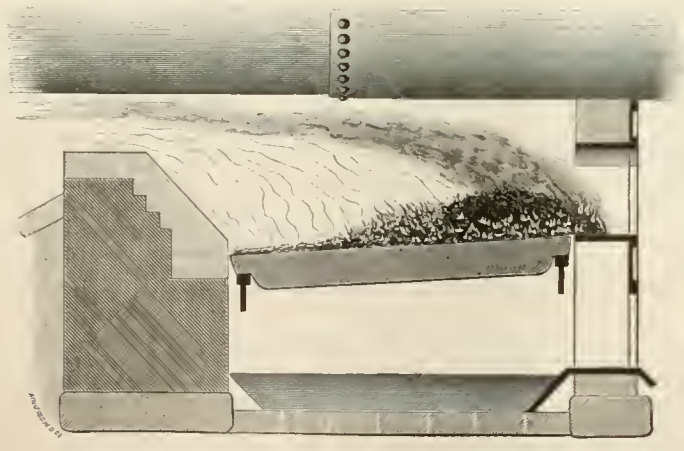

Fig. 1. Bad Firing—Side View of Furnace.

There is good and bad firing. To fire only at considerable intervals, throwing on coal so heavily as to almost shut off the draft for a time, is certainly bad. Fires run in this way and then left to themselves burn hollow, and air rushes through the holes, burning the fuel away around the edges of them, thus constantly enlarging them until after a time a strong current of cool air passes unchecked up through the grates, along the sidewalls and the bridge, and the hot gases coming from the coal are so chilled by it that it is almost impossible to make steam. The same result follows when the coal is heaped upon the center of the grate like a haycock, as shown in Figs. 1 and 2. In both these cases the invariable result is a hard-worked fireman, struggling laboriously to keep up steam and a bitter complaint from the office at the cost of the fuel consumed.

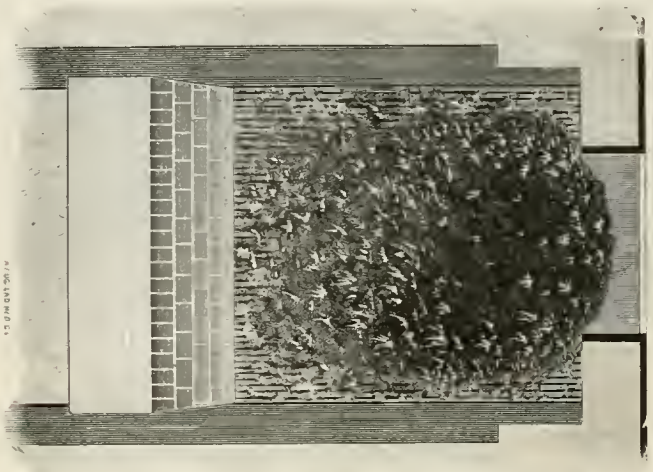

Fig. 2. Bad Firing—Plan View of Furnace.

In Fig. 3 a bituminous coal fire is shown from 6 to 9 inches thick. It is kept thicker at the back end and along the furnace walls and in the corners, because the heat radiated from the side walls and the bridge causes the coal in these places to burn faster than that on the rest of the grate. It is kept solid and in form by quickly sprinkling a thin uniform layer of coal on alternating sides of the furnace at frequent intervals, and by falling in such parts as burn hollow.

Fig. 4 illustrates what is called coke firing. The grate is covered with incandescent fuel as in Fig. 3, except near the doors where a windrow 18 inches wide and built of fresh coal extends entirely across the front of the furnace. The heat to which this windrow is exposed causes it to coke as it would in a retort in a gas works, and to give off the inflammable gases that it contains, which are burned as they pass back over the incandescent bed of fuel. When fresh air is required this mass of coke is broken up and distributed evenly over the grate, bearing in mind the necessity of keeping a good supply on those portions of the fire which tend to burn the fastest. When the fire has again become incandescent, fresh coal is put to coke, and so the firing continues. In this method of running a fire it is still all-important to prevent holes from burning through, and admitting undue quantities of air into the furnace.

NOTES OF A WAYFARER.

Out next jump was to Boston and out to Framingham. We had no more than alighted from the train than we caught sight of the genial Mr. Wm. Nicholson driving up in a cutter. He did not expect us, therefore you can imagine his surprise at seeing us. "Well, jump in, you are just in time to see the Queen; my boy and Pearce, junior, from Watertown, are waiting for this rig to go out to Goddard's place to see it growing." We had often heard Mr. Nicholson speak of his boy. On seeing the latter almost the first question we asked him was: "How much do you weigh?" "210," was his reply. He looked it, and not an ounce of superfluous flesh. We were soon at Goddard's, where the carnations are in fine shape. "The Queen" is a pure white of good size and looks like a good commercial variety, as it is quite free.

Nicholson's whole stock was as good as any we saw on our trip. Prosperity was extra fine, as was also Gov. Wolcott, which Mr. Nicholson thinks a great deal of. A bench of mignonette was also well done. Several strains were grown in separate benches, all given the same treatment, but the Dailledouze strain showed a marked improvement over others.

Mr. Nicholson, very kindly took us in hand the next day. I say very kindly, for it required almost a martyr to travel with us as he did in such a blizzard, with trains running at "any old time" but the right. It was the worst snow storm and coldest weather that had struck the "Hub" in many years. However, we managed to reach Patten's at Tewkesbury and Fisher's at Ellis.

The former's is a very neat, compact range of houses, practically all carnations. Here you can see all the best varieties grown at their best, as well as a few novelties that did not come up to expectations. A bench of Harry Fenn was to our minds the most striking lot of plants on the place. It would do C. W. W.'s heart good to see them. Mr. Patten, like everybody else, has a promising lot of seedlings, as well as a few novelties on trial—Fisher's Mrs. Patten and Nelson Fisher, and the Chicago Carnation Co.'s Her Majesty. He speaks very highly of Her Majesty and will grow it in quantity next season. Although Mr. Patten doesn't smoke, he keeps the finest brand of cigars on hand that can be found around the "Hub."

At Peter Fisher's, of course Enchantress was the magnet. You have heard and seen so much of this variety that there is nothing for us to add further than to say Mr. Fisher spoke the truth when he said it was farther ahead of the present standard varieties than was Lawson in its heyday, providing we can all do it as well as we have the latter variety. His Boston Market is undoubtedly well named. It looks to be a fine market variety, though not as fine a flower as Wolcott.

On our way home we could not refrain from stopping at Buffalo to chat with that man who knows everything pertaining to our business, but still eager to listen to the opinion of others—William Scott. We were lucky to catch him at his city place busy preparing for the expected Xmas rush. We noticed a lot of poinsettias, three in a pan with the variegated Abutilon Souv. de Bonn mixed between them. This should make a superb Xmas seller when well done. The idea is one of the junior Scott's. We were particularly struck with the decoration of the store. Black and trimmed with gold, which harmonizes first rate with the green foliage of the plants arranged tastily here and there.

Billy Kasting was out on the street looking after a big shipment of Xmas greens which had just arrived. It being a chilly day he was dressed for all the world like a sea-faring man. He was almost too busy to talk to us, so you can imagine the shekels "Billy" must have handled during the holidays. We met Al. Baur, of Erie, here, also a number of other florists who live adjacent to Buffalo. A conversation regarding "pickling" stock was started, which did not end until Mr. Baur alighted from the train at Erie, at 12 midnight.

In our reveries of our trip we could not help but wonder at the kindness and hospitality of the florist craft in general and wondered if all tradesmen were the same. We do not think so, as there is not so much in common among them and no such names as Mrs. Lawson, Wm. Scott, Mrs. Bradt, etc., to keep the ties of friendship cemented together. We take this opportunity to thank one and all for the courtesies extended to us on this trip and hope some day to return the same in kind.

REMOVING ASPHALT PAINT.

In a recent issue of the Review Mr. P. requests information as to the best method of removing asphalt paint from heating pipes. This fall we had quite an experience along this line and from our results neither scrubbing nor "firing to beat the band" will rid one of the trouble—at least, on a hot water system. On cold nights when the wind came across the prairie at sixty miles an hour or better it was necessary to "beat the band" firing, and the fumes came off in volumes, but apparently for an endless period of time. After experimenting with all sorts of chemical and mechanical devices we finally tried caustic potash, using a 10-pound can of the crystals to five gallons of water. This was sprayed on the pipes and proved quite effective. It should be applied as a fine mist, and the chemical is most active if applied when the pipes are hot. In twenty-four hours the pipes became white and coated with a saponaceous film, caused by the chemical reaction. This film can be washed off with a hose and the pipes are ready for a second spraying. On some of the pipes two heavy coats of asphalt were entirely cut off by the second application of spray, and about four applications made a fairly thorough job on all of them.

Caustic potash has strong corrosive action on the skin and must be handled with extreme care. A candy bucket, a small bucket spray pump with brass lining, and leather or—better—rubber gloves, if available, make a convenient spraying outfit.

It is needless to add that gas from asphalt and related coal tar compounds is very destructive to plant life, though each year some grower discovers this too late and is seriously perplexed as to how to get rid of the stuff.

In our case it was first planned to have the pipes painted with the old-time mixture of lamp black and oil. The painter, who was an up-to-date fellow, recommended a new paint compound of graphite ground in oil. As graphite is an inert substance and very durable it would be "just the thing." As it is the province of the Experiment Station to be one of the first to touch unknown waters, we decided to give this new paint a trial. After the work was completed it was discovered that the painter had evidently run "shy" of graphite and had substituted asphalt paint entirely on part of the pipes and used it as a second coat over the graphite on the others. When the heavy firing season came on the gas began to give serious trouble and the results were most marked on active growing plants of all kinds. The asphalt readily succumbed to the corrosive action of the potash, but when applied to the graphite asphalt mixture the action was very slow. After eight or ten applications the pipes seem to be about free from asphalt, though the graphite remains intact.

It was since learned that creosote oil or oil of wood tar was used in the graphite paint. Creosote oil is a dangerous compound to plant life and may have aggravated the trouble. At any rate, we advise the commercial florist to steer shy of graphite paint for heating pipes until more is known regarding its effect upon plant life.

PITTSBURG.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening, February 3. Although it was a wet and disagreeable night, there was a big attendance. It was election night, and all of the officers of the preceding year were unanimously re-elected for 1903.

E. C. Ludwig has some grievances against the express companies, and two months ago brought the matter before the club. I was referred to a committee which is still at work on the matter, and the sense is that they work in conjunction with the committee appointed by the S. A. F. During the discussion of the subject the Cut Flower Co. stated that it had no kick to make, as its flowers were given preference over other express matter, and when anything went wrong by delay or damage, the company wrote out a plain statement of facts and submitted it to the express company, which immediately paid the claim.

The Cut Flower Co. urged that these claims must be very clear and without a shadow of exaggeration or overcharge. Mr. Randolph, of Randolph & McClements, testified in the same vein. The moment flowers or plants addressed to them reach the railroad station, the express company loads and delivers them or it telephones to their office. When anything goes wrong the express company makes good the damage. Be sure you are absolutely correct, be moderate and just in your claim, and use common sense and discrimination in your actions, and then when you make a claim be prepared to enforce it. Several members called attention to the article by William Scott in a recent issue of the Review, and all declared it was the best and most common-sense thing on the subject they had ever seen in print.

It was Rose night at the club, and the tables were laden with many beautiful blossoms from home and distant florists. From the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. (Fred Burki) great bunches of carnations and magnificent Brides and Bridesmaids; grand flowers of the same were shown by Ernest Fisher, of Castle Shannon. About the best Franz Deegen roses yet seen in Pittsburg were shown by Heller Brothers, New Castle, Ind.

Through E. C. Ludwig the Floral Exchange of Philadelphia showed a fine lot of Brides, Bridesmaids, Golden Gates, Helen Gould, Meteors and Queen of Edgely. Ernst G. Asmus, of West Hoboken, N. J., sent a number of novelties, both of foreign and home production.

When the president read a letter from John N. May, of Summit, N. J., saying that he had shipped some roses to the club on Monday, and another from F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, N. Y., saying that he also had shipped some fern fronds and white cannas for our club meeting, and that neither of these consignments had yet arrived, our indignation against the express companies was rather pronounced. Mr. Pierson, writing since then, says he'll know why his parcel was delayed in transit.

Fred Burki told us how he grew such fine roses. They are from home-grafted plants. Whip-grafted them on Manetti in February, planted them out on benches last July, in 5 inches of soil, and 15 inches apart each way, and this is the third crop from them. Temperature 56—58 degrees; gives ventilation on every favorable opportunity, opening gradually and shutting gradually; he believes in and gives more ventilation than most growers. Soil four parts one-year rotted field sod and one part well rotted manure—cow and horse mixed. Besides the young plants he replanted a good many of last year's stock and both are doing equally well.

Brides and Bridesmaids were spoken of as the best and most remunerative general-purpose roses. Golden Gate was beautiful, but we cannot get it good in winter. Helen Gould would pass, but no one enthused over its color. The supply of Meteor in winter is nothing like equal to the demand. Liberty made our mouths water. It eclipses everything in its line. Madame Cusin is a great favorite, but as Mr. Randolph expressed himself, "What's the use, we can't get it." That is, it seems to be impossible to get enough of it for use in large decorations.

Franz Deegen was much admired and commented upon as being less subject to bull-nose than Perle; still our large decorating florists didn't seem to have room for it; their trade wants larger and brighter flowers.

I took home the Deegen roses which Mr. Asmus sent, and they opened out and kept in fine form for five days. It certainly is a good keeper and withal a fine rose. The Queen of Edgely flowers were superb and would sell on sight at a big price. But it was the general opinion of the members that nothing has yet arrived to displace the real American Beauty rose. The people know it and want it, and will pay the highest price in the market for it, and when they want or ask for it, they'll accept of no substitute, no matter how splendid it may be.

Here I may remark, talking about the prices of flowers, it was the sense of the club that every effort should be made to stop the newspaper nonsense of big or extortionate prices for Beauty roses or other flowers. Always tell the reporters the plain truth and never overdraw the matter, and if you cannot trust the reporter's fancy or memory, just write down the prices and hand the bit of paper to him. The more you can convince the people that flowers cost only a very moderate price, the more customers you will gather and the more flowers you will sell.

Ernst Asmus' letter accompanying his flowers is so interesting that I enclose it herewith. He sent the flowers as "an object lesson for your members." And it was a lesson. One by one we took up those flowers and discussed them. One of our largest growers had planted some of No. 1, and when he saw Mr. Asmus' blossoms and heard his description, he looked blue enough to exclaim: "Oh, that I had seen this flower and known these truths a year ago, how many good dollars I would have saved!" And when it was over Howard Childs remarked, "Why, a meeting like this and the information in fact obtained here are worth ten times our membership dues."

Some very fine freesias were shown by Ernest Fisher. He plants them out in benches after early chrysanthemums, and after they are cut he uses the bench room for bedding plants.

From D. Fraser came some pretty blossoms of cinerarias and fancy flowers of named Chinese primroses; also most beautiful flowers of the giant new cyclamen. He says he paid $1.25 a dozen for the seeds of these cyclamen. He also showed some lily of the valley in pots and Azalea Mollis in full bloom.

About a dozen of the members expressed their intention of attending the carnation meeting in Brooklyn this month. The railroad company offers our florists a trip to and from New York, at one and one-third fare, on the certificate plan, and good for a week. Any neighboring or western florists who wish to take advantage of this cheap rate from Pittsburg should communicate with Mr. Langhans, of the Cut Flower Co., 504 Liberty street, Pittsburg, Pa.

As our March club meeting is to be a carnation one those members who will attend the Brooklyn convention have been commissioned to get loaded with information on this flower, for our edification, and to make arrangements for an exhibition here of new flowers.

About noon on Wednesday a boy brought me two boxes from the Cut Flower Co. "These came to us by express this morning," said the boy! They were the two missing boxes. The one from Mr. May contained a lot of Mrs. Oliver Ames rose, a lot of a very heavy Souv. de la Malmaison-like rose, a red rose, evidently the same as the one Mr. Asmus showed, and a splendid compound panicle of a white rose, in get-up almost identical with Crimson Rambler. It was named Snowball, and as soon as we saw it we ordered some of it.

Mr. Pierson's box contained many fronds of their new fern and a number of fine spikes of their new canna Mont Blanc, the whitest of all cannas. The spikes were full, strong, clean and thrifty, and as soon as our foreman saw them he insisted "first time you go east I wish you'd go up there and see how he gets such fine flowers as these, at this time of year." And so I will. The color is not pure white, rather a very pale canary color; but the color is distinct and the head good.

Mr. Asmus' Letter.

I send you with this a few novelties in roses, such as I have in bloom at present. These roses I only send as an object lesson for your members, as to which varieties to avoid, providing they buy European novelties. I get a good assortment over most every year, and it is very, very seldom that I find among them one rose that suits our trade. The most of them are nothing but a lot of rubbish, which an American firm would never think of sending out. You will find the roses all numbered, beginning with No. 1, and an explanation of the different numbers, in this letter. I am sorry that I have nothing new to send you that has any value with us, as a forcing rose, outside of Franz Deegen. I have not been able to find anything since I found Liberty.

Rose No. 1 sent me on trial under number, was said to far outfoot Liberty in every respect. The bloom I send you is the first that showed a clear, bright color. The other blooms I had showed a faded blush color, and all had short stems. You can see for yourself how it compares with Liberty, flowers of which I send you for comparison. This rose, I believe, will be offered to the trade shortly.

No. 2 is a novelty of last spring, which came out under the name of Angele Mull. It was said to be a seedling of Kaiserin, bearing its elegant flowers on long stiff stems. The sample I send you will give you an idea of the elegant flower and stem. (Poor flower, poor stem.)

No. 3 was sent me for trial. It is not yet in commerce. Said to be a wonder in its coloring. An entirely new color, over which all those that saw the rose were enthused. From our standpoint, this rose couldn't be sold even to the Greeks. (Pale purplish blush.)

No. 4, another novelty, which came out under name of Antoine Marie. Said to be a beauty in every way, of large size, and rich coloring. This beauty, to my mind, wants to be looked at on a very dark night, when the lights are out.

No. 5 came out under the name of Dr. Felix Guyon, said to be orange yellow and very large; no use to us.

No. 7 and 8 are two seedlings of my own, both out of one seed pod, cross of Mme. Testout and Cusin. Last year I thought they might turn out to be something, but this year they are worse than ever. Occasionally I get some very large blooms on them, with stems two or three feet in length, from bottom shoots, but the majority, like those I send you come poor on short small stems. Will throw it away.

No. 9 is Franz Deegen, a rose that is a very free bloomer and clean grower. It is said to be a seedling of Kaiserin X Sunset X Comtesse de Frigneuse. This rose, being a yellow, will not show up at all at night time. It wants to be seen in the day time, when half expanded. It shows a beautiful orange center, and has a delicious perfume. I am sorry I could not show your members some roses of real merit, but outside of F. Deegen, I see nothing on the horizon.

I was in hopes of showing you a bunch of new purple lilac, which has found great favor in New York, but unfortunately it will not be in bloom until the end of this week. I may be able at some future meeting of the club to put before you some other roses that may interest you.

FRUIT TREE PESTS.

I send branches of pear tree covered with scale. Can you tell me what it is, also treatment, and will it spread to other trees? It killed an apple tree last year. R. H. N.

The branches, which were apparently quite dead and dry when gathered, were covered with the remains of scale insects in not very distinguishable condition. Two forms of scale are visible, a mytilaspis, or oyster shell scale, and the so-called San Jose scale. Both are bad spreaders, especially the latter. There are many treatments. An emulsion of kerosene, two gallons; whale oil soap, ½ pound, water, 1 gallon, has been found effective. The soap is boiled in the water. Add to the kerosene away from the fire and agitate until thoroughly mixed. For use in the growing season dilute with seven to nine parts water and apply with spray pump. For winter application to trunks and larger limbs stronger mixtures may be used. Care should be taken to use only enough to wet the surface without allowing the liquid to run down the trunks and collect about the crown.

A lime, salt and sulphur wash is quite effective in California, though less successfully used in the east. The ordinary formula is: Unslacked lime, 40 pounds; sulphur, 20 pounds; salt, 15 pounds. A fourth of the lime is first slaked and boiled with the sulphur in 20 gallons of water for two or three hours. The rest of the lime is slaked and together with the salt is added to the hot mixture and the whole boiled for an hour longer. Water is then added to make 60 gallons of wash. It is to be applied with a spray pump in January or February, and is estimated to cost about 5 cents per gallon applied to trees.

The Late Mrs. Krick.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Kunigunda Krick.

The death of Mrs. Kunigunda Krick, widow of Charles M. Krick, at Brooklyn, N. Y., January 17, removes a familiar figure from the list of pioneers in the trade.

Mr. Krick established one of the first floral nurseries on Long Island, starting in business a half century ago. After her husband's death in 1895, Mrs. Krick continued the business until a short time ago, and was well known to a wide circle of acquaintances in the trade.

Mrs. Krick was born in Germany in 1829 and had always enjoyed remarkably good health until the development of the heart disease that caused her death. She is survived by two sons, William C. (the manufacturer of florists' letters) and George M., and two daughters. Both sons are engaged in the business.

THE S. A. F. PEONY ASSOCIATION AND ITS CRITICS.

Regarding the point raised as to the exact wording of Mr. O'Mara's motion, which was made to give force to President Burton's recommendation that "the committee should have power to add to its numbers where desirable and to raise funds for the furtherance of the work under the sanction of the executive officers of the society," Mr. O'Mara writes from St. Augustine, Fla., where he has been for the past few weeks: "I have forgotten the exact wording of my motion, but my intent was to have it so phrased that the committee then appointed would have powers to take all the necessary steps to fully and adequately carry out the intent and purpose of President Burton's recommendation. Personally I am for whatever best conserves the general welfare of the S. A. F., and I cannot see any reason why the policy and plan of the Peony Association will not do that. If the association does nothing worse than develop the peony, and incidentally get members for the S. A. F., it should have little to fear from the executive board of the society or from the society in convention assembled."

The printed proceedings of the society did not appear until some time about Thanksgiving, and the committee had organized a month before that on the president's plan. Whether the intent of Mr. O'Mara's motion got confused in passing through the medium of the stenographer and printer is a question; but in any event it can easily be rectified at the executive meeting or at the convention.

The committee and its associated members have every reason to feel gratified at the cordial support and encouragement extended to them from all parts of the country, and they are sure they will be able to give a good account of themselves in Milwaukee. Meantime a cordial invitation is again extended to every S. A. F. member and every peony enthusiast to do what they can to forward the interests of the peony and the society. Secretary Stewart or the undersigned will cheerfully enroll any member of the society in the peony ranks free of charge and also any outsider, provided, of course, that they first join the S. A. F. Geo. C. Watson,

Sec'y S. A. F. Peony Association.

Philadelphia, Feb. 9, 1903.

[We do not see that what Mr. O'Mara intended or did not intend has anything to do with the matter. It was the motion he actually made that was indorsed by the members of the society, and we don't believe that Mr. O'Mara had any intention that an "association" should result from his motion. The invitation to all to do what they can to forward the interests of the peony and of the S. A. F. is to the point, but the offer to enroll members of the S. A. F. in the "Peony Association" is entirely gratuitous. If the "Peony Association" is a part of the S. A. F. then they are already members. Why don't the peony committee go ahead and do what it was requested to do and thereby win the approbation of the membership instead of taking action that can only result in dissension?—Ed.]

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club on Monday evening was well attended. Mr. Weathered, chairman of the annual dinner committee, reported a most satisfactory consummation to the festivity, with no club indebtedness, and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded. Resolutions of sympathy in reference to the death of Miss O'Mara, sister of ex-President O'Mara, were read by Mr. Sheridan and their presentation ordered.

The committee on "express" resolutions reported progress and a meeting of those interested in March, at which time the arguments correlated will be placed before "the powers that be."

Two new members were elected. President Troy spoke of the desirability of a special endeavor to add 150 new members to the club during 1903. At his request for suggestions to this end Mr. Morris, Mr. Elliott, Mr. Scott and Mr. Birnie waxed eloquent. Mr. Elliott's suggestion of an "outing" met with cordial recognition. Mr. Traendly was primed with dates and opportunities that only needed the club's confirmation and a motion to this end was unanimously carried. Mr. Scott gave a temperance address; Mr. Birnie quoted from Solomon and Robbie Burns, and when the smoke cleared the boat and Wetzel's Grove and the first and second of July were all booked for the celebration "in the good old summer time." Mr. Elliott was given the chairmanship of the committee as a reward for good luck last year, and full power to "Get there" was bestowed upon his excellent committee.

On account of the death of the mother of Mr. Lawrence Hafner, a committee was appointed to draw up suitable resolutions of sympathy.

Mr. Herrington announced the holding of the great mum exhibition in New York and the desirability of extensive co-operation in making it the grandest ever held in the world. Mr. Scott and Mr. Duckham ably seconded these suggestions and a committee was appointed to submit resolutions on the subject at the March meeting.

Mr. Weinberg's exhibit of orchids received the hearty thanks of the club and Mrs. J. H. Troy's exhibit of ardisia was highly commended.

An interesting discussion on antidotes for Primula obconica poisoning was participated in by Messrs. Morris and Lenker, and the evening closed with many interesting particulars concerning the coming carnation convention on the 19th and 20th, with dates for Mr. Ward's lecture and the banquet.

The next meeting of the club will take place the second Monday in March and will be "carnation night," when many exhibits of the divine flower will doubtless be in evidence.

Items.

The coal problem seems to be about solved, and the calamities so greatly feared have fortunately not materialized. Coal is down to $6.50 a ton and the thermometer is the only thing that's rising.

Florist William Diehm, of the Bronx, 212th street, lost his home by fire last week, because the engine that could have saved his property "stuck in the mud" at the foot of the hill. His aged mother was rescued with difficulty. The house was completely destroyed.

Wadley & Smythe are out with a new $600 wagon, with heavy brass trimmings, rubber tires and all the late improvements.

Mr. Humphrey, of Thorley's Fifth avenue store, has entirely recovered from his serious illness and reports an overwhelming flow of dinner orders daily.

It is rumored that one of the late additions to the Fifth avenue retail contingent has broadened into a capitalization of a quarter of a million, and that stores are to be opened on Broadway and in Washington and other cities as a consequence.

The veteran wholesaler, J. J. Perkins, has bought the store and good-will of Purdy Bros., on West Twenty-ninth street, formerly Michael Hart's, and has placed his son, R. W. Perkins, in charge of its management. This will relieve the cramped conditions prevailing in the old store, which, however, will be continued as usual, making Mr. Perkins the only wholesaler with two establishments in one city. Consignments will be sent to each separately and are to be billed at the new store to R. W. Perkins.

Chas. Klingelbeck, florist, of Middle Village, L. I., has lost his store by fire, involving a damage of $500.

The damage suit against the N. Y. C. R. R. by Albert Wadley, will be tried this week, and his friends all unite in the wish that ample remuneration may be awarded him.

The carnation convention will be in full swing before another issue, so this is an opportune moment to extend on the part of all the wholesale and retail florists of, and near the metropolis, a cordial welcome to visitors.

The marriage of a daughter of one of the Bloomingdale Bros., at Sherry's, on the fourth, gave Mr. Burnham and his brother artist an opportunity to exhibit their skill as decorators. Nearly 400 guests attended and the table decorations were especially striking. Over forty tables were occupied and mounds of Brides and white lilac predominated.

Mr. Langjahr, vice-president of the Brooklyn Horticultural Society, asks that all intending to enjoy the banquet on the 20th send him information as soon as possible so that proper preparation may be made for the addition to the number who have already signified their intention of participating. This may be done individually, by letter or by telegraph, as soon as the number can be accurately sent by the different parties from each city. He also requests that the ladies will announce their coming that proper arrangements for their entertainment may be made in time.

The annual meeting of the Brooklyn Horticultural Society has been postponed until after the close of the convention. To the list of speakers has been added the name of President Burton, of the S. A. F. O. H.

The Ford Bros., of West Thirtieth street, have a fine stock daily of tulips and daffodils from Hillebrecht, of Secaucus, and a large assortment of carnations from Swayne, and Thompson Bros., of Kennett Square, Pa., which town is the birthplace of the Fords.

Dunne & Co. are turning their store into an elegant office and sample room, intending hereafter to keep their stock in a large new warehouse, where the facilities they will enjoy have for a long time been needed.

Riedel & Co. report a gradual and encouraging weekly addition to their volume of business.

Igoe Bros., the carnation support manufacturers of 226 North Ninth street, Brooklyn, invite their friends and customers to call and see their manufactory.

The "lily king" says the Easter flower is coming in weekly with better quality and constant increase of numbers.

The violet headquarters report floods of 50,000 daily with the greatest demand for the medium-priced quality, and the best specials in bunches of 100 seldom going above 60 cents.

Traendly & Schenck report an immense sale of tulips in boxes and their windows are always full of them.

Sidney Nash, son of Mr. J. Nash, of the Cut Flower Company, will return from England on Saturday.

The Arion ball is over and Hanft Bros. have again outdone all previous decorative efforts.

J. I. Craw, the box manufacturer, whose headquarters are with the Stumpp & Walter Company, has just returned from a six weeks' trip to Europe.

McManus supplied the orchids for an elaborate dinner decoration by Theo. Lang last week, at which cattleyas abounded.

Mrs. H. H. Berger has recovered from a severe attack of la grippe, which is almost epidemic here.

Patrick O'Mara is still at St. Augustine, Fla., much the better for his recreation, and will return to the city next week.

A sure evidence of gentle spring is the announcement of the auction sales at Cleary's, March 3, and at Elliott's, March 10. Mr. Cleary has had a tussle with the grippe, from which he is now recovering.

At the Gould theater party and supper last week, seven tables were decorated with round baskets of spring flowers in the center of each. First, lilacs and pansies; second, valley and peach blossoms; third, red and yellow tulips; fourth, double flowering peach; fifth, narcissus; sixth, freezias; seventh, jonquils. An immense bank of forsythia in the conservatory added to the spring effect. The ladies' corsages were of 150 violets and three gardenias, and gardenias were the boutonnieres.

The Bowne wedding on Monday at the Metropolitan Club, was one of "the events of the season," and the "Robert Burns" dinner at Carnegie's on Thursday was redolent of heather, genista, white lilac, blooming azaleas and flowering smilax. All flowers used were in vases of unique design and great value. At the Metropolitan two immense horse shoes were used, attached to which were forty vases, in each of which were eight Bridesmaids. The Bride's initials, H. B., were worked in ribbons on the side and on the table six immense silver loving cups held in each 36 Bridesmaid roses. Immense banks of palms completed the work. In all of these Alex. McConnell, of Forty-fifth street and Fifth avenue, officiated.

On Tuesday Siebrecht & Son had the Barbey wedding at St. Bartholomew's Church, and at the residence of the bride, one of the largest functions of the season, in which American Beauty and Liberty roses predominated. The curtain effects were beautiful, cape smilax and valley being used. The doors were festooned with Asparagus plumosus and roses, each room in a different color. Everywhere the effect of climbing roses was elaborated, corridor, stained glass roof and windows. Liberty being used for this purpose with cape smilax. At the church a natural arch of palms was made in the altar, bunches of lilies and white roses with ribbons on the newel posts and pews and a great bank of lilies, viburnum, marguerites and white azaleas reached to the organ loft and completed one of the finest effects of the year in church decoration.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

MILWAUKEE.

I suppose most of the readers of the REVIEW are aware of the calamity which befell to our fire department at a recent fire. We lost our gallant chief and three of his men through the breaking of a carboy of nitric acid. The inhalation of the fumes was fatal many hours later, although no ill effects were noticed immediately after the fire. About ten more men of the various companies are not as yet pronounced out of danger. The chief and his three assistants were given a public burial. The bodies were placed in the large lobby of the City Hall, where thousands of people gazed upon the remains and paid their last respects.

The floral tributes were beautiful and the caskets were completely covered with flowers. The rotunda was heavily decorated with black drapery and palms. Upon the railing of the second floor was a big cluster of lights and in the center the words "The Last Call." Among the striking floral emblems were a large cross about eight feet high, made mostly of lilies and valley, from the city officials, and four alarm boxes made of red carnations, with inscription "45," signifying the last call box, which were tributes from the fire department. The police department sent four large stars. The Canadian government sent an immense wreath with inscription "Canada's Sympathy for a Hero." The Press Club sent a large wreath of lilies and roses with inscription "30," which signifies in a telegraph or newspaper office "good night" or "finished."

There were also many fine pieces sent from the chiefs of various cities, as well as a great many from the fire underwriters, newspaper offices, private corporations, friends and relatives. In fact, the entire sides of the rotunda were banked with flowers. The work of making up most of the pieces was pretty well divided. Joseph Chacona, Currie Bros., Peter Kapsalis, William Edlefsen and McKenny & Fox all made some very large pieces as well as numerous smaller ones. The market florists also had a liberal share of the work. C. C. P.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Fifty per cent more goods coming in and 25 per cent less call for them sizes up our situation very nicely. Reasons for increase of stock are readily seen, but who can account for the sudden changes in demand, which take place simultaneously "from Maine to Omaha," as Mr. McCarthy once expressed it?

Quality of goods is improving naturally, except perhaps in the case of roses. This crop seems quite variable among the different growers, but hardly averages up to a proper standard.

The bulb men are having the best time of any one this winter. Their stock seems to be in unprecedented demand all along and none of them has hardly lost a flower. They do it very simply, too. I think John Fee is one of the best of them, and they are all good men, too.

His place is more readily reached, so I took it in. It is but a short nickel out on a Forest Hills underground elevated car, just off the west coast of Franklin Park, among the wild breakers, formed by the finest specimens of Roxbury pudding stone you ever saw. It is therefore a grandly picturesque place.

I was surprised to find his necessary glass acreage so small. He grinds 300,000 bulbs through a mill of 3,000 feet of glass ground with perhaps half as much vault space, now containing hundreds of flats stacked away, with their contents coming out for all the world like chickens from an incubator!

These stand almost still, however, until a new grist is wanted in the "mill," when same are barrowed over, when from ten days to six weeks' time is necessary to produce full fledged "pullets," according to the season of the year. He cuts an incredible amount from a small space, run cool on a small coal bill, markets his crop awfully easy because he does not try to follow the ups and downs of the market very much.

For thirty years he has associated with those grim old pudding-stone boulders, naturally absorbing some of their rugged characteristics. He is one of those men a conscientious man can speak highly of without feeling he has said too much, and you will always find him where you leave him.

Now don't tumble all over yourselves going into the bulb business because it looks so easy. Fee and his competitors have the traffic well in hand and a man must be a cuckoo indeed to beat them at their own game.

J. S. MANTER.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

All kinds of flowers are scarce at present, excepting perhaps Harrisii lilies and lily of the valley. The supply of violets is growing less and the price is advancing. Roses are sold about as soon as they are unpacked, the wholesaler having none left to put in the ice-box. In fact, were it not for bulbous stock, the ice-boxes would be empty most of the time. Carnations are in fair supply, but the demand is very much in excess of it, especially for white. Narcissus are substituted for them in many cases, also white tulips.

American Beauties are scarce in all grades, but there are prospects for an increase in supply shortly. A great many orders are being booked for St. Valentine's day, especially for violets.

Thomas Windrum, D. Sunderbruch, W. Murphy, R. Witterstaetter and W. K. Partridge made up a party of Cincinnati florists and journeyed into Indiana last week. They visited Richmond and New Castle, and from their report of what they saw the trip was well worth the trouble. W. K. Partridge and R. Witterstaetter took a side trip to La Fayette.

There is a bill before our Board of Public Service calling for a $1,000,000 bond issue, to be used in extending our park system. Should this bill pass it would be a great thing for Cincinnati.

We have some very pretty parks, still there is room for much improvement.

Paul J. McNeill, formerly with J. M. McCullough's Sons, is now manager of the seed business of Howard & Kyte, commission merchants.

Mr. Weltz, of Wilmington, Ohio, was a visitor looking for flowers for a large amount of funeral work.

C. J. Ohmer.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market is in that very active state sometimes described as the pre-Lenten rush. Choice flowers of many varieties bring high prices, higher even than those quoted in the tables. There are not nearly enough Beauties to fill the orders, but indications point to a larger supply toward the first of March. Liberties are in great demand, specials bringing almost as much as fine Beauties. Carnations continue in active demand with prices about the same as a week ago.

Sweet peas are selling very well. Edward Reid has about a monopoly of this flower; he sent 3,200 in one order lately, 2,000 pink and 1,200 white.

Leo Niessen has a novelty in cut sprays of Acacia pubescens. The quantity of violets coming in continues to increase; they are of excellent quality, but it is very hard to sell them all.

Valley is moving a little better. S. S. Pennock, who receives some extra fine stock from his brother, has had little difficulty in selling it, even throughout the last fortnight.

The retailers welcome the profusion of spring bulbous flowers as desirable material for their lunch and dinner decorations. They talk spring flowers to their customers and produce many charming effects.

The Fever.

Our beloved city has been suffering from three kinds of fever lately. There is the fever that comes with grippe, the dread typhoid from our bad water, which is a disgrace, and the building fever. The first can be cured, the second may be cured, but the third is incurable; once get it in your veins and the case is hopeless.

John Burton was the first victim this season. Now we have two more known cases and one suspected.

Adolph Fahrenwald will build a range of seven houses, six of them 150 ft. by 14 ft. 6 in. and one of them 150 by 15 ft. 9 in. These houses are to be used for growing Liberty, of which rose Mr. Fahrenwald is the leading grower for this market. The pattern will be somewhat similar to that used last summer by George Reinberg, of Chicago—two beds and two walks to each house except the last, which has an extra walk, spaces open between the houses.

Edward Tull will build three houses and rebuild one house of the same dimensions just described. His house will be 7 ft. high at the gutters and 12 ft. at the ridge. They will be used for growing Beauties and Liberties, with which roses Mr. Tull has done well. The Lord & Burnham Co. will furnish the roofing material for both these ranges.

It is also rumored that Jacob Becker will build two houses for his new rose, Ideal.

Improvements.

Henry F. Michell has remodeled the third floor of his seed warehouse, putting in fully 2,000 compartments for seed packages, each compartment neatly labeled and arranged alphabetically. There are also a great number of self-closing seed drawers with a capacity of two bushels each. This department will be used exclusively for filling mail orders. Its system will insure much greater rapidity in filling orders than has been possible in the past. A. Durr, formerly with Peter Henderson & Co., is in charge of this floor. He has an experience of 25 years in the seed business.

Edward Reid has improved his facilities for handling stock by well arranged shelves in the new basement under his store. A very fine stock of carnations and many other flowers can be seen here. A heavy local and shipping business keeps the force busy.

Notes.

John Ruppert, with Henry A. Dreer, has returned from a business trip through this state and New York. He sold a large number of palms, chiefly for growing on, and did exceptionally good business for the season of the year.

The committee in charge of the question of express rates is pushing matters vigorously.

D. T. Conner returned on Tuesday from a business trip to Cleveland, O.

Wm. J. Baker is receiving some good lily of the valley.

Mrs. Muir, of Scranton, Pa., was in the city lately.

Albert Woltemate lectured last Monday evening before the Germantown Horticultural Society.

Francis Canning was the first speaker at the Farmers' Institute meeting on Wednesday.

J. D. Eisele is expected on the Lucania, which arrives on Saturday.

Frank Ebeney, formerly with the Murdocks at Pittsburg, is here and expects to locate in this city.

Leo Niessen is receiving some very fine freesia.

E. G. Asmus, of West Hoboken, N. J., was in town last week. He went out to see the Liberties at Hillside and returned much pleased.

It is rumored that Captain Moss will take a team of bowlers to Brooklyn next week.

ORANGE, N. J.

Annual Banquet.

The annual banquet of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was enjoyed on Wednesday evening, February 4, and a fine attendance demonstrated the life of this vigorous organization. The officers for the year are George Smith, president; Wm. J. Bennett, vice-president; Malcolm MacRorie, treasurer; Jos. A. Manda, secretary.

The banquet was preceded by the regular business meeting, and the president's address was full of good advice and projects, looking to the best interests of the society. Four new members were elected. The announcement of the death of the society's life member, Doctor J. Mandeville, was made.

Mr. George Smith made a witty and eloquent toastmaster and his address of welcome was as glowing as his happy face. Dr. Kitchen gave a carefully prepared speech, dwelling on the coal question, the express situation, the pleasures of success and the joy of making others happy. He spoke eloquently on the delights of the gardener's occupation, its basis of joy and its contributions to the beauties and comforts of life. Mr. W. A. Manda gave a practical talk on the values of monthly exhibitions, and the benefit of harmony between employers and employes. W. J. Stewart spoke of the contributions to the Orange gardening settlement in the number of Boston gardeners that had come from the "Hub" to make this place their home, and add to its beauty and development.

Arthur Herrington, whose nerves were in fine condition from the absorption of all the celery in sight, waxed eloquent in reference to the Chrysanthemum Society of America, and its fine exhibition in Chicago. He predicted a grander show this year, and tendered the invitation of the American Institute to the New Jersey Floricultural Society, to what he declared would be "the greatest mum show the world has ever seen." The 'possum story closed his discourse, and Mr. Robert Carlstrom, of the Hartford, Conn., parks followed with anecdotes that would make the wooden nutmegs of his state rattle and shake their sides in sympathy.

Mr. Chas. Totty, president of the Morris County Horticultural Society, followed in a fraternal talk, witty, helpful and congratulatory, and Mr. Chas. Atkins, the secretary, told of his exhibition experiences and the best methods of making the monthly meetings interesting and drawing, including among his prospective attractions for his home society the sport of bowling, which hereafter is to be an addenda to the club's provisions.

The "Orange boys," Mr. Duff, Mr. Hays, Mr. Manda and Mr. Bennett, all made modest addresses and David Rose sang the "Banks and Braes of Bonny Dee." The New York representative of the Review proved in his usual way that it was an orange and not an apple that led Eve astray, and worried the first private gardener. The strains of "Auld Lang Syne" concluded the program.

J. Austin Shaw.

The Orange dinner was a great success and highly creditable to the committee in charge of the affair. Your regular correspondent, J. Austin Celery Shaw, will doubtless tell you in his own euphonious way who was there and what was said. I will confine myself to the splendid exhibits of carnations present, and an explanation of the monthly exhibit scheme this society has in operation.

In new carnations Peter Fisher sent Enchantress, Nelson Fisher, Boston Market and Mrs. M. A. Patten. With the exception of Boston Market, which was highly commended, these varieties all received the society's certificate. Enchantress is now well known and does not need any description here. Mrs. M. A. Patten is a light variegated and a really beautiful variety with all the earmarks of a winner about it. Nelson Fisher, a bright cerise, also impressed me very favorably. Boston Market, white, suffered by comparison in size with Reuter's Lillian Pond and a splendid white seedling of John N. May's, both of which received a certificate.

This unnamed seedling was the gem of the collection. Very large, the purest white, with beautifully shaped petals, it would remind one of a white camellia in its general effect. Of its habits I know nothing, of course, but it is to be hoped that it will be shown in Brooklyn, so all the experts can pass on it.

Greenhouses of Mr. N. Grievelding, Merrill, Wis.

Tiger was also shown. Candor compels me to confess that I do not care for its color, but that is only my own opinion and I realize that there are others.

Several promised exhibits of new varieties did not materialize, so they were most likely delayed in transit.

The exhibits from the local gardeners of standard varieties were very fine. Mr. Bennett's Olympias being the finest flowers we have ever seen of this variety. Mr. Hayes deserves particular mention for his Prosperity, which were of wonderful size and color, and Peter Duff was not one whit behind with Lawson and other varieties.

George Smith set up a very fine vase of roses and Mr. Macrorie, a grand display of Lorraine begonias.

This society has instituted a competition of exhibits to run throughout the year, the awards to be four silver cups, one each for plants, flowers, vegetables and fruits. The exhibits each month to be judged by a scale of points and the grand total of points to determine the winners in the respective classes. This competition will, it is hoped, hold the interest of the members and keep the attendance up to high water mark.

President George Smith makes an excellent presiding officer and looking at the society with the unbiased eye of an outsider I predict for it one of the most successful years of its history.

CHAS. H. TOTTY.

A WISCONSIN FLORIST.

We illustrate in this issue the greenhouse establishment of Mr. Nic Greivelding, at Merrill, Wis. Mr. Greivelding is a gardener of the old school. He worked with his father, who conducted a nursery and seed establishment in Germany, and after severing his connection there he went to Paris and put in several years in large private establishments. He later came to this country and found employment with the Salzer Seed Company. His first venture was at Sparta, Wis., where he conducted an establishment for seven years and then sold out to Z. K. Jewett. His present establishment at Merrill is built on modern lines and right in the heart of the city, being directly opposite the court house and on all street car lines. He has five houses, each 100x18, all heated by steam, also a dwelling house, potting shed and barn. Mr. Greivelding's hobby is carnations and all the newer sorts are grown on his place, as well as some fine seedlings of his own.

CHICAGO.

The Market

The supply has considerably increased and prices are easier. There is now plenty of roses, except Beauties and red sorts. Special Brides and Maids rarely reach above $10 and good stock can be had at $6 to $8. The poorest sells as low as $3, though not many are in this class. In carnations few other fancies than Prosperity reach beyond $4 and excellent stock can be had at $3. As will be seen by referring to our quotations in this issue there has been a slight lowering in prices, nearly all through the list. The buyer will certainly have his innings now. With plenty of stock he is in shape to make a profit on the naturally increasing trade at this season.

Carnation Meeting.

The annual carnation exhibition and meeting of the Florists' Club was held in Handel Hall, Tuesday afternoon and evening. The exhibition was not so extensive as in previous years, but there were some interesting features. Of these the new light pink carnation Phyllis, shown by W. N. Rudd, attracted most attention. The fact that it captured the first prize for vase of 50 blooms with Enchantress in competition added to the interest. Phyllis gives promise of being one of the money making sorts. It is but fair to Enchantress to say that the blooms displayed on this occasion were not equal in quality to those previously seen here. They seemed to be entirely lacking in substance, going to sleep in a few hours. It looked to some as though this result may have been due to overfeeding. Mr. Thompson would certainly have done better to keep these blooms out of competition. He was first in the class for 25 blooms with Gov. Wolcott, which continues to increase its reputation as a good white. He also won the prize for best collection, having much the largest exhibit.

Messrs. F. F. Benthey and F. W. Timme acted as judges, and scored the seedlings shown as follows: Phyllis, light pink, W. N. Rudd, 91 points; No. 130, crimson, F. Dorner & Sons' Co., 90 points; No. 193, pink, Dorner, 87 points; Alice Kennicott, by J. T. Anthony, 80 points; No. 38, by C. J. Reardon, 70 points; No. 15, white, W. N. Rudd, 87 points. Those receiving 85 points or more received certificates. A fine vase of the new yellow rose Franz Deegen was shown by the South Park Floral Company.

At the meeting in the evening action was taken that may have an important bearing on the express rate problem. By resolution the secretary was instructed to request the S. A. F. to take up and investigate the question of the legality of the business methods of the various express companies in the United States. It was stated in the meeting by people who ought to know that the relations between the companies constitute a trust, which is illegal, and that by subpœning any express agent and bringing his filed orders from his superiors into court ample evidence could be secured to successfully invalidate the charters of the companies. It was suggested that in case the managers of the companies do not restore the old rate peaceably then the S. A. F. should employ an attorney to bring suits to invalidate their charters. The knowledge that such action would be taken would undoubtedly help to make the managers see wherein they had erred in raising the rate on cut flowers.

Mr. Rudd donated to the club the prizes he had won, requesting that the sum be made the nucleus of a fund to establish a club room that shall have a pair of bowling alleys. He added $25 to the donation to give the matter a start. Mr. Philip Foley also donated $25 and a committee was then appointed to secure further donations.

Various Items.

The Chicago Wholesale Cut Flower Association has prepared a form of petition to the express companies in line with the suggestion of Mr. Pieser, that appeared in these notes last week, and in the preamble states that since the increased rate went into effect the shipments of cut flowers in and out of Chicago have fallen off 30 per cent.

A note will be found elsewhere in this issue regarding the trip to the Brooklyn convention of the Carnation Society.

Coal is still high in price, but cut flowers are cheaper.

The Gloede Floral Company started up again at Evanston, February 1. They were obliged to shut down some time ago as the result of a freeze out due to carelessness of contractor in putting in the heating system; the loss amounting to several thousand dollars.

Plans are being made to add 158 acres to Lincoln Park, 22 acres to be purchased and the remainder to be taken from Lake Michigan by filling in.

Recent visitors: J. A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; Jerome Bock, Burlington, Ia.; Geo. A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill.; C. A. Maxson and W. C. Cook, Kalamazoo, Mich.; Mr. Neal, Worcester, Mass.

John Thorpe is reported to be on the sick list.

Jos. Foerster made an average of 226 in three games in the local bowling league last week.

Mrs. O. W. Frese and son are at Battle Creek.

CHICAGO TO BROOKLYN.

A number of Chicago florists will travel to the Carnation Society Convention at Brooklyn, N. Y., by the Pennsylvania Lines, taking the train leaving Chicago at 3 p. m., Tuesday, February 17, and reaching Brooklyn at 8:30 p. m. the evening of the following day, Wednesday, the 18th. This is the only line that carries passengers from the west directly to Brooklyn, it having a ferry boat that carries its passengers from the Jersey City station direct to Brooklyn. The fare is $20 going and one-third of this returning, on the certificate plan. Through sleeper and dining car.

Those who expect to attend the convention from Chicago or points farther west are cordially invited to travel with this party. Berths in sleeping car may be reserved and further information obtained by addressing H. B. Dering, assistant general passenger agent, Pennsylvania lines, 248 South Clark street, corner Jackson, Chicago.

ST. LOUIS.

Trade Conditions.

The business done by the retailers last week was really encouraging, and the different large establishments report trade as never better than at the present time. There is a shortage of stock at the wholesale houses, and most of their supplies have to be procured from outside of the city.

Prices on all kinds of stock with the exception of violets have kept up since the holidays. Last week, Brides, Maids, and roses of this class, sold as high as $10 per 100 for first grades. Beauties are scarce and at no time this season has there been a surplus of good blooms. Those in the market at present are short-stemmed and very much deformed and are not salable. Good carnations are holding up well at top prices. Some extra fine Joost, Lawson, White Cloud and Guardian Angel were graded as fancies and sold out clean, while others had equally as good demand, especially white, as funeral work seems plentiful. Violets are very plentiful and are coming in 10,000 lots, which sell at $3 per 1,000. As other flowers are scarce, these sell well. Pilcher, Gross and the Ude boys are supplying this market with some of the best.

Bulb stuff sells fast, owing to the scarcity of other stock, valley being about the only slow seller the past week. A few daffodils are in, and these, with tulips, sell well. Harrisii and callas are also selling well.

Since my last report we have had some cold weather with snow, which will have the effect of keeping stock scarce. In talking with some of our local growers the past week nearly all of them say that they are off crop at present, but the chances are that the first week in Lent will see stock of all kinds in great abundance in this market.

News Notes.

Mr. Ralph W. Ward was in the city last week in the interest of W. Hagemann & Co., of New York. Mr. Ward reports that he has had a fine trade in plants and bulbs.

Mr. Bruecker, of Mareus, and W. A. Jablonsky and John Steidle, of Clayton, are sending in some fine carnations. None of them, however, is sending to the commission houses, as the output of these growers is taken by Theo. Miller, Mrs. M. M. Ayers and F. C. Weber.

Mr. Tony Peterson, formerly of this city, is now assistant to the head gardener at the Soldiers' Home, Dayton, Ohio. Tony has many friends here who wish him success in his new position.

The entertainment of the club on Saturday promises to be a grand affair. Everything is in readiness. The time for accepting invitations is limited to Saturday noon, as it is necessary to know how many to provide for. President Dunford in a letter from Florida regrets very much his inability to be present at the entertainment and wishes the members and their friends an enjoyable time. A mandolin club will be furnished by F. B. Call, of the St. Louis Carnation Co., to play for the dance.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Continued cold, frosty weather is the climatic condition here for the last week. Thermometer 30 F. this (Feb. 6th) morning and the weather prophet predicts the same kind for some time to come.

Tulips have made their appearance and help to liven the florists' windows. They are selling wholesale at $2.50 per hundred. Violets still very plentiful, but the stems are somewhat shorter on account of the frost. Daffodils in any quantity at $1 per hundred. Narcissus, paper white, begging at 50c per hundred.

Roses hold their own better than anything. Good Beauties are scarce and sell at $2.50 to $4 per dozen. Brides and Maids are in short supply and sell at $1 to $1.50 per dozen for the best stock and 50 to 75 cents per dozen for short-stemmed. Kaiserin and Liberty are selling at $1 for medium grades. Carnations have not changed in price or quality. Fancy, such as Lawson, Prosperity, Estelle and a few others, sell at 50c and the balance at 35c per dozen.

The yellow flowered acacia (Acacia Molissima) is brought into town in large quantities from the surrounding country, and many of the stores as well as the street venders use a great deal of it. It is a splendid flower to use for decorating. Keeps for a week in water and has a pleasant odor.

Notes.

The writer made a visit to the establishment of Mr. Sydney Clack at Menlo Park several days ago and found his houses in splendid shape as to order and quality of flowers grown. Mr. Clack has a large shipping business with Oregon and Washington and has a large quantity of valley, carnations and lilies to cut from.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Business in cut flowers is not in such a flourishing condition as when reported last; still, it could be worse. So far as large decorations for balls, teas or weddings were concerned, snakes in Ireland were never scarcer!

Among the wholesalers there has not been much change in the prices of the best grade flowers. It has not been possible to clear out completely, and left-over stock has had to be cut down in price in order to get it out of the way.

We have had another week of bright weather, which brought large quantities of good roses to this market. The prices which held up so well on roses this season, are now on the wane. Colored carnations are plentiful, but white ones still continue scarce.

There is no change in the prices on bulbous stock. A sufficient supply is now arriving to meet the demand.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club, the express rates were again debated. Mr. Randolph said that he had no complaint to make as to the increased rates. He is willing to pay double rates, if such would guarantee to him a quicker service. The committee having this matter in charge will report at the next meeting.

Wm. Lauch is sending the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., quantities of very good freesia and some white lilacs.

Frank Britenbaugh, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia, is now out of danger.

J. J. Fuchs has invested in a new delivery wagon.

Wm. Drews has opened a store for the sale of cut flowers, seeds and plants, at Braddock, Pa.

Visitors: S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia; B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia; W. A. Herbert, Wellsville, Ohio.

Hoo-Hoo.

DETROIT.

At the meeting of the club in January, it was decided to hold a carnation exhibit at the next meeting, on February 4, but the chairman of the entertainment committee and the president went one better and made it the occasion of a dance, to which Tom, Dick and Harry were invited with their best girls and a very enjoyable time was had, at Harmonic Hall.

The exhibit was quite extensive and some good blooms were shown both by outsiders and local growers.

The most notable ones from outside, were made by the Chicago Carnation Co., which were staged by that genial light-weight, Mr. Jas. Hartshorne, and consisted of Harlowarden, Her Majesty, Marshall Field and Higinbotham; also one by Boehringer Bros., of Bay City, consisting of Daybreak Perfection and several seedlings. Chas. Frueh & Sons showed a new red seedling that was very fine. E. T. Graves sent President McKinley. Mr. Murphy sent his new White. Hopp & Lemke, of Grand Rapids, contributed a beautiful vase of their new rose.

Some of the new carnations arrived too late to be seen, which was very much regretted, as all were anxious to see the new varieties.

Among those staged by the local growers was a vase of 50 blooms of Lawson, by Jas. Taylor, which would have been a prize winner anywhere. At present we are sure of five representatives at the Brooklyn meeting, viz., G. H. Taepke, E. H. Beard, Phil. Breitmeyer, Norman Sullivan and Rag. A few, to be sure; but we go strong in the determination that the meeting of 1904 shall be held in Detroit. We shall go early, so as to be on the ground first, leaving Monday evening, the 16th, and arrive in Brooklyn Tuesday evening and begin the good work of exhortation for Detroit.

Seed Trade News.

BULLETIN No. 21 of the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., is devoted to a "List of American varieties of vegetables for the years 1901 and 1902," prepared by W. W. Tracy, Jr., and is a document that should be in the hands of every seedsman. The name of every variety catalogued during the years noted is given, together with all similar names and synonyms, and by a system of abbreviations each seedsman using the name is indicated. The volume contains over 400 large pages and the work has evidently been done in a very painstaking and thorough manner.

BY A DECISION of the U. S. General Appraisers at New York, Jan. 29, dill and parsley seeds are each found to be "seeds aromatic," and to be used chiefly as drugs, and are therefore free of duty under paragraph 548, tariff act of 1897, specially enumerating "seeds aromatic, * * * which are drugs and not edible," etc., and are not dutiable under paragraph 254 of said act, as "seeds of all kinds."

The prevailing high prices on nearly all seeds will effectually prevent many country merchants from handling the usual quantity, which will force planters to buy from the seed store direct. This fact alone will greatly benefit the catalogue houses and a season of highly satisfactory business seems to be assured to all.

PUEBLO, COLO.—The Pierce Seed & Produce Co. report that alfalfa seed is now practically all out of first hands and price is advancing. The Arkansas valley in Colorado will have furnished 60 to 70 carloads this season.

CLEVELAND, O.—A meeting of local market gardeners was held Feb. 7 to organize a Market Gardeners' and Producers' Association. G. A. Tilton was chairman of the committee on organization.

Judging from the much greater expense to which many seedsmen have gone with their 1903 catalogues, prices must be well maintained in order to cover this extra outlay.

THE executive committee of the American Seed Trade Association met in Washington Jan. 13 and arranged a program for the annual convention to be held in Philadelphia June 23 to 25.

PEORIA ILL.—J. C. Murray has opened a seed store at 321 South Adams street, with Mr. John Michie as manager. He expects to make this the finest seed store in the city.

JAPANESE millet is another variety of seed that is short this season. This variety of millet is largely used in the east and there is not enough seed to supply the demand.

DENVER, COLO.—The Lee Pioneer Seed Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. H. M. Lee, M. S. Reed and J. A. Graham are the incorporators.

THE DEMAND for nearly all varieties of wax beans is good and the trouble is to find any dealer who has a surplus.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The State Florists' Association held its February meeting on Feb. 3 with a very good attendance. The new president, Fred Dorner, Jr., after being duly installed, took the chair. The principal subject for discussion was the fall flower show. After everybody had his say, it was decided to give the whole project over into the hands of the merchants to run. These gentlemen have selected Mr. Irving Bertermann as secretary and John Bertermann as superintendent of exhibition. Next year we hope to have a giant coliseum in this city, and it is planned to open it with a flower show.

Mr. John Bertermann entertained Messrs. E. G. Hill, Fred Dorner, J. A. E. Haugh, John Hartje, F. Junge, A. F. J. Baur, E. A. Nelson, Irving Bertermann and H. W. Rieman at dinner on Feb. 3, and these gentlemen arranged a fine premium list for the fall show. The premiums are much larger and the classes have been changed considerably to meet the new demands of an up-to-date exhibition. These premiums are fully guaranteed by the merchants. The advance list will be out in a few days.

Owing to the bad weather during nearly the entire winter high grade carnations are rather scarce and not a great many will find their way to Brooklyn. Only one florist from this city is to attend, and Mr. Baur has been looking all around for some one to make the trip with him.

All are very busy these days with decorating and funeral work and all good stock finds ready sale. Roses especially seem off crop all around and good ones are reported scarce. Carnations are some better. A. B.

CHATHAM, N. J.

The Chatham growers held their usual meeting on Saturday night, Jan. 24. A committee on automobiles made an interesting report. The parties who do the shipping to New York were present and stated their experiences and successes. Three weeks have passed since wagons have been in use and only one Chatham grower now ships by railroad. Although admittedly a more expensive method than by rail, the wagons have saved this town already many dollars in express charges. Another saving is a more significant one: viz., the boxes are not smashed. That item alone is worth the change. To this advantage is added the contentment that comes from having one's flowers on the agents' tables early in the morning, the moment their places are ready for business. Altogether, the feeling at the meeting was one of satisfaction. Summit growers are also using the wagon express, and it is a surprise that Madison, our big neighbor on the other side, is not yet doing likewise. Visitor in town: Mr. T. W. Lydecker, of Englewood, N. J., on express business. M.

BUFFALO.

Very sorry, Mr. Editor, that my notes must be so brief. Accidents and price of coal give me but little time to breathe, much less to write. Business has been fairly good. I am not speaking about myself, but from those I have interviewed. We are trying to be very economical for a week that we may be able to attend that great event at Brooklyn.

We have had Messrs. Nickman, W. Mott, Ringier, Skidelsky and several other gentlemen to visit us lately, and among others, a Mr. Wade, representing that very good man, August Rhotert. Of all progressive and offensive young students he takes the cake, and before he makes a successful drummer he will have to go through many a severe trial. W. S.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The weather has been as disagreeable and undesirable for growing as it possibly could be. No sunshine; nothing but dark, lowering skies, light snows and continued cold weather, until, at the present moment, it is raining.

Carnations are mostly off crop, and roses very much so; demand is far in excess of supply, and prices remain stiff and higher than they ever were at this time of the year. Carnations run from 35 cents to 75 cents per doz. Most of the ordinary stock brings 50 cents.

Ordinary roses bring from $1 to $1.50 per doz.; American Beauties from $1.50 to $5 per doz., and there are very few at that.

Violets are plentiful, but hold up well in price, especially white ones. Campbell do not sell as well as the darker ones, which are very fine now.

Romans, valley and paper whites are in good supply, and sell at 50 cents per doz.

A petition is being circulated for signature, remonstrating against the excessive express rates. Every florist is signing it. The glass question is being agitated, with a really good chance of something being accomplished. Geo. F. Crabb had an interview with Wm. Alden Smith, congressman, who assured him he was personally favorable to having the tariff removed from glass, and would do all he could for us; but holds out little hope of anything being accomplished at this short session; but the matter will get under good headway and at the next session will have a better show. G. F. C.

RADIATION.

Will you kindly tell me the "ratio of radiation" of greenhouse heating for hot water and steam; that is, how many feet (cubic) of space a foot of radiation will heat in this part of the country. In making changes it often becomes necessary to repipe a house, and would like to know so that we can figure from an expert's standpoint instead of guessing what will be needed.

C. M. Niuffer.

Springfield, Ohio.

Your correspondent does not give sufficient data to admit of a definite answer.

Assuming that his greenhouses are commercial houses of ordinary good construction, well glazed and that he desires a night temperature of 55 degrees, in figuring for water, he can assume one foot of radiation to every three feet of glass surface plus one foot of radiation for every sixteen square feet of wood side walls exposed to the outer air; for low pressure steam, figure one foot of surface to every seven of glass plus one for every thirty feet of wood side walls.

These proportions will apply in general to houses of ordinary dimensions, some allowance must be made in consideration of peculiar or special surrounding conditions, also in consideration of the temperature at which the water or steam is intended to circulate.

LILLIAN POND

The Grand New White Carnation.

Far ahead of any white yet introduced. Large, heavily built flowers, very fragrant and an exceptionally good keeper.

It has given us thus far this winter more flowers to the plant than White Cloud or Queen Louise and is bringing in the Boston wholesale market $5.00 and $6.00 per 100.

An early and continuous bloomer, strong grower and lifts well from the field.

We shall show at the Brooklyn meeting only average sized flowers, the same as we are picking and shipping every day, and such as any grower will be able to produce with ordinary care. We have put this variety under no special treatment for this occasion.

Our Large Stock of 24,000 Plants enables us to send out nothing but Strong, Healthy Cuttings. All orders filled on short notice.

UTICA, N. Y.

If you had been on our busy corner, as we call it, on Thursday, January 29, you would have seen four of our florists boarding the trolley car for Rome, fifteen miles west, to see what our brother florists were doing there. They were: F. J. Baker, C. F. Seitzer, W. A. Rowlands and J. C. Spencer.

The first place visited was for something to eat, piloted by Rowlands, as he always knows where the good things are. After the inner man was satisfied we felt as if we could attach most anything.

The first place was Mr. Humphrey's. We found that Mr. Humphrey was in California for his health, which is not very good, but we found his son and daughter in charge, and as things looked, Mr. H. need not be in any hurry to come back. Everything was spick and span, as it always is at this place; carnations looking fine, especially Lawson and Marquis; roses a little off crop. After spending about two hours very pleasantly here we started across the city for Mr. Byam's place, where we found Mr. B. busy making up work. But he at once left his work and piloted us through his new place. Here again we found everything fine, especially a fine lot of cyclamen, and a house of Alaska carnations that are as fine as we ever saw. He can pick them by the thousand—the best paying thing on the place. Three of his houses were erected so late last fall that he has been growing lettuce in them this winter, but I believe is going to plant them to roses next year.

On our way back to Utica we decided to stop off at Whitesboro to look at W. A. Rowland's place. We found his foreman, Wm. Death, busy putting in cuttings and taking out rooted ones and planting in beds. Everything here looks fine—lots of buds in sight and prospect for a big crop for Easter. Everything grown here is shipped to one party. We again started for home, where we arrived at 5 p. m., after a very pleasant trip.

We have had promised a very nice lot of new carnations for our carnation meeting, of which you will hear more next week.

C. F. Seitzer is cutting some very fine Ivory roses, in fact, extra fine, as I saw them, and he will plant all he can of them next year. He has also some extra good lilacs in bloom.

Wm. Mathews is showing some very fine orchids and also a fine lot of tulips at his store this week.

Everything at C. F. Baker & Son's is in fine condition. They have a fine lot of lilies and report trade good.

ALBANY, N. Y.

Business is very good in both Albany and Troy. Roses are still scarce. Carnations are getting more plentiful, but many of them are split, owing to the dark weather. We had only four or five days of sunshine during the whole month of January. Tulips and daffodils are beginning to arrive and are welcomed as a relief to the monotony of roses, carnations and violets.

Danker had an eight-foot horseshoe to make Monday that was a monster. It was for an assemblyman and took four men to handle it. He has some good cyclamen and valley from his greenhouses and reports a fine business.

Eyres had some lilacs in his window last week that were very nice. He says business is very brisk with him.

Wm. King's window looks fine with flats of tulips, daffodils and azaleas.

Of the growers, Mr. Menand keeps cleaned up—in fact, not half enough for the demand. His White Cloud carnations are fine. He is also cutting some nice roses.

At Gloeckner's everything that looks like a flower can be used. Funeral work keeps stuff cut very close.

We took a drive out to Wm. Hammell's last week and found his two houses in good condition. His Lawson and Prosperity in carnations are fine. His roses are a little off crop just now, but with a little bright weather will soon be in good shape.

Gillett's four houses of carnations look fair. He has a good crop on now, but a great many bursted flowers among his Scotts. He lost a lot of plants this winter from stem-rot. Queen Louise seems to be his best white.

Sambrook & Son, of Troy, seem to have no let up at all. It has been a continual rush since before Christmas. They are receiving some fine Lawson and Prosperity from Zimmerman's, Watervliet. They had a big contract on their hands this week—three decorations in one day.

Coal is scarce around here, but the least said about it the better, for it seems to be the cry all over the country.

WOOD LICE.

In a recent article in the Review arsenical poisons were recommended to kill wood lice. How is it used? S. S. P.

The preparation of this insecticide is very simple, merely consisting of finely sifted wheat bran 60 parts to one part Paris green and thoroughly mixed. Spread this along the sideboards of the benches. Flour sweetened with sugar can be substituted for bran, using the same proportions. Ribes.

TOUGHKENAMON, Chester Co., Pa., Dec. 29, 1902.
MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.
Yours very truly, ROBERT C. BANCROFT.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

BASKETS OF ORCHIDS.

The accompanying engravings are from photographs of the baskets of orchids entered in competition at the last exhibition of the Horticultural Society of Chicago.

The one arranged by Mr. Uihlein's gardener contained a large variety of species and was a remarkably beautiful basket. Of course it would be very difficult for a florist to secure such a splendid variety and effect such a beautiful combination.

The cattleya basket contained C. Percivaliana among fronds of Adiantum Farleyense. It was very rich in effect.

The basket of cypripediums and mignonette was a beautiful harmony in color. We heard the arrangement criticised because some of the cypripediums were placed upside down, but don't see how the lower ones could very well have been placed otherwise with effect. The back of a cypripedium is not particularly decorative and that is what would have been presented to view had the flowers been carried down the side of the basket and still kept right side up. We would be glad to have suggestions from others regarding the placing of the flowers in this basket.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Kaiserins which are wanted to bloom during summer and fall should now be planted. As a summer bloomer there is no white rose superior to it and if well handled will produce perfect blooms with perfect stems by June. They require a very rich compost, richer than Bride or Bridesmaids, with a very generous addition of bone flour.

The growth being rapid and of a very soft character is very susceptible to insect attacks, particularly red spider. To keep these in subjection the syringe will have to be used freely and ample ventilation given on all favorable occasions.

When the real hot weather commences the benches should receive a rich mulching, which can be spread about one inch in thickness. This should be repeated at intervals of six weeks, and as these roses are heavy feeders an application of manure water between mulchings will greatly improve the quality of both stem and flower.

The buds of this rose when used as a summer bloomer should be cut when they are tight, as if they are allowed to fully open on the plant they are entirely useless for shipping.

In order to secure a good future crop three eyes with fully developed leaves should be left on the stem, as they are sometimes rather shy in producing canes for a second crop if cut too close to the old wood.

Great care should be exercised in packing the buds, for owing to the softness and peculiar outward curve of the petals they are easily bruised.

A temperature of 62 to 64 degrees at night, rising to 76 or 78 degrees during sunshine, suits them admirably, though they can be made to produce good blooms at a much lower temperature, but at considerable sacrifice in quantity.

To make a successful planting the soil must be in a nice, mellow condition, as they will receive a decided check if planted in soil that is cold and wet. As it is hard to get soil in this condition (unless from a soil shed) the soil should be left on the benches for a day or two and worked over until it attains the condition required.

The plants should be planted just deep enough to cover the ball, which should be disturbed as little as possible. The first watering should be done slowly and the soil surrounding the ball thoroughly moistened.

Houses which have been rested for the winter should now be started, pruning out all small and superfluous wood and removing all ripe and decaying leaves. The soil should then get a thorough drenching and the temperature raised gradually as the eyes break and the leaves develop until the normal condition is reached. As soon as the eyes have broken a light mulch of rich material should be given. This can be added to as the days get warmer and the plants more vigorous.

Keeping a careful outlook for insect pests and mildew and checking these at the outset will result in clean foliage, vigorous growth and consequently high grade blooms. Rides.

CYCLAMEN.

Under separate cover I mail you some cyclamen leaves. The seed was sown last May. They are now in 4-inch pots. They have never produced perfect flowers or leaves. Pots are partly filled with broken crocks and brick, with sprinkling of coarse brickdust on top. They have been kept in temperature of 50 to 60 degrees and have been that way for the last four months. Can you say what is the matter with the leaves? Also what is the best soil for cyclamen? Gardener.

When the leaves arrived they were much wilted, and excepting that they were very thin and lacked substance, I could see nothing very wrong about them. Just now I will merely say that the month of May is the very poorest time to sow cyclamen. From September to New Year's is the sowing season. They are subject to aphis and thrips and are easily ruined if allowed to severely dry out when growing. Any good loam with a third of real leaf-mold is a suitable soil. If the loam is stiff, add a twentieth of old mortar sifted finely. I have been rather successful in growing a few hundred cyclamen the past summer. The last few days have had them photographed and shall send the picture to the Review, with a story of just how they were treated from the time the seed went into the soil until they bloomed, and that will be a better help to Gardener than anything I can say now.

William Scott.

Basket of Orchids in Variety, Arranged by Gardener for E. G. Uihlein, Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Abutilons.

One of the most useful plants for subtropical gardening, or in combination with subtropical plants, as cannas is Abutilon Savitzii. It's not an easy plant to propagate in the fall, but now will be making an active growth from the plants that were lifted and cut down, and the young growths root quickly and easily. When once rooted and growing in small pots they should be given all the light and air possible. Like all variegated plants that have half their foliage minus chlorophyl it has not the vigor of a green leaf and wants a full exposure to light and air and a higher temperature than the common flowering varieties of the abutilons.

Azaleas.

I notice that with us the azaleas are inclined to be too early for Easter. This is a matter of great importance. Although you can sell a few azaleas "right along" as they say in the vernacular, and after Easter a limited number of these beautiful plants are desirable, yet Easter is the time when they are in demand and when you get the best price. Niobe, Mme. Van der Cruyssen, and others of our most useful varieties are going to be too early unless you do some decided "arresting of development." In Southern Pennsylvania and southward a cold frame may be trusted with sufficient protection against a cold spell, but no such conditions can be considered safe in our blizzard-blown north. Yet you can possibly find a house that can be kept down to 38 or 40 degrees at night and ventilated during the day. Shading will do no harm and prevent the sun from raising the temperature on bright days. Many large establishments have small leanto houses on the north side of the long-span-to-the-south houses, where no ray of sun touches the roof. This is an ideal place for azaleas to be kept, or any other hard-wooded plants that you want to retard, but we do not all have those useful appendages and something else must be done. However, find a place and get your azaleas in right for Easter, and don't have the melancholy strain "to spiel" that your azaleas were too early, just as if it were something that could not be avoided.

Astilbes.

Don't let the astilbe remain beneath the benches after the foliage is well started. I may not think to mention the fact, which I am aware is widely known, yet some beginner has still to learn, viz., that the tender foliage should never be subjected to a strong dose of tobacco smoke. They are never troubled with aphis or any other "bugs," but they are often in a house where there are other plants that do need a smoke and they have to take it likewise; so cover them with paper while the disagreeable but necessary performance of fumigation is going on. We ram the bundle of roots of these astilbes into a 6 or 7-inch pot, about filling all available space and leaving little room for the new roots to work, and by flowering time they want three waterings a day.

To get the very best results from these plants every pot should have beneath it a saucer which can be replenished whenever empty, and the last four or five weeks before flowering let the saucers be filled daily with some kind of liquid manure. This treatment will make a most marked difference in size of the feathery bloom, as well as the robustness and color of the foliage.

Speaking of liquid manure, some writers in our florist papers within the past ten years have advocated a change of diet for carnations and other plants, inferring that a plant was much benefited by a change of food. Do you think that is so? Or was it only that the pen flew off at a tangent and the writer had a dream? Do not the sturdy pine and oak subsist for centuries on the same elements which they abstract from the earth and absorb from the air? Most surely our soft-wooded plants, and for that matter our fruit trees and shrubs, can be stimulated and helped by adding to the food what that ambiguous dame nature has sparingly supplied them. But in the short life of a rose or a carnation on our greenhouse benches this varied diet is, I believe, a fallacy. Give them what they like and relish and can assimilate, and you have done all that is essential. A year or so ago the wizard of electricity was interviewed, and it must be admitted that Mr. Edison has a marvelous brain, and while speaking of brightness of intellect he told his interviewer that he believed a great variety of food was considered to brighten the intellect and that he ate all the variety he could find that was palatable. I am glad to say the newspaper man rather doubted his philosophy. I also spent the whole of one Sunday afternoon in meditation on the subject, and after having "several varieties brought me" concluded that, bright man as he is, he was wrong. Many good Irishmen have from childhood seen or eaten nothing but potatoes and salt, and for a change, potatoes without salt. The great, great, great grandfather of our General Grant was brought up on oatmeal boiled and stirred with the "parridge stick" if there was time, and if time was limited it was mixed cold. Burns' daily fare up to twenty-five years of age was doubtless "halesome parritch." And Shakespeare's, within a few years of his writing Othello, was fat bacon, bread and cheese. And have not all these nationalities produced some great minds from the peasantry? Yet, after all, it is not the isolated genius and exceptionally illuminated mind that makes a nation great and powerful. It is the high average of her people's intelligence, and so after all, Edison may be right as far as intellect goes, but physically we do not want this great variety of food. The horse is a higher organism than Astilbe japonica, and if you will give him a judicious quantity of good oats and timothy, with a little salt once a week, he will never kick, I mean mentally, and live so long that you will grow old enough to much prefer the safer but less exclusive trolley than any two seated buggy. I have strayed considerably from the vegetable kingdom and will now resume.

Basket of Cattleyas Arranged by T. D. Mosconesotes, Chicago.

Calceolarias.

If you grow any of the beautiful herbaceous calceolarias, and there are few plants more truly worthy of the adjective gorgeous, they will now be growing fast and should have their last shift. They should be flowered in a 6-inch pot, at least commercially. Never wet their foliage more than necessary and water early on bright days. They like a free circulation of air around them, therefore it pays well to stand them on an inverted 5 to 6-inch pot and put between the pots plenty of tobacco stems, for greenfly is their great enemy. This aphis, on a cineraria, will grow as big as James Basket of Cypripediums and Mignonette Arranged by A. Lange, Chicago.

Hartshorne, but on a calceolaria it attains the proportions of an Isaac Kennedy. Of course I mean only relatively. Calceolarias never want a high temperature. Forty-five at night will do finely, and as their flowering time approaches (April or May) a subdued light is necessary. A north house where there is full light without the direct rays of the sun is the place for them.

Fungicides.

Incidentally I want to mention that a few weeks ago I had something to say about hollyhocks and cautioned the inquirer to give his plants a syringing with liquid Bordeaux mixture or copper ammonia solution, whether we saw fungus or not. Strange to say I gave orders that the few hundred I have in 3-inch pots should receive a dose of it. The very next day on looking them over I discovered that the disease was well established on them, but two or three syringings of the copper solution, and picking off the leaves most affected, has resulted in a complete rout of the enemy. I get very tired when it is necessary to resort to these antidotes, and I only mention this because I am now convinced that this fungus can be entirely prevented from destroying this stately plant if treated in time and faithfully followed up.

Tulips and Narcissus.

The season is now so advanced that your tulips and narcissus will want from now on very little or no shade and should force very well in a night temperature of 60 degrees, and their quality is altogether better when not given so much heat as was necessary earlier. I suppose I shall soon get the usual batch of inquiries, which will read something like this: "Please inform me what time I shall bring in tulips and daffodils and Dutch hyacinths to have them in flower for Easter." At present I will say, go back and recline on the sofa for a month. There are four or five weeks yet before any of the bulbous stuff should be brought in for Easter crop.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

I trust those of you who attended the convention feel amply repaid for the time and money expended. It certainly should be of material advantage for all growers of the divine flower, to get acquainted with each other. Experiences and opinions differ and rightly they should, when it is considered how many new varieties are yearly being put on the market, each journeying to different parts of our country, to meet different conditions, such as treatment, climate, soil, etc.

Coming together in convention gives opportunity for exchange of experiences, enables us to see the new introductions at their best and perhaps the greatest advantage comes from being able to meet the originators, who are always ready to supply valuable information. Many of us were no doubt attracted by the superior appearance of one or more varieties exhibited there, and I venture to say that we will never see better blooms of these varieties, on the benches of the average grower.

Commercially speaking, these exhibition blooms are beyond the reach of the grower; the price at which they would have to be sold would be prohibitive. This may sound discouraging to some who have already or have since been induced to invest in any of the new varieties, but it is not in any sense my object to prepare you for disappointment. On the contrary the point I wish to make is this: You have seen what CAN be produced in the hands of those thoroughly familiar with the variety; all that expert cultivation can do has been done; the mark of perfection is stamped upon it; you go home with the ideal firmly fixed in your mind; your eyes have not been deceived and you set yourself about to grow this variety with enthusiasm.

Suppose you have bought stock of a variety which scored 85 or 90 points, then after gathering all the information possible relative to its requirements, and you give it every care consistent with commercial growth, you produce blooms that will score, on an average, 10 to 15 points less. I think you have no cause to complain and that you have done exceedingly well.

That success may reward your efforts, the seller and buyer must work in harmony. The seller must supply you with first-class stock, and the buyer must see to it that he accepts no other, then the burden rests with you. Mr. Baur will pardon me if I include him in saying that the scribes will insist, even at the risk of repetition, on the stock being taken care of.

If there is one thing above another that will cause disappointment and tend to undermine and degrade a variety, it is the narrow, short-sighted policy of growing stock of new varieties in rich soil, and warm quarters with a view of obtaining another cutting (?). Yes! I have seen growers do it, and brag about it, thinking they were very cute. Their product from these cripples as seen the following season, showed "brag" to have lost its first letter, the balance tied on a stick illustrated the quality.

GEO. S. OSBORNE.

Referring to the answer to inquiry in the REVIEW of February 12, would say I have been growing lettuce in the same house with carnations, though not on a large scale, and have been very successful in growing them together. The varieties of lettuce I grow are Grand Rapids and Black Seeded Simpson. The temperature is kept at the same degree as is usual for carnations and the lettuce seems to thrive all right. The varieties of carnations I grow are Lawson, Daybreak, Joost, Crane, Marquis, Crocker and Queen Louise. I have tried several other varieties of lettuce, but none seemed to do as well with carnations as the two varieties mentioned above.

ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS.

Will it injure Asparagus plumosus nanus to cut it down to the ground after all the seeds have been gathered? I notice after picking seeds it looks ragged and wants to branch out all along the old vines instead of running up new shoots from the ground. Those that come out all along are weak and very thin. Vines are now six years old.

S. B. R.

After bearing a crop of fruit the old vine could most assuredly be cut down, not close to the ground, but within nine or ten inches. If there is no young growth coming, and by cutting down these long growths you leave scarcely any foliage on the plants, then be careful about watering to excess until some new growths have started.

I notice that S. B. R. mentions that the bed is now six years old. Some weeks ago I had occasion to write in these columns that I believed for the average florist who has not special houses for this decorative plant, should renew the bed every third year. Shortly after that I visited a friend who has grown this asparagus quite profitably the past three years, and stated to him again my belief. He not only agreed with me, but said he would never leave the plants in more than two years, and I think he is about right.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

ASTER SEED.

We have received a request from E. H. Hunt, Chicago, to explain to the trade the reduction in price on their Carlson aster seed in their adv. in this week's issue. The way to explain seems to be to simply give the facts. A certain competitor, who seems to get more satisfaction out of making trouble for others than in doing business at a profit, saw fit to cut the price on this seed in his adv. in another paper, and Hunt simply meets the cut. It is a good time to stock up on Carlson aster seed and buyers who place their orders with Hunt are certain of good stock and fair and gentlemanly treatment.

PHILADELPHIA.

Market Conditions.

The market conditions have changed materially since last week's report. Most flowers are more plentiful and with prices a little lower especially on large orders. The crops of roses, carnations and violets are augmented by large quantities of bulbous flowers which are now in full glory.

St. Valentine's day proved a floral festival; violets and carnations were eagerly sought at good prices. Nearly all choice flowers sold well. Many poorer ones went on the street and were pretty well cleaned up by nightfall.

Fancy Beauties are coming in freely. Sweet peas are also numerous. Edward Reid had 5,600 nice blooms one day this week. E. Bernheimer is also handling them in quantity. Forget-me-nots were a little feature of the 14th, both Leo Niessen and E. Bernheimer handled a considerable number. Double tulips are now in. Zimmer of Collingwood had the first orange seen this season. Lilac is rather too plentiful. Valley sells slowly.

Ideal.

A really good new rose is not to be found every day. It really seems as if this city has such a rare prize in Jacob Becker's sport from La France. Two shrewd judges of qualities necessary for a commercial rose, E. G. Asmus and John Burton, have given this variety the sanction of their approval, by ordering enough young stock to give it a fair trial. The former will try grafted and the latter own root plants.

Mr. Becker has given D. T. Conner, of the Lord & Burnham Co. an order for two houses, each 180 by 20 feet, which it is understood he intends to use for growing his new rose. These are likely to be the only cut flower houses on the place as Mr. Becker's specialty is pot plants.

He has been famous for years as a grower of azaleas, lilies, geraniums and roses in pots. This season he has reduced the quantities of azaleas materially, partly on account of the difficulty of securing enough Mme. Vander Cruyssen, but chiefly because he believes his roses pay him better. These he grows exceptionally well. They make strong growth producing fine plants in rather small pots, 5-inch being preferred to 6-inch, costing less and giving perfect satisfaction.

The principal varieties grown for Easter and spring plant sales are Ideal, lifted from the bench and commanding a high price; Jacque and Brunner, Hermosa, Clothilde Soupert, the pink and the white Cochet, Grossau Tiplitz, which is proving a great favorite; Mrs. Sharman Crawford, Magna Charta, Paul Neyron, American Beauty and a few others. These are nearly all grown from hard-wood cuttings and planted out in the fields during the summer; but some Ideal, for example, have been grown in the benches from July until January, then lifted and potted. A house of lilies was in splendid condition.

Bowling.

The Florists' Club team continues its career of almost unbroken successes in the Bowlers' League. The team now has a score of 27 victories out of 33 games played. Their nearest rivals have only won 18 out of 30, with but 12 games remaining for the florists to play. It is almost assured that the handsome league trophy will ornament the club room at the close of the tournament.

Notes.

Leo Niessen will move his wholesale commission house from Thirteenth and Filbert streets to 1217 Arch street on February 28. That day, Saturday, business will be carried on as usual in the old place. The following Monday morning the new place will be in working order. The new place, which is in Union College building, includes ground floor and basement, each 135x22 feet. The building is of brown stone, lighted by electricity, heated by steam, and in excellent condition. Mr. Niessen is to be congratulated on leasing this place, which, when fully equipped, will be a credit to him and to the florist business in this city.

Joseph Heacock has been doing a large business in palms lately.

Charles M. Herr, of Lancaster, has three fine houses of carnations.

Milton W. Woodroffe last month succeeded Richard Umpfried, now with the Flower Market, as Fred Ehret's right hand man.

D. T. Conner reports that the Cleveland florists are considering a market in that city.

The H. A. Dreer Co. are receiving many advanced orders for azaleas for Easter.

Wetherstone & Co. have a promising automatic air valve. Several of the growers are experimenting with it.

NEW YORK.

Various Items.

Amongst notable dinners at the Waldorf Astoria last week were the Lincoln banquet and that of the New York Press Club, at both of which elaborate decorations were made by J. H. Small's Sons.

Dances, dinner parties and theater parties keep the bon-ton florists busy daily and nightly, every evening until Lent being crowded with these society events—Sunday evenings particularly brilliant. To the fortunate ones of the trade whose services are thus made necessary, this has been an exceptionally profitable season.

Saturday might well have been called violet day as well as St. Valentine's judging by the quantity of the flower sold. Several of the firms made this a specialty disposing of an average of 50,000 an hour while the demand lasted.

Mr. Jas. Purdy, whose business was purchased by Mr. J. J. Perkins, will devote himself to the development of his feldspar mine, at Ossinning, N. Y.

The demand for cattleyas is continuous. The popularity of this flower has never before been so great nor the supply so extensive. Demands from other cities are numerous and prices are well maintained.

An error in location of J. J. Perkins' new store was made in our last. The address is 48 West Thirtieth street.

Jas. A. Hammond's plant department grows, particularly his sales of violets and adiantum in Xeponset pots. He anticipates a great trade for Easter.

Alex. McConnell has returned from a week's outing at Atlantic City. Companionship with Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, and John N. May, of Summit, made the trip enjoyable as well as healthful. This firm has had an abundance of great society dinners of late to beautify.

Siegel & Cooper's conservatory has been made attractive by a thorough overhauling and painting. A new rookery and fountain are added. C. W. Eperman is superintendent.

Richard Shannon, florist, of Brooklyn, on his annual voyage, chose the wrong ship this season and was in the wreck of the Madiana, off Bermuda.

The sales of fern balls this season are reported slow by the houses that make these a specialty. So many of the department stores handled this stock last year and sent it out so dry, inferior and useless that the general demand has been killed, and developed balls alone are popular.

Patrick O'Mara, of New York, and Carl Jurgens, of Newport, R. I., have returned from the glorious climate of Florida much benefited by the recreative rest to be had in that wonderful state.

For some time there have been indications of an enterprise looking to the concentration of wholesale interests in the cut flower trade in a building to be built and owned by prominent wholesalers and growers and devoted exclusively to the interests of floriculture in all its departments and with an anticipated capital of $100,000. This object could handily be accomplished. The design is to have the different floors utilized by separate branches of the business—cut flowers, supplies, plants, etc.—and the upper story for club rooms and recreation. That such an enterprise would pay its promoters handsomely there can be no doubt, and it is hoped some practical end may develop at last after all these years of surmise, dreaming and anticipation. No city in the world is more capable of completing this project and nowhere is there greater need.

Mr. Koch, of Flatbush, has purchased the store of Mr. Phillips, 301 Flatbush avenue. Miss Koch will manage it.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to Mr. Bradshaw, of Bradshaw & Hartman, on account of the death of the brother of Mrs. Bradshaw on Monday, February 16.

The sudden death from heart failure of Mr. James Gordon on Sunday evening was a shock to his many friends in New York and Brooklyn. He was in his usual health and in exceptionally high spirits on Saturday. For ten years he has been with Mr. J. V. Phillips, and twelve years with Mr. John Wier, and enjoyed the entire confidence and esteem of his employers. He was a floral artist of great ability, a most genial, generous and lovable man with not an enemy in the world. Old Chicago florists will remember the Gordon Bros., who owned a flower store in that city, and lost everything in the great fire. Mr. James Gordon was one of the firm. He was fifty-four years of age. The funeral will take place Thursday.

Mr. J. F. Donoghue (son of Fred Donoghue, of Brooklyn, superintendent for years of the Corbin Estate) was killed on Saturday. He was claim agent of the L. I. railroad and a young man of ability. Both legs were cut off by the train at Woodhaven and he was unable to rally from the shock. Mr. Donoghue is known by every florist in the east and much sympathy is felt for him in his bereavement.

Mr. Herrington, of Madison, was in town Monday, jubilant as to the mum show, with six horticultural societies guaranteed to assist him to develop an exhibition that will be national in its achievements if all his plans materialize. The American Institute has given a guarantee fund of $1,000 in its behalf.

Wm. Saltford, the "Violet King," has had a strenuous experience with the bogus check man this past week, $20 being devoted to the enterprise. He was more fortunate than one of the florists on Second avenue, who placed $30 in the pool. These are only two of many victims. Unfortunately it was a florist who imposed on his friends. Just what the conclusion of the whole matter will be depends on the generosity of the big-hearted subject.

The predictions as to spring were premature. The ground hog and the robin have lost prestige. At this writing the worst snow storm of the year is in progress. Hope it will not interfere with the coming of the western carnationists.

Brooklyn Horticultural Society.

The Brooklyn Horticultural Society held its final meeting before the convention at the Germania Club's reception rooms on Monday evening. Notwithstanding the blizzard, nearly forty enthusiastic members were present, President Ward in the chair. Many additional subscriptions were reported, and Mr. Weber, chairman of the finance committee, announced the happy consummation of "enough to spare" as the condition of the treasury. Arthur Herrington, of Madison, was announced as added to the list of prominent orators at the banquet. Mr. Langjahr states that Mr. Wilt and family had been added to the coterie of musical artists and that prospects were bright for many additions to the 300 dinner list. The society authorized its entertainment committee to contract for as many dinners as necessity might develop, so if there be 500 present, not one will be neglected. Mr. Plumb, the manager, and Mr. Phillips, chairman of the decorative committee, reported everything arranged for.

Tickets for the reception at the Art Institute on Thursday evening will be abundant, and altogether most complete preparations are fully consummated.

Many letters of regret on account of inability to attend were read by Secretary Wallace, as well as acceptances from some of the best speakers of the country. A most successful and enjoyable convention is a certainty and next week we can tell you all about it.

Mr. Krick exhibited some fine heliotrope carnations, illustrating his new process. The annual meeting of the society was postponed until Wednesday, March 2. Resolutions of condolence and sympathy were made and ordered sent to the widow and family of Mr. James Gordon, whose sudden death on Sunday was announced by his employer, Mr. J. V. Phillips.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

NEW CARNATION INDIANAPOLIS.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of the new pink carnation, Indianapolis, that originated with Messrs. Baur & Smith, Indianapolis, Ind. It is now in its third year and we understand the firm expects to disseminate the variety in the spring of 1904.

It is a cross between Mrs. F. Joost and Armazindy, but it does not resemble either one very closely. Its color is a bright, clear shade of pink, and it does not fade as the bloom ages. The size is large, ranging from 3 to 3¾ inches in diameter, and the variety has been certificated by the State Society of Indiana Florists. The stem is long and strong and carries the bloom up well.

With the originators the calyx never splits. The growth is upright and strong and it is a very early and continuous bloomer. They have found it the best paying variety they have ever had on their place, the blooms always bringing top prices in the market.

VARIETIES FOR SAME HOUSE.

What three or four varieties of carnations will do best together in same house, temperature and soil? Light, sandy soil. Want to grow principally pink and white. Our flower season runs from Oct. 1 to June 1. J. N. S.

Here is a list of varieties that will do well in the same temperature: Mrs. Joost, Dorothy, Floriana and Mrs. Nelson for pink; Queen Louise, Lorna and Norway for white; America, Crane and Mrs. Potter Palmer for red; Stella, Gaiety and Viola Allen for variegated; Gov. Roosevelt for crimson. These are all good varieties and can all be successfully grown in the same house.

A. F. J. BAUR.

VARIEGATED CARNATION.

Is there a variegated carnation similar to Mrs. Bradt that is better than that variety? If so, in what way is it superior and what is its name?

J. G. D. N.

There are several good varieties among the variegated ones, both on the market and soon to be on. Stella and Gaiety are both fine. The former has less color in it than Mrs. Bradt, but it is a wonderful bloomer, of fine habit and the bloom is excellent. Same shape as Mrs. Bradt.

Gaiety has a smooth petal and a prettier form than Mrs. Bradt, and has very pretty distinct markings. Try both of these. Also try a few of the new variety Marshall Field. This is said to be a wonderful producer and we have seen some grand blooms of it.

Trade and Personal Notes.

With the weather, and its conditions, are so intimately connected the phases of trade that no apology seems necessary for recording its vagaries. Our winter here for the past two or three weeks has been made up of dull leaden skies, often weeping from excess of sorrow at the absence of vivifying rays of Old Sol, fogs and murky, muggy atmosphere. The mercury scarcely falls to freezing and one or two days showed the ardor and brilliancy of May.

The demand for cut flowers continues, and, for this latitude, St. Valentine's day has become established as another flower day, each year seeing an increase in the number of flowers sent in lieu of the old time meaningless creations of lace paper and millinery. The demand this year for violets and valley outran the supplies in sight. This very appropriate innovation is one which deserves to be encouraged, to the refinement of taste and the profit of us all!

The early part of last week was not very active, but the latter days were bristling with social events, which were marked by more than usually pretentious (and some very tasteful) decorations for the balls, receptions, luncheons, etc., which made features of the gay season. Here is a description from one of our daily papers of the decorations at a valentine luncheon, given by Mrs. Thos. J. Shryock, the wife of a well known and opulent citizen, which may possess some interest:

"The entertainment departed wholly from conventional lines in that it was given in surroundings so rustic as to suggest the vineyards of Southern France.

"An arbor many feet in length and about 12 feet wide was built the entire length of the billiard room, which forms one wing of the residence. The sides and roof of the arbor were covered with luxuriant vines, from which hung clusters of grapes, white, pink and purple, the fruit concealing electric lights so that their delicate outlines and color contrasted with the green foliage above them. At each end of the arbor were suspended hearts four feet in diameter of crimson carnations, pierced with golden arrows, while similar hearts of 18 inches formed a brilliant frieze of fragrance and color the length of the arbor on either side. In the center of each heart glowed a ruby electric light, so that each heart appeared to have a jeweled center. All through the leafy vines were similar tiny lights gleaming like fireflies overhead.

"The 10 small tables at which guests were seated were fragrant with the June like perfume of crimson roses, so that with the musical strains of love songs rendered by a concealed orchestra a bit of Arcadia seemed to have found its way through the gate of St. Valentine's day into the prosaic twentieth century."

The week beginning to-day (February 16) promises to be one of much gaiety and many orders are on hand of greater or less extent for decorations of homes and public halls.

With the growers all energies are now being given to the bringing in and caring for Easter stuff. A call a few days ago at the places of Robt. L. Graham and Philip B. Welch showed them busy and watchful of the lilies, azaleas and other plants sought for at that season. Mr. Welch has within the past year put up two modern houses of considerable size and improved his heating facilities by introducing a Lord & Burnham boiler.

Erdman Bros., on the Hartman road, have remodeled their property to some extent, enlarging their houses, and now devote themselves exclusively to producing carnations, the cultivation of roses having been abandoned. They have a white seedling which is giving great satisfaction and which proves a good producer and a good seller in this season of scarcity of white flowers. It reaches a fair size for a commercial sort and never splits the calyx; is borne on a stiff, wiry stem and is objected to only on account of its insufficient petals. This firm continues to grow and praise the red MacRichmond, which, if not large, is a sure and steadfast bloomer and always in demand at profitable figures.

Hochstedt Bros., of Hamilton avenue, met with a misfortune on the night of February 7 in the bursting of a sectional cast iron steam boiler. By some neglect the boiler was allowed to run dry and an explosion naturally followed. Fortunately no one was hurt and not much injury done to the plant, the direction of the force being downward and sideways. The night was a mild one and an old hot water boiler was hurriedly installed, a number of coal oil stoves gathered together and things made frost proof. The energetic young members of the firm by the second morning had a portable threshing machine boiler connected with their pipes and are now installing a new apparatus.

John Cook, now one of the elders of the florists' brigade, has bought at a good, round figure the property at 318 North Charles street, for many years occupied by him as a store, and doubtless before a very long interval will improve it in a suitable and substantial way. This purchase is in the very center of the retail flower trade.

Mr. Cook is an illustration of the good fortune that comes to intelligence, devotion to business and liberal and progressive methods. Coming to this country as a youth, he has steadily and uninterruptedly climbed the ladder of success. His extensive plant on Edmonston avenue, extended, is a model sight for the business and a beautiful home. He is blessed with a large and devoted family of sons and daughters, and as the shadows of life's evening deepen, he finds himself still active and alert, with ample leisure and no declining inclination for the amenities of life and the daily pursuit of his one favorite occupation, the production and cultivation of Her Majesty, the Rose. B.

BUFFALO.

There has been a fair share of sunny, sloppy, mild weather, but nothing very low in temperature, and while you hear some correspondents talk of the "bad weather" of this season, if they will only "hark back" with freshened and correct memory they must admit it has been good for coal bins, and quite an average of sun.

I failed to mention in my last anything about McKinley day. It was an event, and if it's going to be an annual observance it will be a day well worth noting. Our local papers gave it great prominence, hence there was a great call for the divine flower. While to the average man a cigar or irrigation would be more attractive, there was a large number of flowers sold. Ten to 25 cents was the price asked, and we heard of one case where Prosperity was charged for at the rate of 80 cents per pair. The man who invested was in that condition that the moon is in when the sun is shining full on its face and the earth is in an intermediate position, and then you know "Cost be hanged; what do I care?"

Business has been quite fair without any startling events; flowers decidedly scarce; roses and carnations short of supply; violets plentiful. Valentine's day was entirely satisfactory. The business of that day was good and it was valentines that did it, with violets leading.

I am awfully sorry to have passed over all those illustrious visitors of last week, as I was compelled to do. I must tell you how well Mr. Mott looked, more delicate and refined than formerly. It shows that a quiet home life is not so fattening as three big meals a day at a first-class hotel. Mr. Nickman, representing that most enterprising firm of Bobbink & Atkins, is a real, practical gardener and it is some satisfaction to talk to him. He does not bore you. Neither does our brainy friend, Skidelsky, who represents any firm that has good things to offer. Since that there came upon the boards the veteran John Barclay, representing Vaughan's Seed Store. John works hard to sell, but when you can give no valid reason for not buying he closes the door with such vigor that it is equivalent to saying, "Go to that land of mystic realm where coal famines are unknown."

The Carnation convention is the uppermost thought with several. Before my Eastern friends will read these lines it will be only a record, doubtless of the most brilliant gathering of carnationists and the finest exhibition of the beautiful flower that man has ever seen. The office of president will be fought for—all the better.

Are any of you troubled with a minute ant? It is almost so small that you need glasses to see it. My son thinks it arrived with some orchids. Perhaps so. It drags away small seeds, but does not seem to notice young plants. It is everywhere and its numbers are as the sands of Far Rockaway. My workmen suspended their lunch boxes by a wire from the roof of the shed, but the ants climbed to the roof, descended the wire and so infested their frugal cold beef and pie that they preferred to wait for supper. I had only one man equal to the occasion, and he is sixty-five years old with the appetite of a sixteen-year-old boy. He is an Englishman with epicurian but not fastidious taste. He likes cheese that will travel with the army, underdone frog legs, beef that was slaughtered in the last century, partridge that has assumed a deep, rich blue and has become the host of larvae of the May bug, and will wash all this down to its temporary resting place with anything but water. This man has done his best to exterminate the ants, but the operation is tedious and slow. He brought two chicken sandwiches for his lunch and put them in his coat pocket. When they were brought to light at noon there were approximately 4,827,320 ants on the two sandwiches. The old veteran said, "The B—— ain't going to get the best of me," and devoured the sandwiches and the poor little ants with them. No deleterious results occurred, except that his wife told a neighbor, "William has used no pepper for upwards of three weeks." I can't loan this man as an exterminator, but I would like to know how to get rid of these little pests.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The schedule of prizes to be awarded at the fourth annual exhibition of the American Rose Society, to be held in Philadelphia, March 24 to 26, in connection with the spring show of the Pennsylvania Hort. Society, has been issued. Copies may be had by addressing David Rust, Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia.

The adv. I put in your paper brought better returns than any I ever had. It increased my sales of wild smilax and holly tenfold.—Geo. M. Carter, Evergreen, Ala.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The past week found the market still scarce of flowers and trade at the retail stores brisk. There was an extra demand on St. Valentine's day. This day has never counted for much in the cut flower trade, but it seems to be a growing fad to send a box of cut flowers as a valentine. The call for violets was great and the price on them went up to 35 cents per bunch at retail.

Roses continue scarce, not nearly enough coming in to supply the demand, and anything that looks well brings a good price. Good Beauties are out of the question in this market at present. The Meteors that come in are of varying quality. The best roses that come in are Brides, Maids and Golden Gates.

Carnations are quite plentiful and keep moving at a lively rate. White is in great demand. The past week the wholesalers handled some extra fine Guardian Angel, Triumph, White Cloud, Dorothy and Norway, the retailers' price being 75 cents to $1 a dozen. Violets had been a great glut the past week until Saturday, when they found a lively market at advanced price.

Bulbous stock still has a big demand, owing to the large amount of funeral work, and there is apparently no overstock in anything except valley, which seems to have but little call. Harrisii are still limited as to quantity, but plenty of callas are in the market.

We are at this writing having a great snow storm, which looks as though cut flowers will have to suffer again this week. Trains are all late this morning and very little stock coming in, and should this weather keep up prices will be high.

The Club Entertainment.

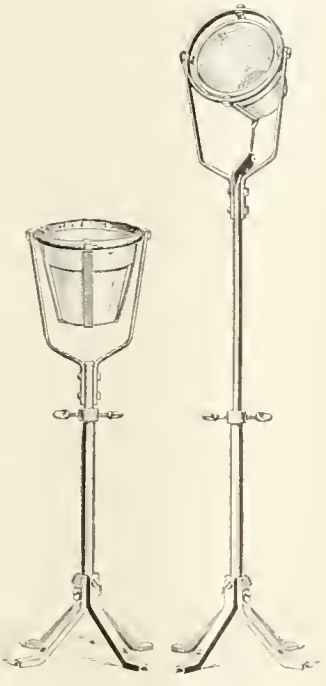
The Florists' Club entertained the members and their families on St. Valentine's day with a good programme and lunch at their rooms in the Odd Fellows' building. The different parts were all taken by florists and members of their families. The attendance numbered seventy-five. Owing to the very stormy weather those living very far out found it impossible to attend, and, of course, as usual, missed a rare treat, as the affair was a success in every way. The members were slow in coming and the performance did not begin until 9 p. m.

The performance opened up with an address of welcome by President Dunford. Miss Laura Sanders followed with a piano solo, which was pleasing. J. J. Beneke then gave a comic recitation. Frank Fillmore sang "Act on the Square, Boys," which took well. Mr. Carew Sanders pleased the audience very much with "The Yorkshire Man in London." Frank Ellis, who has a beautiful tenor voice, sang two songs with much feeling. After this J. J. Beneke did a black-face turn, with funny sayings, changing for his next turn to an old plantation darkey in a singing and dancing turn. Miss Jessie Sanders, the youngest of the performers, made a great hit with a recitation ending with a song. Mr. F. B. Call did a neat specialty turn with the mandolin. Miss Helen Ellis, assisted by her teacher, Miss Bonning, played a selection on the piano. Mr. Francis Fillmore, the oldest of our performers, recited "The Irish Immigrant," and did it well, eliciting much applause. Fred Ammann told us some funny stories in Dutch and Irish, which were much enjoyed by everybody. The Juengel children played piano solos while the audience enjoyed a splendid repast of ice cream, cake and coffee. The hour now being too late for dancing, everybody went home, well pleased with the evening's entertainment, which no doubt will be repeated in the near future.

Visitors.

George M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., spent Tuesday in St. Louis. Mr. Kellogg says the REVIEW is the only paper that brings business and good help from advertising.

James Hartshorne, of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., was in town Thursday to attend the club meeting.



Reed & Keller's New Adjustable Pot Support.

J. F. Ammann and Henry Blixen, of Edwardsville; Mayor Halstedt, Henry Emmons, E. W. Guy and A. Fehr, of Belleville; W. J. Pilcher and F. W. Ude, Jr., of Kirkwood; F. B. Call and John Steidle, of Clayton; A. Jablonsky, of Welston, and John Connon, of Webster, Mo., were visitors the past week and attended the club meeting on Thursday.

Notes.

The North Floral Co. has quit the store business at 914 Olive street.

The St. Louis Palm Co. has opened a retail department at 923 Olive street.

The Inland Pottery Co. has opened up new quarters in the Wells building, Broadway and Olive street.

James Gurney, who is well known throughout the floricultural world, and for many years director of the floricultural department at Shaw's Garden, has resigned his position to give all his time to his duties as superintendent of Tower Grove Park. Prof. W. C. Irish, assistant director of the Garden, succeeds Mr. Gurney.

Club Meeting.

The February meeting of the Florists' Club was well attended, about forty members being present, and a great many visitors called to view the exhibition of carnations, which was large and fine.

Those from out of town who exhibited were as follows: The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., showed Harlowarden, Marshall Field, Her Majesty, Mrs. Higinbotham and Mrs. Potter Palmer; F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., sent Alba, Apollo, Sibyl, Stella and D. Whitney; S. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., showed his famous Lillian Pond; William Murphy, of Cincinnati, O., staged the fine Murphy's White; Henry Eichholz, of Waynesboro, Pa., showed the boys the Tiger, but none of them cared to buck it; E. T. Graves, of Richmond, Ind., pleased the boys with President McKinley.

Among the members who showed blooms are the following: The St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, Ill., staged its fine white seedling No. 10 and a vase of fine mixed blooms. J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., showed a grand vase of White Cloud, Morning Glory and Guardian Angel. A. Jablonsky, Wellston, Mo., showed a vase of exceptionally fine Peru and two vases of well grown stock of mixed varieties; St. Louis Carnation Co., Clayton, Mo., an elegant vase of Norway; John Steidle, Central, Mo., a vase of very fine mixed blooms; F. J. Fillmore a vase of his pet, the Hoosier Maid, and Marquis, which looked fancy.

The meeting opened at 2 o'clock with Vice President George Windler in the chair in place of President Dunford, who is in Florida. Communications were received from H. Weber & Sons, Thompson Carnation Co., F. W. Taylor, J. H. Hadkinson, Cincinnati Florists' Club, E. G. Hill Co., and Prof. Trelease, which were read and filed.

Mr. Gillier was recommended to the club for the Shaw Garden scholarship, to be voted upon at the next meeting of the club, Mr. Potts, the young man last sent by the club, having resigned. Applications for membership were made by A. J. Bentzen, E. W. Guy, of Belleville, and W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood.

The express matter was again taken up, and a committee consisting of Henry Berning, C. A. Kuehn and F. M. Ellis, our three wholesale men, will take the matter in hand and communicate with the different florists' clubs and also with Mr. Pieser, of Chicago, and make a report at the next meeting for the benefit of our state vice president of the S. A. F., Mr. Charles Juengel, who has been requested to make a report to Secretary Stewart of the S. A. F.

The president appointed the following judges to look into the merits of the carnations on exhibition: F. J. Ammann, John Steidle and F. J. Fillmore on outside exhibits, and Max Herzog, F. W. Ude, Jr., and W. J. Scott on local exhibits. The judges on outside exhibits made the following report: They awarded first prizes to Harlowarden for the best 1903 introduction, as a grand crimson; Higinbotham, fine light pink, improvement on Daybreak; Mrs. Potter Palmer, good red, with large flowers; Her Majesty, very fine, large pure white; Marshall Field, fine variegated, improvement on Bradt; Sibyl, good color, somewhat lighter than President McKinley; Apollo, very fine scarlet, good, large flowers, and distinct; D. Whitney, very fine yellow, very promising; Alba, very fine white, elegantly fringed; Murphy's White, very fine white; Lillian Pond, large and very fine white; The Tiger, good for odd color; President McKinley, very good pink of its color.

The judges on local growers reported as follows: Vase shown by J. F. Ammann, first prize; Norway, by St. Louis Carnation Co., second prize; and vase shown by St. Clair Floral Co., third prize. Also special mention was made of the white seedling, No. 10, by St. Clair Floral Co.

Essays for the next meeting on March 12 will be "Construction of Solid Beds," by Max Herzog, and Otto Koenig will tell us about "Greenhouse Help—How to Obtain Best Results."

The question box resulted in quite a discussion on Easter lilies, which was very interesting. James Hartshorne of the Chicago Carnation Co., who was present, gave the boys some good advice on carnations, and urged them all to join the National Carnation Society and make an effort to hold the society's next meeting in this city. SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

After about a month of steady rain everything has cleared off nicely and we are having plenty of sunshine, with some dry winds to accompany it.

Business is about the same—that is, only fair—everything is plentiful except good roses, and they are holding their own as to price. Beauties are worth today from $3 to $6 per dozen, and only a few seen at any price. I saw some very fine Maids today in George B. Jones' store on Sutter street. They were from McLellan's place at Burlingame and retailed for $2 per dozen. No good Testout are seen, but Liberty and Bride have good color and nice, long stems.

Carnations are in good supply and have not changed in price.

Roman hyacinths are about over and daffodils are in great profusion. The single Trumpet Major is the best seller and thousands are disposed of daily; they are selling today at $1.50 per 100 wholesale.

Violets are to be seen by the millions. I counted forty street vendors today within a radius of half a block of the Chronicle building, and they were all heavily supplied with Princess violets. A bunch containing about 80 flowers and with a little trimming of wild maidenhair sells for 10 cents.

Notes.

The regular monthly meeting of the California State Floral Society will be held on Friday of this week. Mr. Peter Thiesen will address the meeting on "Rose Culture." Mr. Thiesen is a practical horticulturist and has made a specialty of roses for many years.

Mr. A. D. Pryal, who has been horticultural commissioner of Alameda county for twenty years, has been superseded by P. J. Keller, also well known in this neighborhood. Mr. Keller has been engaged for many years in the florist and nursery business in Oakland. Mr. Pryal was a very faithful official and the florists, nurserymen and fruit growers have been saved many a visit from some dangerous insects by Mr. Pryal's vigilance.

E. Lacazette, of Fruitvale, is cutting some good Lilium Harrisii. They wholesale at from $3 to $4 per dozen.

Mr. P. McDonnell, of Alden, is going to erect another large carnation house the coming season. He has had remarkable success this winter both as to quantity and quality and means to continue his good work.

Mr. James Niven, for many years in charge of Thermal Vale nurseries in Oakland, has severed his connection there and will move to his own place on High street, where he is about to erect greenhouses, principally for carnations at which Mr. Niven has become an adept in the growing. G.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The cut flower business has been very active. Supply was just about equal to the demand. A week of bright, mild weather brought forth a large supply of extra fine roses and the quality was never better.

Good long-stemmed Beauties are scarce. The medium and short ones are crippled.

Prices held up stiff on good and fancy stock. Fancy Brides and Bridesmaids sold as high as $15 per 100 and a few specials brought $20.

Carnations are more plentiful and the quality is good. The choice, fancy stock brings good prices. Fancy white and Lawson sold at 6 cents.

All kinds of bulbous stock of very good quality is coming in in large quantities; it is rather slow sale; prices low, quality considered.

Mignonette is selling well. The demand for sweet peas is not brisk. In greens there has been a heavy demand for smilax. Asparagus, plumosus and Sprengeri are quite scarce. Lilies are again plentiful. The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. is making daily shipments of roses and carnations to New Orleans.

The demand for flowers for St. Valentine's day was surprising, and exceeded all expectations.

Notes.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club on February 3, the officers of the club for 1902 were unanimously re-elected for 1903, viz: President, Wm. Ludwig, Allegheny Market, Allegheny, Pa.; treasurer Fred Burki, Bellevue, Pa.; executive committee, Fred Burki, Jno. Bader, P. S. Randolph.

Albert Lorch, Carson street, S. S., Pittsburg, is receiving bids on two carnation houses.

J. Porter has opened a store at 411 Stokes avenue, Braddock, Pa.

Fred Burki is sending the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. lots of fancy and special Maids and Brides from his Bakerstown place.

A. W. Smith is busy these days with decorations. Last Thursday he had five large ones.

C. T. Siebert's "Liberty Market flower shop" is doing a good business.

Sam McClements, of Randolph & McClements, is busy planning several large decorations for this week.

T. M. Ulam reports business good.

The following ones left here Tuesday evening to attend the carnation convention: Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Ludwig and family, Fred Burki, T. P. Langhans, Walter Breitenstein, John L. Wyland, William Lauch, E. C. Reineman, Casper Limbach, David Geddis, Edward Blind, M. M. Bunting and C. Hinkle and William Schmidt, of Johnstown. The party traveled over the Pennsylvania railroad.

Charles T. Siebert is burning natural gas under his boilers at almost the same price as soft coal.

Visitors: Edward Reid, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Simonds, of Simonds Floral Co., Cleveland, O.

Death of Frank Britenbaugh.

Frank Britenbaugh died at his home at Milvale, Pa., on Monday morning, February 16, after a short illness.

He was born in Milvale 51 years ago and was educated as a gardener.

He started in business in a small way with his brother John at the present location and eventually had ten acres of land and 50,000 feet of glass, which was all devoted to the culture of plants and cut flowers. Mr. Britenbaugh was one of the first to grow the "Little Beauty" fuchsia. He took great pride in this plant and made a financial success out of its culture.

Joseph Breker, a gardener, 78 years old, of Dixon street, Allegheny, dropped dead last Thursday at his home. Heart disease is given as the cause.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The early part of last week the market eased up a little with a light demand, both roses and carnations dropping a point in value. This condition, however, didn't last long. By Thursday the market had fully recovered and prices took an upward turn again.

Valentine's day cut more of a figure this season than has ever been experienced in this market before. The shipments for out-of-town orders were heavy with all the wholesale houses, and the local demand cleaned up everything in sight. By Saturday night every ice-box was swept bare; some late orders in many instances could not be filled at all and others had to be cut more or less particularly in roses and carnations.

Bulb stock which had been dragging somewhat the early part of the week also stiffened in sympathy with the general advance. Values on the whole did not materially rise over regular quotations, except in the line of Beauties and special grades of teas and fancy carnations.

There was a heavy demand for violets, the best grade selling up to $1.50 per 100; fair quality realizing $1 to $1.25.

With a heavy snow storm Saturday and Sunday and zero weather Monday and Tuesday, the cut has diminished perceptibly. In consequence, the market this week opened decidedly bullish.

The coal situation is somewhat easier, at least it was until the cold snap set in, which is apt to set prices soaring upward again.

Last week there was plenty of soft coal to be had with a drop in price of about $1 a ton.

C. S. Stewart, who for some time has been manager of Frank Garland's wholesale establishment, left for New Orleans Wednesday afternoon.

ST. PAUL.

Holm & Olsen's new plant houses are in very fine condition at present and promise much for the future, being well stocked with Easter plants, palms, ferns and bulbs. Mr. Ludwig Anderson, one of the best plantsmen in the northwest, is in charge. A nice batch of young seedling ferns has just been potted and more are in the pans for future use.

For Christmas trade he had a fine lot of azaleas, cinerarias and poinsettias. A small stock of Dracæna Sanderiana shows to good advantage, while the Boston ferns are very fine. A large stock of lilies, hyacinths, narcissus, tulips, etc., is potted up for Easter trade. The houses are 20 feet wide by 100 in length, a steel truss forming the roof support. The foundation is on solid rock, the boiler room being sunk below the surface. The water from the nearby hills is causing an endless amount of trouble, as it settles in the boiler pit and has to be pumped out frequently.

W. J. Lempke purchased the business formerly conducted by E. Behrens on Kent street. The houses are poorly constructed and in rather poor condition, but he is making improvements as rapidly as possible, will build more in the spring and will undoubtedly build up a nice business, as the location is in the best residence section. E. Behrens is now working for E. F. Lemke.

Christ Bussjaeger, who lost several valuable palms by freezing in a church at Christmas, has been paid the full value of same after placing the matter in an attorney's hands.

Charles F. Vogt is on the sick list, though able to be about the store. He has been ailing for some months.

Fred Schaffer has returned from Montana, where he spent the summer at a private place.

Trade has improved somewhat and is nearly up to the average of former years. Stock has increased some in quantity and improved in quality, but there is still room for improvement. The sun, which has been in hiding for many weeks, has again shone forth, bringing joy to the florists' hearts.

The report of the weather bureau shows November to have been the darkest one ever known since the bureau was established here, and the December darkness only equaled once in nearly forty years. January records will, we think, show equally adverse conditions. Under such discouraging weather conditions it is no wonder that the cut of choice blooms is light. Another discouraging condition of the present season is the severe weather and the high price of fuel which has prevented many of the smaller growers from growing anything for the market.

Receptions, balls and other society events are now creating a demand for flowers, while country trade and funeral work have shown a decided increase the past week.

Owing to the scarcity of roses and carnations, bulbous stock has been in good demand. Tulips are now in and meet with ready sales. Lilies are also coming in and are in good demand for funeral work. Carnations are fairly plentiful, while roses and violets are scarce. Good Beauties are in fair demand but almost impossible to obtain.

BROCKVILLE, ONT.—The A. L. Fisher Seed Co. has made an assignment.

CEMENT CONSTRUCTION FOR GREENHOUSE WORK.

The growing scarcity of lumber suitable for the construction of the walls and outside work of greenhouses has become now a serious subject for the florist in his building. As we all know, the life of the best wooden construction for siding, and in fact, any part of a greenhouse, is very short-lived, and no matter how good the material, in a short time it is the harboring and nesting place for all of the insect evils with which the Lord has seemed to bless the florists.

A new and permanent plan is now developing and will in a short time take the place of lumber almost entirely where the material can be procured for the construction of the walls and outside of the greenhouses. The adaptability of cement is so general and the plan of construction so easily and quickly learned by any one who chooses to make it a study, that the ordinary florist will be able with very little practice to construct the cement walls for his own greenhouse at an expense very little more than for a good wooden construction. The durability of cement is unquestioned. Cement walls are not only insect proof, but are almost entirely water and frost proof. A cement wall eight inches thick will keep out a zero frost, even if there is no heating behind it.

The mode of constructing greenhouse walls is very simple, and I will try, in as brief space as possible, to give our florist friends the best ideas for the building of same. First, the sub-foundation or underground walls must be of sufficient depth to go below the frost line unless they are protected on the outside with manure, which is not a good plan, but the frost line varies so much in different localities that no positive depth can be given for the sub-foundation. After the sub-foundation has been made, for which American or imported Portland cement, for durability, in the same proportions as in use for ordinary sidewalk and cement work, should be used, the house, or side, construction can be commenced. The whole of this work is done by setting up a mold of plank, the cement for the sub-foundation being mixed according to any cement formula used for ordinary sidewalk or cement work, as before stated, which formulas differ according to quality of cement and localities, and the material then thrown into the mold and thoroughly rammed down until it is brought to the surface of the ground.

For durability and strength, barbed wire, cut in pieces long enough to reach from the sub-foundation to the top of the height of the wall when finished, should be used. This barbed wire can be bent so as to take anchor firmly in the sub-foundation at spaces of about four or five feet, and cut long enough, as before stated, to reach the top of the finished wall. After the sub-foundation has been completed, which need not be more than twelve or fifteen inches in thickness, it may then be left to set and become nearly dry, when the mold-boards of the lower foundation could be removed and a fill made on both sides and thoroughly tamped in against the sub-foundation.

The mold can be set up again at a thickness of eight inches on the top of the sub-foundation, and the lengths of barbed wire, which will have been previously embedded in the sub-foundation, drawn up through the center of the mold and fastened to cross bars, which will hold them up while your wall is being built. When near the top of the wall, bend the ends of the barbed wires down and cover them with the finish cement. The mold for the wall or sides of the greenhouse should be of smooth plank and braced thoroughly on each side, as not to spread while the cement is being tamped in from the upper portion. The barbed wire, after having been drawn up through the center of the mold, should have the cement thoroughly tamped in around it when the mold is being filled. The center should be filled in with a one to four mixture, tamping same thoroughly with an iron-headed tool while the mold is being filled up.

The finish cement, which should be a mixture of two to one of Portland and good, sharp sand, or very fine gravel, should be plastered with a trowel firmly against both sides of the mold. The mold should be filled to within ten or twelve inches of the top, and anchor bolts for holding the plate to the top of the wall should then be located in the mold and the cement worked around them thoroughly, to secure them, so that they may be perfectly safe for holding the wooden plate. These anchor bolts are what the blacksmiths call "tee-bolts;" that is, a bolt with a tee on one end and a thread with a nut on the other. Pieces the thickness of the plate which is coming on the wall to carry the sash bars should then be laid carefully on top of the mold and an augur hole bored through them, the point of the bolt put through this auger hole and the nut screwed on in the same manner as the plate when screwed down. The cement should be packed in thoroughly around these anchor bolts and the last two inches in the top finished in with the same mixture as has been used for the sides, namely, two to one. This should be struck and finished off with a level board and made as perfectly smooth as can be, so that there may be no air spaces between the plate and the top of the wall when it is completed.

After the cement has hardened, say in fair weather without rain, in about three days, the mold for the sides can be taken off and used for other work continuously, so that it will not be necessary to build a mold for the entire house at once, as two or three lengths of molds will be as much as ordinary workmen can finish in a day. If lumber is plenty and cheap, it is not a bad idea to set up a mold of an entire side at one time, as the more of the work that can be finished at once, the better the job is in the end, and there are no cracks or breaks, though these can be avoided if, before commencing on the piece of old work, it is given a thorough wetting, so that the new work may make a thorough bond, and where work should be stopped off for any cause, it is well to have the barbed wire before spoken of brought well through, so that the new and old cement will be thoroughly bound together.

After your molds have been taken down any little holes or cracks or irregularities in the surface can be touched up with an ordinary plastering trowel and a whitewash brush and a little cement, so that your wall may be perfectly smooth, and it will have the appearance of a fine, dressed stone wall. If any fancy work is needed in the wall, such as to have it give the appearance of stone, little strips of beading nailed on the inside of the mold will give it such an effect when finished.

In localities where sand and gravel are cheap, or can be easily procured, the cost of this construction will be very little more, if any, than wood, and in lasting quality will outlive any of the present generation of florists.

Where it is the intention to build large houses for hillside work, or where walls over six feet high are needed, it is better to have the sub-foundation constructed with very coarse gravel, or, if it is easier to procure broken stone, such as is used for macadam roads, in sizes which will pass through an inch ring, this can be used. The macadam stone should be clean and free from mud and clay, and should be used in proportions of one-half stone to one-quarter good, sharp sand and one-quarter cement. This can be mixed in an ordinary mortar box with a hoe, or on a plank floor, if a mixing machine is not easily to be had. There are quite a number of power or mixing machines on the market which would pay where an extensive job makes them likely to be needed. After you have done mixing the cement you would find the mixing machine a splendid machine for running through the soil for your roses and carnations.

An article on the construction of cement benches and inside greenhouse work will follow this later.

Market Conditions.

There is a suggestion of spring in everything pertaining to the flower business, showing most appreciably in the increased supply of coal and consequent cut in price.

American Beauty roses act more winter like than anything else; the medium sizes maintaining very chilly prices indeed. A great many short ones are landing, via the Madbury overland, but only a few long ones. Other roses are coming right along, especially the large ones becoming more plentiful. Everything is coming boldly to the front except, perhaps, the double violets, which average rather poor in quality.

Business was quite fair during the week and wound up with an enormous demand on St. Valentine's day. That gentleman seems to have been much more interested this year than ever before. In former years violets only have been affected, but this year all lines were touched.

The annual trade exhibition will be held at the Park street market on Saturday, March 14. Full particulars will be given next week.

At last new quarters have been engaged for the co-operative market and possession will be taken for Easter, if possible. Another firm holds a lease until May 1, although the rooms are practically unoccupied. The location is near the corner of Columbus avenue and Berkeley street, and comprises a first floor and basement of 9,000 feet each, while the Park street quarters only measures about 3,500 feet. Books for the sale of stock in the corporation were closed February 1 and forty-four shares were promised to be taken.

Sutermeister.

No other introduction is necessary. Any pretended florist who does not know him is a fraud indeed. I will not attempt to tell you how to get to his place. Go out with him as I did, and then you will need all the paraphernalia of an Atlantic liner to find your way back again. He is unlimited monarch over a little kingdom snuggled down in the western shade of Great Blue Hill, Readville.

He came here nearly forty years ago, went to work for an old gentleman, married his daughter, annexed his greenhouse business and has been expanding ever since, thus setting the precedent for this Philippine business!

He is now in the midst of putting over 300,000 bulbs through his houses, which cover something like 5,000 feet of ground. I saw proofs of the closest planning I ever saw anywhere, in his arrangements to keep every cubic inch of his houses and every cubic inch of his time full of profitable business.

He sandwiches in a heavy crop of chrysanthemums, Jerusalem cherries, bulb material, feverfew and bedding goods with the utmost dexterity. He is surrounded now with flats and pans enough to carry him well through the season, part of them stacked up in cold storage and part seemingly lightly covered with soil and autumn leaves, for which purpose he uses immense quantities. Five men are kept busy and he himself keeps as busy as two men, largely shuttling back and forth between his domain and Boston, where his word is law on all questions pertaining to the bulb business. Call and see him.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The supply of roses is increasing slowly and the quality is very good. Bridesmaids are in best supply, there being about enough to fill orders. Brides are not quite equal to the demand. Liberties are way short, but are of good quality. Meteors are also scarce, and the quality is none of the best. Golden Gates are of good quality, but are short of the demand. A few Ivory come in now and then, but not enough to speak of. This rose is a good one and without doubt has a future. There are very few Perles being handled in this market now, but few growers having it on their places. American Beauties are very scarce, especially long-stemmed ones. The supply of short-stemmed ones is not large, but you can usually find a few.

It is the same old story as regards carnations. They are as scarce as ever, and it does not look as if there wi increase in the cut for some time. The prices hold about the same, but the quality of the stock is not up to standard.

Bulbous stock is right in it and is in great demand. Dutch and Roman hyacinths, Von Sion narcissus, tulips and valley all are selling fine and at good prices. Harrisii lilies are still scarce. Callas are growing more plentiful.

There was a decided shortening of the violet supply and a consequent stiffening in price. Princess of Wales still takes the lead when it comes to selling and brings the highest price. Double violets take a back seat when the single ones are to be had.

Asparagus, plumosus and Sprengeri are scarce. Much more could be sold. There is a good supply of fine smilax.

Rose Exhibition.

The special rose exhibition of the Cincinnati Florists' Club was held Saturday afternoon and evening. Considering the unfavorable weather it was a decided success. The quality of the stock shown was very fine.

W. K. Partridge had a magnificent show. He took first prize on Maids, Brides, Meteors and Golden Gates. George & Allen had a fine lot of stock staged. Besides their display of roses, they showed a great lot of bulbous stock, including narcissus, valley, tulips, hyacinths and Harrisii lilies. They won the general display prize; also first and second on Bridesmaids, Brides and Meteors, and first, second and third on American Beauties and Perles. On best display of violets Corbett & Wilson took first prize; W. Rogers second and third. There were no entries for the Liberty prize.

R. Witterstaetter staged three vases of seedling carnations, all different, and from which it was a hard matter to pick the best. They were all fine.

Ed. Murphy showed a vase of Murphy's White which was fine, and was a vivid example of what could be done with this ever blooming variety.

Heller Bros., of New Castle, Ind., sent a vase of Franz Deegen. The roses were in good form and attracted considerable attention.

Club Meeting.

At 8 o'clock the regular monthly meeting of the society was called to order. There was an unusually large number of members present and every one seemed to take a personal interest in the matters under discussion. Several matters of importance were disposed of and a very interesting meeting was had. There was considerable talk about stirring up more social interest in the club. It was the general opinion that too little time was given to social gatherings, and it was finally decided that anything done in this line would be bound to benefit the society as a whole. It would also give the wives and daughters of the florists a chance to become better acquainted, and their interest in the doings of the club, together with their support, is something that is much needed. William Rogers and Clarence Ohmer were appointed to see what could be done, and an entertainment of some sort is to be looked for shortly.

Visitors were: Paul Berkowitz and B. Eschner, of Philadelphia, and William Trillow, of Chicago. C. J. Ohmer.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Market.

The weather still continues unfavorable for plant growth and flowers are coming out too slowly to take care of the growing demand. In the shipping trade orders are cut to from one-third to one-half of quantity ordered, and all customers not regular cut out entirely. In a word, a flower famine prevails in all lines except bulbs, with even violets none too plentiful at present.

In the Chicago market the past week the writer saw callas sent out as a substitute for roses by the hundreds, and violets, paper whites and tulips for carnations. Anything, so long as it was a good flower, seemed to go.

Prices of carnations, 50 cents, 75 cents and $1 per dozen. Roses, $1 to $1.50 per dozen; American Beauties, $2 to $6 per dozen. Tulips, 75 cents; valley, 50 to 75 cents; paper whites, 50 cents; lilies, $2 per dozen. Violets, Lady Campbell, 35 cents per bunch of 25; darks, 25 cents; single, 25 cents per dozen.

Reorganization of the Florists' Club.

Monday evening the florists held a meeting at the store of Henry Smith and reorganized the old Florists' Club, adopting the old constitution and by-laws, with slight alterations. The club is to meet the third Monday of each month, at a place yet to be determined, but presumably at the Board of Trade rooms. The first meeting under the new constitution will be at Henry Smith's Monday evening, February 16. Officers were elected as follows: President, Henry Smith; vice president, W. Hannah; secretary, N. B. Stover; treasurer, James Schols; reporter, George F. Crabb. Standing committees appointed by the president: Reception, Wencel Cukerski, P. Kunsts and N. Freylick; entertainment, A. Hanna, Henry Van Velda and George F. Crabb. The club will start off with about fifteen members, with the prospect of as many more by next meeting. An attempt to call it the Florists' and Gardeners' Club failed to carry. At our next meeting N. B. Stover will read an essay on "How to Grow Violets."

TORONTO.

Trade during the past week has been good, and with the short supply in many lines it has appeared greater than perhaps it otherwise would as we are shorthanded all the time. The social functions of note have used up a great amount of surplus stock for decorations.

All eyes are now being turned to the event of the season, the great Canadian Carnation Exhibit, dated for March 5, in St. George's Hall. This, to the Canadian florists, especially those who are interested in carnation growing, will be an important event. Elaborate preparations have been made so that those of our American cousins, who wish to exhibit any new varieties, or especially well-grown standard varieties, can have the best of opportunities for doing so. The Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association has been making special arrangements with the customs officials and the Canadian Express Co. so that shipments will be delivered without delay. However, just write to the Master of Ceremonies, Mr. Geo. Mills, 227 Ossington avenue, Toronto, and he will cheerfully furnish all the information.

Your correspondent is also informed that the C. H. A. executive will hold a meeting at 9:30 a. m. in Dunlop's Conservatories, on Friday, the 6th. From present indications it looks as though there were going to be something doing the first week in March.

We had a visit from Dr. Roe, of Georgetown, this week, and were informed on the side that he is going to extend his place very considerably during the season. Mr. C. Turp, of this city, is also making preparations for largely increasing his plant.

Grobba & Wandrey have been bringing in quantities of lilac and azaleas, fine plants and well bloomed; these have helped to keep up the decoration of the florists' stores considerably.

This week we saw the first issue of what promises to be a real live Canadian florists' journal; it is called the Canadian Florist, and is published by Messrs. D. C. Nixon & Co., of this city. It is to be, at first, a semi-monthly, to be published on the first and fifteenth of every month. We believe there is room for such a paper amongst the Canadian trade, and if it is taken hold of by the trade, as the American journals are taken hold of by the American trade, it will prove a success, and will soon be circulating amongst the trade in the United States as the American journals are amongst the trade in Canada.

EXPRESS RATES.

We have received a communication from J. L. O'Quinn & Co. Raleigh, N. C., in which they state that after vigorous protest to their agent against the increased express rates, that went into effect December 10, without receiving any satisfaction, they began sending small lots by mail, and to nearby towns by freight. They were soon in a position to show their express agent that his company had lost the carriage of over a hundred packages, and they then received a communication from the headquarters of the Southern Express Co. through their agent at Raleigh, stating that from that date they would put the rate back to single merchandise rate to all points not reached by any other express company, but that to all competitive points they would still have to charge the one and one-half rate, and that on all parcels that were delivered to them by other express companies they would have to charge the one and one-half rate.

This report makes it clear that the only agency which is holding up the rate of one and one-half times merchandise rate is the combination of the companies known as the Express Traffic Managers' Association. It would seem as though the proper way to get effective action in this matter is to make the express companies understand that unless the rate is changed and the florists' business is no longer discriminated against that they will, through attorneys, attack the charters of the companies, as indicated by the resolutions adopted at the last meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club and reported in our last issue.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Trade the past week has been good, owing to much funeral work, and lots of white flowers were used up. Roses are still scarce. Stock is suffering for the want of sunshine. We have had eight weeks of real cloudy weather, during which time the sun shone only three days. Carnations are not overplentiful. Some very fine Lawsons can be seen. Harrisii lilies are coming in and find a ready sale. Violets of good quality are now coming in.

Joseph Coenen is the happiest man in town over the arrival of a fine bouncing boy. Congratulations are in order.

Nanz & Neuner report a very good shipping trade this season. Their greenhouses out at St. Matthews are in apple-pie order. Theodore Strockhecker is the right man in the right place.

C. H. Kunzman has been on the sick list for two weeks, but is able to be out again.

Hy. Fuchs' greenhouses are looking fine just at the present time.

E. Heitz, opposite St. Louis Cemetery, intends to put up two more greenhouses this season. Ed. is a hustler of the old school.

The firm of Geo. Thompson & Sons is no more. It is now Geo. Thompson, Jr. He has the finest violets that come to this market. He considers the Luxonne the best paying violet.

F. Walker & Co. had a very large wedding decoration, in which they used a great quantity of flowers.

E. G. Reimer's wife, who has been quite ill with typhoid fever for some time, is improving slowly.

Joseph Bell, the polite assistant foreman at Joseph Coenen & Co.'s, is the busiest man in the Highlands. All he talks to you about is ferns and palms, and he is always ready to sell you a bill of goods.

CLEVELAND.

Business here has been very good. Up to the present time there is and has been a scarcity of flowers of all kinds. Bulb stock helps out, but that at times is rather hard to get. Valentine's day cleaned up most everything in bloom, that evening finding some stores entirely cleaned up on cut flowers. Violets seemed to have the first call, although carnations, roses and bulb stock sold well.

In plants, azaleas sold very well, especially the colored ones, there being not much call for white stuff. It is becoming the fad here, and a very nice custom it is too, of sending flowers as a valentine; it is not only sensible but it also puts the shekels into the florists' pocket.

There has been a great call for funeral flowers here this winter, consequently white stuff has been very scarce all winter and prices have ruled high for all kinds of flowers.

Tenep.

CROMWELL, CONN.

Visitors have been numerous of late, among them S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia; W. W. Foster, Westerly, R. I.; Henry Cliffe, Fairfield, Conn.; Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass.; F. H. Bishop, Guilford, Conn.; D. A. Spear, Hartford, Conn., C. F. Fairfield, Springfield, Mass.

Without doubt Golden Gate and Ivory are the best and most profitable roses on the place, at least at present.

In one of the cooler houses a very fine lot of Crimson Ramblers is getting into shape and bidding fair to be fine specimens at Easter.

The call for grafted roses has been very large this year and, as was the case last year, late orders will have to be refused.

In the carnation houses the cut for January did not come up to the cut for the previous month, but the shortage was due simply to the dark weather.

Lily of the valley has been very fine of late and the cut large. The demand for special selected stock has been notably on the increase. There is in every city a demand for the best and it is in the retailers' power to encourage and increase this call.

W. R. Pierson.

Enclosed you will find $1.00 for another year's subscription to the Review. I cannot do without it. My last classified adv. sold nearly all the stock I had ready.—A. Brumley, Birmingham, Iowa.

Seed Trade News.

Springfield, O.—Schmidt & Botley report that the demand for seeds is much greater so far this year than it has been in pervious years.

The building erected in Washington by the Phillipps Seed Co., of Toledo, O., for the handling of the government seed contract was highly commended by the secretary of agriculture in a special report to congress.

Henry A. Salzer, the well-known La Crosse, Wis., seedsman, has recently purchased 250,000,000 feet of standing timber in Oregon. He says: "A few hundred dollars saved each year and invested for five years in Oregon pine, will make any florist or seedsman rich.

Chaumont, N. Y.—Rogers Bros. report that contracts on beans are being made at quite an advance over last year's prices; also quite an advance in values of some varieties of peas, while on others prices have fallen a little below those of last year. The demand for seed is good and business promises well for the season.

Shiremanstown, Pa.—John F. Rupp reports that trade sales of his florists' seed specialties are not quite up to his usual amount for the season of the year. Most orders come from the southern states. He attributes this to the unsatisfactory state of the fuel conditions of the north. He has not been sowing the amount of seed he usually does in consideration of the coal problem.

The adoption of the proposed post check currency by congress would be of special benefit to seedsmen doing a catalogue business, and it seems as though some steps should be taken by the trade to assist in its passage. It is understood that the express companies who issue money orders are attempting to defeat the measure. By the proposed plan currency could be converted into drafts on the treasury by filling in certain blank spaces and attaching postage stamps to cover cost of issuing new bills.

Springfield, O.—The American Seeding Machine Company will be the name of the new grain drill combine. Its president will be Captain E. L. Buchwalter, head of the Superior Drill Company of this city. The combine will have a capital stock of $20,000,000. Before the first of February it will be incorporated under the laws of New Jersey. The stock has already been subscribed. The Superior Drill Company and P. P. Mast & Co. are both included in the deal. This city will be the headquarters of the new combine.

Omaha, Neb.—Present indications are that the seedsmen of the west will have no occasion for complaints. Market gardeners, farmers and everybody interested seems to be in readiness to take hold and are already buying or contracting for future delivery. Some of the field and grass seeds are rather short (but good) and I think we will have but little trouble to meet the demand. I look for a very good and prosperous season for the up-to-date seedsmen of the west and bounteous crops for the market gardener and farmer. S. B. Stewart.

If you have the right varieties.

YOU don't want too many of the very early ones. You want the large, fine blooms of the second earlies. I have watched the market carefully for several years and found that it is there where you make your money in Mums — to have the right varieties — those that come in at the right time. In yellow there is nothing better than Monrovia and Robt. Halliday.

The first is a few days or a week earlier but the latter is the best bloom. They are both money-makers when grown right. I also have a white sport of GLORY OF PACIFIC. It is a large and better flower than its parent and I have grown it for my own use for three years, and it is the best second early white I know of. The only trouble is that I have not made enough fuss about it or given it a fancy name. I have a large stock of the three above varieties—fine, sturdy, cool-grown stock from 2 and 2½-inch pots, ready to ship. You can get many cuttings from each plant if you buy now and keep propagating. Also a few Appleton, Eaton, Bonnaffon, etc. All at $4.00 per 100. No better stock in the market.

Write for prices on large quantities. Express prepaid on orders of $4.00 and over.

Spring weather and large shipments of bulbous stock combined to lower values during the past week; St. Valentine's day alone checking the decline.

On Monday another weak condition developed, and the most disagreeable weather of the month was experienced. At night an old-time blizzard materialized and by midnight a regular northwestern welcome was in process of manufacture for the carnation society.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Plant Registration.

Peter Crowe, Utica, N. Y., registers Adiantum Cuneatum Croweanum. Found growing in a bed of A. cuneatum thirteen years ago, nothing except pure stock of cuneatum having been grown for eight years previous. Fronds much larger, habit of growth much stronger than that of the parent variety. Foliage very dark green, graceful, ripening in about one-half the time needed for cuneatum. Height 28 to 30 inches. Has never been known to produce fertile seed. Originally grown by Mr. Crowe under the name of Bardii, for which the name Croweanum is now substituted.

PIPING.

How many feet of 2½-inch pipe will it take to heat a house 22x60, house standing alone? We want to maintain a night temperature of 55 degrees. Height to ridge is 12 feet. Glass in ends; also side ventilators. Outside temperature rarely drops to zero, and 10 above is about as cold as we ever have it.

Can a No. 16 Hitchings boiler heat this house and another house 50x20 that stands twenty feet away; also usual office and potting shed? SUBSCRIBER.

In reply to "Subscriber," for maintaining a night temperature of 55 degrees in the independent greenhouse 22x66, he will require at least 1,000 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe. In his inquiry he speaks of 2½-inch pipe. As this is approximately the outside measurement of 2-inch pipe, we assume he has reference to pipe of this internal diameter.

Regarding the ability of the boiler he mentions to heat this house and an additional house 50x20 placed about twenty feet away, the work would be somewhat in excess of the rated capacity of the boiler, but if he is willing to give his fire a little extra attention on cold nights and is careful to thoroughly protect the mains leading from one house to the other so as to prevent unnecessary loss of heat by radiation, the boiler in question will carry him along, but, as stated above, it will require special attention on the coldest nights.

LILLIAN POND

The Grand New White Carnation.

It has given us thus far this winter more flowers to the plant than White Cloud or Queen Louise and is bringing in the Boston wholesale market $5.00 and $6.00 per 100.

An early and continuous bloomer, strong grower and lifts well from the field.

We shall show at the Brooklyn meeting only average sized flowers, the same as we are picking and shipping every day, and such as any grower will be able to produce with ordinary care. We have put this variety under no special treatment for this occasion.

Our Large Stock of 24,000 Plants enables us to send out nothing but Strong, Healthy Cuttings. All orders filled on short notice.

UTICA, N. Y.

On February 5 the Utica Florists' Club held its annual carnation meeting at its rooms in the Mannerchor building. Many of the new varieties were shown. Enchantress was grand; it needs no description; also Mrs. M. A. Patten, a beautiful pink and white of the largest size; and Nelson Fisher, a fine carnation of cerise color; the last two to be introduced in 1904. The Boston Market, which, while not new about Boston, had never been seen here, is a white that everybody will want as a money maker. The above are all sent out, or to be sent out, by Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass. We thought when he introduced Mrs. Lawson that he had done his best, but now we hardly know where he will stop.

We would next like to speak about Lillian Pond, grown and introduced by Mr. S. J. Renter, of Westerly, R. I., a grand white of large size and fine stem, and a good keeper we know, as it was shipped on February 2, but did not arrive until February 4, and was O. K. to show on the evening of February 5. Every member of the club was well pleased with it.

Now we come to three fine varieties from Mr. Warburton, Fall River, Mass. The elegant Cressbrook that was sent out last year was bought by a great many here. Some have succeeded with it and others have not, but those who did not will surely try again this year after seeing such a grand flower. He also sent us Fair Maid (not but that we have many fair maids here), a beautiful light pink, good size, etc., and well thought of; also a fine red named Challenger, which color we all need—a good flower.

We now come to three grand flowers sent us by S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, Mass., the Queen, which comes in for honors as well as Boston Market and Lillian Pond—hard to tell which is the best, but certainly all grand, good whites; also a seedling of 1901, orange and pink, fine for its color, big flower and good stem; and a pink somewhat the color of Lawson, also seedling of 1901.

We were all somewhat disappointed when we opened the box of Pres. McKinley and found it frozen, as we all wanted to see it very much, but think it must be a grand color. There was also another vase of the Queen from Little South Floral Co., which showed good growing. We must not forget Marian, a good white too, not grown for exhibition, but all right as a commercial flower, sent us by Mr. Isaac Passmore, of West Chester, Pa. Mr. John A. Sholl sent us some of his Success and a few seedlings of odd colors. Success is a beautiful color and a great bloomer, he says. Mr. C. F. Seitzer, our worthy treasurer, brought down some Ivory roses that would be hard to beat, long, stiff stems—a fine rose. Mr. Y. McGowan brought some violets, good in color and stem.

I almost forgot to mention that the bunch of Adonis came in bad condition, being chilled and hardly fit to show, which we all very much regretted.

MARKET GARDEN NOTES.

I find no better or more profitable tomato than the Stone. If I have poor success in growing plants under glass, I order seedling plants from Maryland in March and set in hotbed heated with manure.

The Stokes early watermelon is the best, most delicious and productive sort I have ever grown. It is small in size, red flesh and thin skin; seed size of large apple seed. It will ripen far north of us, but to make sure grow in frames one foot square, covered with glass in cold, raw weather.

To grow sweet potatoes far north don't plant on ridges. Plow a furrow in warm, sandy, poorish soil. Put in bottom fresh stable manure well tramped down and cover with three inches of soil. On these ridges, one foot apart, set the short kinds like Jersey Red. Plants can be got in New Jersey for $1.50 per 1,000 and should be set about the first of June.

I sow two sowings of the earliest peas ten days apart, the first as soon as ground opens in the spring, and at the same time Premium and Champion of England, giving me a succession of peas for market and the table. I sow a few rows of Champion every week until July to keep up a succession. The demand for green peas and sweet corn generally exceeds the supply in our market.

Asparagus is quickly sold at paying prices. To grow from seed pour hot water on and let it stand until it germinates.

I have had fine success growing early plants, like tomato and cabbage, by starting them as follows: Have a watertight sheet-iron pan any size and six inches deep. Fill one-fourth to one-third full of water; under pan put an incubator lamp, thus heating water to blood heat. In this water set small pans or pots filled with earth, in which sow the seed. When plants are an inch high transplant in hotbeds.

A fine border for flower beds is two or three wires run around it on stakes, and on this grow morning glories or cinnamon vines.

Soft coal will burn more freely and with fewer clinkers if a little wood is thrown on top occasionally.

A. M. Purdy.

BUTTE, MONT.—The Butte Floral Co. report that Mr. A. M. Elliott is not in their employ, though he was for a few months prior to July 1, 1901. Letters they have recently received indicate an impression in some quarters that he is still in their employ, hence this explanation. They understand he is at present in Pittsburg.

A CALLA flower with a secondary spathe of leaf form has been sent us by Mr. Samuel Murray, Kansas City, Mo. It is a good illustration of the fact that the flower is merely a changed leaf. We have seen specimens with three fairly well developed spathes.

TOUGHKENAMON, Chester Co., Pa., Dec. 29, 1902.
MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.
Yours very truly, ROBERT C. BANCROFT.

THE BROOKLYN CARNATION CONVENTION

THE CARNATION CONVENTION.

The twelfth annual convention of the American Carnation Society convened in the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., last Thursday. The weather, as is usual at this season of the year, was the worst of the season, and nearly all incoming trains were seriously delayed by the heavy fall of snow and bitter cold weather, and, as a result, a great many shipments of flowers intended for exhibition were so delayed as to arrive too late for competition or were frozen so badly that they were not presentable. Had all the flowers intended for exhibition reached their destination in good condition and on time, the two large halls provided for the display would not have had sufficient capacity to hold them.

The exhibition, which all must admit was the most important part of the convention, occupied two large connecting halls that joined the Academy of Music, the entrance being through the building of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. The walls were prettily decorated with wild smilax, and groups of palms and other decorative plants occupied points of vantage. In the hall first entered, circular tables held the collections entered in the special classes, and engravings from photographs of nearly all of these tables appear in this week's issue. Passing into the other hall, which was considerably larger, the flowers were found displayed on long benches placed parallel with each other. The quality of flowers averaged probably better than at any previous exhibition of the society, though the quantity actually displayed was probably not much in excess of last year, on account of the numerous failures of flowers to reach the city in time for competition. Those reaching the city from the far west arrived all the way from three to six hours late, and as the thermometer was near and sometimes below the zero mark, the effect upon flowers in shipment can be imagined. A full report of the exhibition, together with list of awards, etc., will be found below.

The Sessions.

Only two sessions of the society were found necessary. The first session was called to order at the Assembly Hall in the Germania Club House, at 8 p. m. on Thursday. President C. W. Ward introduced Mr. Richard Young, Park Commissioner of the city, who gave the members a hearty welcome in behalf of the city of Brooklyn. He said he did not welcome the members of the American Carnation Society as business men, for he felt that they had left business behind them and come together to exhibit the best fruits of their labor, and that the exhibition meant something more than an aggregation of trade products. He felt that the meeting in Brooklyn was singularly appropriate, in view of the fact that the American carnation had first been developed in this country by the veteran Mr. Charles Zeller, of Flatbush, which is a part of the borough of Brooklyn, and who was undoubtedly the father of the present type of carnation in America. He said he had known Mr. Zeller for twenty-five years, and delivered a very feeling eulogy upon his character as a man and his ability as a florist. He said that Brooklyn was a city of flowers, as well as a city of churches, and that no people were more generally appreciative of the beauties of nature. He spoke feelingly of the value of parks, their trees and flowers, in the education and uplifting of the character of the people, and he considered this of paramount importance, for what better gifts can man give to humanity than rest, comfort and beauty. He thanked the members for giving Brooklyn the opportunity to see the magnificent exhibition of carnation flowers, and he knew that its people would thoroughly appreciate the marvelous development shown, which in his mind was almost miraculous.

Mr. William Scott made response in behalf of the society, and learning, in reply to a question, that Mr. Young was the sole park commissioner for Brooklyn, he emphasized the fact that one good man is worth a vast sight more in such a position than fifteen bad or doubtful ones. He referred to the exhibition as equal to any of the past, and probably superior. He felt that all the members greatly appreciated the deep interest shown in the convention of the American Carnation Society by the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, and by its park department, as well as by its Horticultural Society and other citizens, and expressed to them through Mr. Young the hearty thanks of the society for their hospitality.

President C. W. Ward then read his address as follows:

President Ward's Address.

Ladies and Gentlemen, and Fellow-Members of the American Carnation Society:

The twelfth annual convention of our prosperous, vigorous and useful association convenes in the good old city of Brooklyn under most auspicious circumstances. Never during any period since our organization at Philadelphia on October 15, 1891, have the results accomplished been more apparent. Our growth has been a healthy and steady one, each year adding substantial achievements and additional luster to our name. At each of our previous annual meetings it has almost seemed as if the enthusiastic interest in the carnation must sooner or later wane; nevertheless, at the present time the interest in the divine flower is noticeably greater than it was twelve months ago, and there now seems to be no valid reason in sight why this interest should in anywise fail in the future.

The improvement in the carnation as to size, strength of stem, richness of color, and freedom of bloom, has kept even pace with the advancement of our society. The size of the flower has practically reached that of the largest blooms produced by the English carnation culturists as early in the nineteenth century as 1830, at which time the English carnation seems to have reached the apex of its improvement and popularity. At that period carnation blooms nearly five inches in diameter, upon strong stems approaching four feet in length, were grown and exhibited. This was, however, done by developing the flower with artificial feeding, much in the same manner as the enormous chrysanthemums of the present day are grown. In addition to this, it was necessary to bind up the calyxes of the flowers and to split down the points to prevent bursting, as well as to extract surplus petals and arrange those remaining in order to produce a shapely bloom. Then, too, the English carnation was produced during the early summer months, a much easier cultural feat under English climatic conditions than is the production of our magnificent blooms in mid-winter.

Little need be said regarding cultural methods, the exhibition of seedlings, or the granting of certificates, as that ground has been thoroughly thrashed over by my predecessors. Be it sufficient to state that from present appearances there has not been, nor will there be any diminution of the enthusiastic experimental work and careful study by the members of our society.

It is with pleasure that I am able to announce the completion of the incorporation of our society under the laws of the state of New York. The certificate of incorporation has been filed with the secretary of state at Albany, and has been approved by him as well as by a justice of the supreme court of the state of New York, and filed in the office of the county clerk of Queens county. The board of directors has carefully compiled a constitution, which will be presented for consideration this evening, and to which I would invite your careful attention.

So far as my mental vision can now forecast the future, our skies seem to be clear, with but slight exception, and that exception is one which we may easily avoid. Our members are well aware that the general sentiment of our association has from the beginning been in favor of maintaining the Carnation Society upon a substantial and independent basis; not binding ourselves in any partnerships, but maintaining such friendly attitudes toward other national floricultural and horticultural organizations as would secure for us a free and untrammeled field for the performance of our particular work.

A few years since the agitation of a scheme to combine all American horticultural societies was begun by some leading members of the Society of American Florists. While such combination seemed to be fraught with considerable danger to the interests of our carnation society, consideration of the subject was entered into in a broad and liberal spirit, with the view that if any feasible method could be devised whereby an association of these societies could be brought about upon a plan that would sufficiently safeguard the interests of our society, I would favor such union and would join my influence to bring it about, although aware at the time that many of our influential members were honestly and firmly opposed to such effort.

No less a gentleman than our esteemed fellow-member and wise counselor, Mr. W. N. Rudd, early pronounced the scheme a hopeless one, and strenuously advised its abandonment, a position which he has since consistently held.

While I am of the opinion that it would be possible to organize the various florists' associations into a representative body, upon lines similar to those upon which the government of the United States is planned, nevertheless, after having served for two consecutive years as chairman of the committee upon closer relations in the Society of American Florists, and having during this period endeavored to co-operate to the best of my ability in bringing about such union as would be acceptable to all of the interests involved, and at the same time to protect the future welfare of our carnation society, I am finally forced to the firm conclusion that the task is hopeless.

There are certain radical elements among the membership of the Society of American Florists who believe that that society should be given such a dominating position in the association as will eventually cripple the independent positions of the other associations, and until such radical element shall have changed or have been overcome by the more conservative members, to the end that their views may become so modified as to enable them to consider the project in a greater spirit of liberality, recognizing that the carnation, chrysanthemum, peony and other national horticultural associations may stand upon the same footing as that of the Society of American Florists, and be represented in the combined body according to the numerical strength of their membership, there would seem to be no practical hope of bringing about such a combination, and that further agitation or discussion of this subject would lead only to misunderstandings, and perhaps feelings of animosity.

It is my belief, and I think the opinion of those most interested in the future welfare of the carnation society, that its present position, free and untrammeled by any copartnership with any other association, should be maintained. Partnerships between individuals are more or less dangerous, and partnerships between associations are equally so. Neither should be entered into unless it be necessary for the protection of the contracting parties, or unless the benefits which appear to be certain to be secured are of sufficient magnitude to warrant the risks incurred. It would seem as if no such valid reason exists in this case, and consequently the subject should now be dismissed. The Carnation Society has a necessary work to perform. Up to the present time it has performed that work well, without the assistance of other associations; in fact, in the face of more or less opposition, it has demonstrated that it can carry on and maintain its work; and wherever it has held an annual convention it has been received with open arms, and better still, bidden to come again.

The increase in the carnation industry of the country, which is undoubtedly a permanent one, will render it more or less easy as the years roll on to maintain our present status. The carnation is unquestionably second to no flower as a staple florists' commodity. The sale of carnations must always be classed upon the same basis as that of roses, and it would not be surprising if in the end it would exceed the rose in commercial importance.

Before concluding, I would particularly call your attention to the generous treatment which has been accorded our society by the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. It has been more than liberal in our entertainment; in fact, has exhibited a generosity which I believe has not been excelled by any other association that has charged itself with the entertainment of our society, and I would especially request that a fitting resolution be passed, acknowledging the courtesies which we have received at its hands.

It was suggested that the address be discussed then and there, and on motion of Mr. Scott the thanks of the society were tendered to the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences and the Brooklyn Horticultural Society for the preparation they had so ably made for the housing of the exhibition, the place of meeting, and the plan of entertainment of the members of the society.

Secretary Albert M. Herr then read his annual report as follows:

Secretary Herr's Report.

Your secretary has his usual short report, having issued the proceedings of the Indianapolis meeting in due time and mailing them to all paid-up members of the society.

A preliminary premium list was issued in the summer. The regular list February 1, and various circular letters during the year, were mailed to the members. Any one not having received these items will please report to their secretary, so that he may get their address corrected.

Membership for 1902 consisted of 267 paid-up members; lost during the year for non-payment of dues, 22; new members gained previous to this meeting, 19. This is a good showing, as usually the gain, aside from the meeting, is very small.

Duplicate bills for dues that had been paid were issued to three of the members during the year, and your secretary publicly apologizes for this error. He also wants to thank the exhibitors for their careful attention to the details of their entries, as it lessened his work considerably at a very hard time of the year.

The twenty-five cent tax for issuing the railroad certificates is a new innovation of the railroads, and will be applicable to all tickets of this kind, so that our society is in no way discriminated against in this respect.

That the society is doing good active work is shown by the fact that the postage bill from March 21, 1902, to February 12, 1903, is $52.

ALBERT M. HERR,
Secretary.

The report of Treasurer F. E. Dorner showed receipts to the working fund during the year of $952, expenditures of $887.79, and a cash balance in this fund of $64.21. Additions to the permanent fund during the year amounted to $223, making a total now in the permanent fund of $1,873. A finance committee consisting of John G. Esler, William Scott and W. N. Rudd were appointed to examine the treasurer's account, which they did, and made a report that they found it correct in every particular.

Mr. E. G. Gillett reported for the committee on securing the adoption of the carnation as the national flower, and stated that the new organization known as the Carnation League had practically taken the work out of the committee's hands. He asked, therefore, that the committee be now discharged, and this was done.

Mr. H. M. Altick, of Dayton, Ohio, told about the establishment of the Carnation League by Mr. Lewis G. Reynolds, of his city, whom he had recently met, and who had told him that the league now had ten million members, of which no less than fifteen thousand were in Dayton, Ohio, alone. He felt that, aside from all sentimental considerations, the Carnation League had been of tremendous benefit to the trade, and that it would be no more than proper for the members of the American Carnation Society to show their appreciation of this by endeavoring to forward the work of the league regarding a fund for a McKinley Memorial to be erected at Canton, Ohio. His suggestion was warmly indorsed by Mr. William Scott, who stated also that the florists should encourage the observation of McKinley day by the wearing of a carnation flower, and by making no exorbitant charges for flowers on that day. He thought that the universal wearing of a carnation flower on McKinley day should be encouraged in every way by the florists. A committee was finally appointed to secure subscriptions from members of the society and others interested in the carnation toward the McKinley memorial fund.

The city of Detroit was selected without opposition for the convention next year.

The New Officers.

The following officers for the ensuing year were nominated: President, Geo. A. Rackham, Detroit, Mich.; vice president, James Hartshorne, Joliet, Ill.; secretary, Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.; treasurer, F. E. Dorner, Lafayette, Ind. These gentlemen were elected by acclamation at the session the next day.

The New Constitution.

Owing to a misunderstanding regarding the instructions last year to have the proposed new constitution printed and circulated to the entire membership at least thirty days before the meeting, it was found inexpedient to take it up for consideration at this meeting, but as failure to act would leave the society without a constitution during the year, owing to the fact that the society had been incorporated during the year, a motion was finally adopted that the constitution as submitted be adopted for one year, copies to be printed and circulated to the entire membership within thirty days, so that all might have abundant opportunity to make suggestions in good season before final action is taken next year.

A Table of Seedlings at the Brooklyn Exhibition of the American Carnation Society.

Next Year's Meeting.

There was some little discussion regarding the advisability of changing the date of the meeting to a later date, with the idea of endeavoring to avoid the annual February blizzard. There was some little diversity of opinion on the matter, some holding that the meeting was already held too late in the season, while others strongly urged a later date. It was finally decided that the Detroit convention should be held the first week in March.

Friday's Session.

At the Friday morning session the reports of the judges were read and the officers nominated were elected. President-elect Rackham was called upon and in a few earnest words promised that no effort would be spared to make the next convention a credit to the society and thanked the members for the honor done him.

In a discussion upon the registration question it was pointed out that various similar sports of the carnation were receiving different names and that some steps should be taken to avoid a duplication. A committee of two was finally appointed to act with the secretary in keeping the register free from duplications and assist in making it complete. The committee was instructed to register the names of sports provisionally only until the varieties have been shown at the annual exhibitions of the society.

The board of directors was instructed to prepare a premium list for next year's exhibition at Detroit.

The necessary steps were taken to transfer the property of the old society to the newly incorporated one, to perfect the record.

The final resolutions were adopted at the banquet in the evening.

The Exhibition.

Two large halls connected by a short passageway were devoted to the exhibition and the display was a memorable one. The round tables seen in the pictures were in one hall. In the other hall long tables were used and a general view of this hall appears in this issue. The number of flowers on exhibition was probably somewhat larger than at Indianapolis last year, and the quality averaged even higher. The quantity would have been much greater but for the fact that many shipments were delayed by the blizzard and that in others the flowers were frozen. In few shipments from a distance were all the flowers in condition for exhibition on arrival. The exhibitors were certainly working under serious disadvantages, and it is remarkable that the display was so large and fine as it was.

As we print elsewhere in this issue comments by Messrs. Scott, Baur and Osborn on the varieties exhibited we need say little about them here. The prominence of Lawson in the classes for standard varieties was even more noticeable than last year. It has taken a firmer hold than ever of first position in its class. In every one of the classes for dark pink it took both first and second prizes.

Adonis seemed to us to be in hardly as good form as last year, and Enchantress was not up to expectations in several ways, many of the flowers being quite asleep on the second day. It is to be hoped that these fine varieties have not permanently deteriorated, as both colors are needed. Governor Woleott showed up well in the classes for white and Boston Market impressed one as probably an excellent commercial white. Albatross, Mr. Marquisee's new white, won over Wolcott in the vases of fifty blooms and made an excellent impression. Mr. Weber's new white, Gov. Lowndes, made a very favorable impression, as did also The Queen, the new white shown by S. J. Goddard. John May's Bride is a beautiful white flower and White Bradt, shown by Dailledouze Bros., attracted much attention.

In scarlets Mr. Marquisee's Flamingo was decidedly a leader and it promises well. Gov. Roosevelt held its place well among the crimsons, and Mrs. M. A. Patten was very prominent among the white variegated sorts. Very few Bradts were seen. Sunbird, Mr. Marquisee's new yellow variegated, deserved the certificate awarded. Harlowarden reaffirmed its claim to a high position in the deep scarlets. Pres. Roosevelt is a lighter and brighter crimson than Gov. Roosevelt and will, we think, prove a more popular color with the public.

CERTIFICATES.

The judges of seedlings were Messrs. Wm. Scott, R. Witterstaetter and Wm. Nicholson, and they awarded certificates as follows:

Lillian Pond, white, by S. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I. Scored 90 points.

Gov. Lowndes, white, by H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md. Scored 91 points.

Albatross, white, by L. E. Marquisee, Syracuse, N. Y. Scored 90 points.

Flamingo, scarlet, by L. E. Marquisee, Syracuse, N. Y. Scored 90 points.

Sunbird, yellow variegated, by L. E. Marquisee, Syracuse, N. Y. Scored 87 points.

Exhibition Notes

Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, displayed a fine group of the new Pandanus Sanderi.

Several fine plants of Nephrolepis Piersoni were exhibited by F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.

W. H. Siebrecht, Astoria, N. Y., made a large and interesting display of bulbous flowers in pots and flats.

The Little South Floral Co., Natick, Mass., showed a lot of cyclamen with wonderfully large flowers.

Thos. Roland, Nahant, Mass., made a fine display of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in various sizes.

Lion & Wertheimer, New York, made a fine display of their Conqueror brand of florists' ribbons.

Reed & Keller, New York, displayed a great variety of florists' supplies and a model of their new extension pot holder.

E. Hippard, Youngstown, Ohio, showed sections of his new iron greenhouse gutter.

Jerome A. Suydam, Flatbush, N. Y., made an interesting display of miscellaneous flowers, including some remarkably fine mignonette.

C. W. Ward won first for best fifty blooms of the variety Viola Allen.

Baur & Smith's Indianapolis and W. N. Rudd's Phyllis were both frosted in transit and could not be exhibited. And there were others.

Many of the flowers shipped by the Chicago Carnation Co. were frozen en route and only a few out of the lot could be exhibited.

It is curious how regularly the annual February blizzard comes the week of the Carnation Society convention and exhibition. It is to be hoped that the shift in date will bring next year's meeting into better weather.

There is room for improvement in the keeping of the entries and the judges' books. They are exceedingly difficult to decipher and in consequence errors are possible.

The flowers of Mrs. E. A. Nelson on exhibition made one feel confidence in the future of this variety.

A small vase of the good old Wm. Scott showed that it wasn't such an awfully way back number when well done.

The improvement in varieties has been remarkable, but isn't it true that a goodly share of the progress has been due to improved methods of culture—or rather to a more general understanding and application of correct cultural methods?

Keep an eye on Mr. Ward's new pink named Mrs. John A. Thayer.

The Banquet.

The banquet on Friday evening will long be remembered. The menu, the decorations and the splendid array of speakers were all a credit to the local organization and the American Carnation Society. The attendance reached the 300 mark and with congenial weather would have been much larger. The musical program was superb, the artists, the quartette and the specialties of Mr. Wilk and his assistants all meriting the applause which was spontaneous and constant throughout the evening.

President Ward introduced the toastmaster, ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff, a charming man of about 40, whose beaming countenance confirmed Mr. Ward's encomiums and illustrated the fact that he "loved to do good." Gov. Woodruff addressed the assembly as "fellow-hybridizers" and expressed his surprise at the large attendance. He spoke of his experience as park commissioner for ten months in Brooklyn, and his "agricultural" reputation at Syracuse, and his delight at being present at one of the happiest banquets of all his experience. He "never saw so much enthusiasm in his life" and his reception was indeed an uproarious one. He said Mr. Ward had told him that it was the naming of a carnation after Theodore Roosevelt that had made him president and that now he had promised to call one Gov. Woodruff. The value of the carnation exhibition as an educator was referred to, the enthusiasm of the organization and the work being done thereby for the benefit of all mankind. He closed with an eloquent tribute to the memory of William McKinley, in which he referred to his always wearing a carnation, and to his resemblance to the divine flower in perseverance and ruggedness of character.

Mr. Woodruff then called upon the Hon. Richard Young, park commissioner, to speak to the toast "Flowers and Their Relation to Art." Mr. Young had many good things to say of the toastmaster, his popularity and worthiness, and the great reception that had been accorded him. He dwelt eloquently upon the revelation of the power and influence of the Carnation Society, on its benefit to the city of Brooklyn and to the generous recognition of the convention by the city papers. He said "the relation of flowers to art is the relation of a mother to her child." He referred to his visits to Egypt, Pompeii, Ephesus, Japan and China and said he had found sarcophagi decorated with floral carvings 5,000 years old, and that paintings of flowers were found on the walls of the buried cities. So art and flowers were companions through all the ages, and the love of both was ever associated. Then he told of Japan, the most ancient land of art, where flowers on metal demonstrated his theme, and of China, and the galleries of the old world all indicative of the close relationship.

He spoke of his experiences in the parks of Brooklyn and their development, where nearly a quarter of a million plants were used and where in six weeks at Coney Island he had transformed a desert of sand into a "thing of beauty" and an educating and uplifting influence in the community. He considered the exhibit of the Carnation Society one of the finest on the face of the globe and closed an eloquent speech with a tribute to the educational influence and the doing of duty, as demonstrated, that would carry its value on through all the years.

Our own silver-tongued orator, Robert Craig, responded to the next toast, "Influence of the Carnation on the Ethical Side of Life." Gov. Woodruff gracefully introduced him as "a man whose face indicated the toast," and Mr. Craig returned the compliment with praise of the Governor and kindly references to the "responsive chord he had struck in his references to President McKinley, whose memory is so dear to all carnationists, and who signed the charter of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists." He declared the need of information for the benefit of the soul as well as the body and dwelt eloquently on the moral effect of beauty.

His reminiscences of horticultural Brooklyn 25 years ago were very interesting, "when Papa Zeller had gathered all the varieties then known, with Horace Greeley and Henry Ward Beecher among them." He declared William Bennett at that time to be the greatest grower of plants on this side of the Atlantic and that his system of growing had not since been improved on. He told of the first early forcer of carnations, Gus Messeberg, now gathered to the great majority. He said the fast life of the carnation subjected it to many diseases, and threw out a warning as to banquets putting his listeners in the same condition. To revive the constitution he advised the need of rest, contrary to the present system which limits its life and makes necessary a new generation. Some growers realize this and propagate early in January, giving a two months' rest before the plants are called upon for results, demonstrating thereby the need of rest after a fast life, as illustrated humorously by personal experiences. His eloquence shone in his references to the effect of the beautiful in lifting up mankind, the glory of ancient Greece when she was mistress of the world, when men took such care of themselves that they became such perfect athletes that their record has never been equaled.

Gov. Woodruff at 11:15 announced a "home reception" and his orders to be with Mrs. Woodruff promptly at 10, with the dire results of his delay, and after kindly reference to Mr. Ward's indisposition, on whose shoulders his duties as toastmaster were about to fall, he departed to the melody of enthusiastic cheers, the entire company rising and joining in the demonstration.

Mr. Marquisee, of Syracuse, was introduced by Toastmaster Ward, as "the Marshall P. Wilder of the florist trade," and he proceeded to prove his right to the title in a humorous speech on "The Humorous Side of the Florist's Life." It seems that February 20 is Mr. Marquisee's birthday, and he expressed his appreciation of the big dinner in his honor, thus "taking the deed for the will." He thought investigation would prove he was no "Wilder" than the president. His fund of stories was inexhaustible and they were told in the dry, quaint way that has made him famous. He illustrated the humorous side of the florist's profession by wandering into the fields of medicine, undertaking, law, ministerial pastures and commercial traveling, culling some side-splitting stories from each which must be heard when told in his inimitable way to be appreciated. He said when he asked "the boys" in the greenhouse for some humorous things in the florist business they looked at him queerly and he heard one ask the other "if the boss wasn't a little off." When he appealed to his wife, she "couldn't see anything humorous in it." It was "work all night on funeral work, rain all season, and grow a pet seedling three years and then throw it and several thousand dollars' worth of orders in the waste basket."

The story of "The Irishman who was holding his own" was much appreciated, and the imaginary letters of advice on the subject of "humor" in the florist's life from Ward, Hill, Fisher, Scott and others "brought down the house." But like all true humorists his "valedictory" was eloquent and his remarks on the inspiration of association with nature, the divinity realized by everyone who labors in the realm of beauty, and the glory of being a co-worker with the infinite and a benefactor of mankind, were worthy of the ministerial countenance and impressive voice that uttered them.

A. Augustus Healy was unable to be present and speak to the toast of "The City Beautiful," and President Burton of the S. A. F. O. H., was called upon to respond. Mr. Burton gave a splendid tribute to Brooklyn as it is, as he was told it is, and referred particularly to the wonderful carnation display, when the season and the great demand for flowers are considered. He also spoke of the work of the S. A. F. O. H., of which he is the honored president.

Between the speeches, music and singing abounded and the interest never abated to the close, amid the "wee sma' hours."

The toast "Queen Flora's Treasure House" found an eloquent exponent in William Scott, on whom the years sit lightly. He was as eloquent and entertaining as ever. His stories graduated from the "Hooley, Hooley, Hooley" Irishman to Horace Greeley, and ended with a ministerial brochure given last year at Indianapolis. He considered the florist business the most elevating on the face of the earth and ventured the belief that "a true lover of flowers is always a good man," which put the multitude at once en rapport with the speaker. He advised the study of botany and spoke feelingly of the lack real knowledge of plants by the public 20 to 30 years ago, and to the misunderstandings which might arise if "Timothy Woodruff" and "Carrie Nation" were grown in the same house as "John Birnie," and the awful consequences that were possible. His reminiscences ran back to the year of his landing and the wonderful changes and progress of the years, his love for the business having so developed that "a million a year" would not tempt him to leave it.

Mr. Herrington, president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, spoke to the toast "Floriculture as a Profession," which he said was "something more than a trade," so few to say they were "absolute masters of the art," which in his opinion "never will be thoroughly mastered." He saw much to be thankful for on the part of all who had adopted the profession and gave many practical thoughts as to its progress.

All the late speakers were "cut down to 10 minutes," which disconcerted several and dwarfed their efforts. Frank B. Lown, of Poughkeepsie, was one of them. His speech was humorous, as he told of "the advantages of horticultural organization." His stories were original, but a good story must be heard to be appreciated. He referred to Mr. Ward's visit to Duchess county some years before he knew what a carnation was and got into the same class as Carnegie and Rockefeller. The Duchess County Society received his attention, as did the hybridizer and his strenuous life, especially the one "who makes a new carnation and sells 10,000 of them at $1 per, and lives happily ever after."

Mr. Ward introduced Fred H. Lemon, in the words of his father-in-law, as "made of pure gold." "The Carnation Conquest of the West" was his theme. Though a young man, he went back 100 years to ring the changes, until now "the carnation has taken a supreme place in the heart of the mighty west." He called Fred Dorner, of La Fayette, "the carnation king"—no empty honor—and his tribute to the success of the western carnation growers was eloquent and well deserved.

The rest of the evening (or morning) was quite informal. Mr. Ward had much to say of the faithful worke through whose earnest efforts so grand a success had been accomplished; many of them he mentioned by name. Cheers were given for Mr. Langjahr and Mr. Wallace, to which the secretary responded in a modest speech telling of the pleasure which had come to him through the cordial support of his confreres, and their enthusiasm, and closing with the assurance that "to do good service and have recognition is great remuneration."

William Scott reported the usual final resolutions as to hospitality, and congratulated the Brooklyn society on the great success of the meeting, which he declared was "better than any previous convention."

Auld Lang Syne was sung and at a early and respectable hour the great convention banquet of 1903 became a delightful memory.

THE CARNATION CONVENTION.

A Few General Remarks.

I am aware, Mr. Editor, that you will receive an expert opinion of the carnation exhibition from both your western and eastern correspondents, as well as an official report of the awards and proceedings of the convention, and yet I would like to record a few impressions that the wonderful display made on me.

When the flowers were once staged—and it was rather late before it was all in order—the exhibition was grand. There were not more flowers than at Indianapolis, and perhaps a few other preceding conventions, but undoubtedly the average quality was much higher and there were more varieties that could be called first-class than ever before. These notes make no pretense to cover half the varieties on exhibition—merely those that appealed to me as most beautiful—and all are worthy of growing had we room for them.

It has often been remarked of late that we have a great choice of light and dark pinks, but that there is plenty of room for a good and profitable white, and also that the ideal red or scarlet has not yet appeared. Now, at this exhibition the new whites were the most numerous, and there were several grand reds. Enchantress won the Lawson gold medal. No need for me to say anything about this wonderful variety, except that besides its being a flower of the largest size, I believe its habit, constitution and easy culture will commend it to all. While speaking of the gold medal it is in order to say that the award was not made until after a long and careful deliberation. Flamingo, the wonderful scarlet exhibited by Mr. Marquisee, scored but one point less, and then came almost a dead heat, Mr. Ward's President Roosevelt. They were all three magnificent vases and vanquished several other vases that but a few years ago would have been pronounced marvelous.

Flamingo is a dark scarlet, large, full flower, and a wonderful stem, its 30-inch stem holding up the flower perfectly. It attracted wide attention. President Roosevelt made a beautiful vase of bloom—perfect flower, ideal stem, and where these dark crimson flowers are wanted it must be grown.

White Bradt, from Dailledouze Bros., is a splendid flower, larger than I ever saw Bradt grown, not quite so much stem as some of the newer whites, but a great flower.

Harry Fenn, one of Mr. Ward's crimsons, but grown by Dailledouze Bros., showed up finely. This is beaten in size by other crimsons, but by no carnation in freedom of bloom.

Lillian Pond, Mr. Reuters' fine white, scored high. It's a great bloomer, and from all accounts a great all-round white.

Gov. Wolcott is as good as its reputation—a splendid white, and will be tried by all.

Boston Market is another fine white. It makes no pretense to being the largest flower, but all who have seen it growing have but one story to tell, that it is a most free variety and a white that all should grow.

Albatross, Mr. Marquisee's new white, also scored high—a fine, pure white with a splendid stem.

May Naylor is another white that is not overshadowed by any as it appeared at the show.

Innocence, shown by E. G. Hill Co., is a fine white with a splendid stem.

Gov. Lowndes is still another beautiful white, shown by H. Weber & Sons.

And last, but not least, there was the Bride shown by John N. May. It captured the prize in its class, which is proof of its quality.

Now, is this not an array of whites? It's not for me to recommend any of them. They have yet to be generally grown, but they are all most promising varieties, and superior, I believe, to any white now in commerce.

Sunbird (Marquisee, a yellow variety), received a certificate of merit. It is not of the largest size, but is a pretty flower and has a fine, stiff stem.

Harlowarden was in fine order after a long journey. I have seen this growing at Joliet and know what a splendid variety it is. It surpasses all crimsons in size.

In the Dailledouze collection there was a very fine scarlet seedling of 1896 without name. Remember it when it is sent out. It is a fine one.

Alpine Glow and Mrs. John A. Thayer, both from Mr. C. W. Ward's, were on exhibition and afterwards seen growing. The latter is a little darker than old Daybreak with large and beautiful flowers and lots of them. If Enchantress were not in the field this variety would be in great demand. Alpine Glow is also of the Daybreak type, of fine size and form, free bloomer and of the very best habits we saw in our travels. This variety at once deposes into retirement the old favorite Morning Glory.

Judge Hinsdale is a pretty flower of large size and a wonderful stem. It is a white ground, striped and slightly mottled with pink, and of perfect form.

There were of course splendid exhibits of such varieties as Lawson, Prosperity and other standards. What a grand variety Prosperity has proved itself; almost as free as any and selling at a better price. Those who did not persevere with it made a big mistake, and we surely hope those worthy men, the Dailledouze Bros., will soon have another wonder to spring on us.

Now I am about exhausted, or my memory is. I took little notice of the varieties shown for preliminary certificates, because we shall see them again in larger quantities. Among them were some pretty shades, but not one scored high. I feel that I have omitted to mention some very worthy varieties, yet I have given a long enough list to set us (at least myself) thinking what is best to grow. 'Tis well to try a few of each, but that man who has room for only, say ten to fifteen thousand plants, cannot afford to devote too much space to experiments and trials of novelties, and it is safe advice to say, what grows well with you grow and grow it well. Still we must keep up with the procession, and if we do not give our customers up-to-date flowers we shall fall behind. There is nothing like going to the convention yourself. It's good for the A. C. S. and it's still better for you if you keep your eyes open. You never went on a $50 horticultural exploration without gaining twice that amount of value in knowledge, which you turned into dollars and cents on your return home. And then you won't be able to say, as a stay-at-home friend of mine likely will: "Oh, my dear boy, I listened to what old man Scott had to say about that thing. It's a fraud. Oh, no, but she goes."

The carnation has been for the past fifteen years, and still is, making marvelous strides in size, color, stem, form and all other qualities of bloom, and the greatest danger now, as Mr. Robert Craig said, is to conserve and maintain a healthy plant. Too many beautiful varieties are now afflicted with stem-rot, bacteria of various species, and general debility, and perhaps it's because we are growing them at too rapid a gait all the year around. The carnation would naturally take a few months of rest in its native clime, but we give it none. Our hot summers keep it growing out of doors, and hot water or steam indoors. Not that our winter treatment can be called "forcing," yet it is no rest, and from the time the cutting is made in January or February there is no period of rest until the plant adorns the rubbish pile sixteen months after its individual start in the world.

It is greatly to be regretted that some exhibitors from a distance had their flowers arrive too late for competition. Perhaps the greatest sufferer was Mr. Hartshorne, of the Chicago Carnation Co., the greater part of whose extensive exhibit never got there at all. The Thompson Carnation Co. arrived with 2,000 fine blooms at 4 p. m., too late to compete, but when staged they were a fine lot, and there were others.

One of the important changes made for next year's programme is the change of date from the third week in February to the first Wednesday in March. The largest eastern exhibitors voted against it, but I trust it will make no difference in the extent of their exhibits or personal attendance. It is well known that this third week in February has presented us many times with a blizzard—the prize blizzard of the winter—and the change surely is worth trying.

Much time of the business sessions it was supposed would be taken up by the consideration of the proposed constitution, and no papers were offered for the edification of the members, but that programme received a solar plexus or jolt from Brother Rudd, who demanded thirty days' consideration of the same, which was according to a resolution adopted at Indianapolis. So that lies over for Detroit. This made the business meetings rather thin.

The Brooklyn men did finely, one and all. Some worked mighty hard and I am sure will be glad it's over. Yet I trust that when rested up they will prize their hard work and anxiety and look back on the convention with pleasure. All the visitors will remember with pleasure their glorious good time.

Though sent out last year, all agree that Mrs. Nelson is one of the best. Its splendid form and pure pink shade commend it to all. There was a fine vase on exhibition. With most growers it is difficult to propagate, which is its only fault.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt was on exhibition, and I also saw some benches of it at C. W. Ward's establishment. It is of fine, free habit and would almost pass for red, but we will have to call it a dark cerise.

Nelson Fisher is very like the immortal Lawson, yet said to be an improvement over that wonderful variety, and if it is as good in habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it must be a wonder.

L. E. Marquisee's New White Carnation Albatross, Certificated at the Brooklyn Exhibition of the American Carnation Society.

Now, what I am going to say in conclusion will be said with the most friendly spirit to all without exception. Yet it is only proper and loyal to the society that just criticisms should be made where they are called for. And I say, and all spoken to on the subject agreed with me, that our system of entering exhibits, numbering exhibits when staged, and judges' books and announcing awards, is simply a miserable failure. It's not worth calling a system. They do better at a pumpkin fair in some remote county in Oklahoma. It's outrageous and ridiculous and always has been. The last hour on Friday night men did not know whether their variety had received a certificate, or in other classes whether they had received an award, and as for the public, they could learn nothing. Judges could not find the exhibits and some exhibits never got judged. Something must and shall be done to remedy this dismal confusion. One thing will be done at Detroit, I feel sure. Every exhibit in the same class or section will be by itself, at least until it is judged. That will be one good reform, but that is only part of the trouble; other reforms will come.

William Scott.

CONVENTION IMPRESSIONS.

It is next to impossible, after attending the convention at Brooklyn, to apply oneself to the task of writing cultural notes, especially when it is considered that it was my first offense in being caught in such good company. Therefore I ask you to pardon this digression, bearing with me while I touch briefly on a few impressions received.

When it is considered with what difficulty the growers have been beset this winter, it was marvelous to observe the enthusiasm with which all took hold to do their share toward making the exhibition the grand one that it was. The extreme cold weather completely ruined a number of what would have been instructive as well as beautiful exhibits. One in particular being that of Mr. Baur, who started with blooms of Indianapolis in fine form, but on arrival were found to be frozen.

With Detroit as the next meeting place and the able President Rackham at the helm we shall certainly find every arrangement for a total eclipse of all previous conventions. I have Mr. Rackham's word for this, and the next one being No. 13, everything promises well, for witness the success of our thirteen original states.

Many reasons lead me to believe that the month of March is late in the season to hold an exhibition of carnations, but as the majority so ruled let not our interest wane.

I will not attempt to elaborate on the appearance of the different varieties, except to say that Adonis was not shown at its best; at least this was the opinion of all who saw it last year at Indianapolis. Mr. Marquisee, with Flamingo, created a sensation.

There was a general feeling that a great mistake was made in not preparing some definite program. As stated in advance, it was thought most of the time would be consumed in the adoption of by-laws, etc. This proving out of the question early in the session, left ample time for several conducted trips to be taken to the various growers near Brooklyn; but I heard none announced, though small parties visited as best they could. Personally conducted trips would have been greatly enjoyed by the rank and file.

The second day's session opened late and after a short session adjourned without any reference to the question box. Was this also frozen in transit?

The convention was essentially one of exhibition alone, and left nothing to be desired in that direction, while the society's meetings in session were devoid of interest to growers, in that there was a lack of discussion on subjects pertaining to the cultivation of the carnation.

The Brooklyn Horticultural Society made every effort and spared no expense to make the convention a success, and with the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, these bodies are to be commended for their warm reception of the society and the thanks of every member is due them. I do not think it was the intention of the organizers of the society when first formed, that it should be a mutual admiration society or to found a school for the display of parliamentary knowledge.

Less quibbling over points of law, or, perhaps, rather the elimination of any chance of sparring and more attention to the real objects sought would, to my mind, be of great benefit to the members.

The banquet was well attended and the menu sufficiently elaborate to satisfy the most fastidious taste.

Hon. T. L. Woodruff as toastmaster was perfection, and every speaker seemed at his best, but space forbids reference to each.

The time limit of ten minutes put on Mr. Scott was rather hard on one who always has so much to say and is so interesting to listen to, but he will continue to write to us.

The ladies were conspicuous by their absence from the banquet. Of course there must have been a reason, but after hearing Hon. Richard Young and Robert Craig enlarge on "Flowers and Their Relation to Art" and "The Influence of Flowers Upon the Ethical Side of Life" one could not imagine the reason, especially when Mr. Young brought out the point "where flowers bloom purity of thought exists."

Reference is hereby made to pages 95 and 96, proceedings 1902, Indianapolis, where it will be seen how the hospitable west take care of the wives, daughters and mothers.

Assuring all that I had a royal good time, I beg to remain,

Yours as ever,

Geo. S. Osborn.

ROSES.

As the season of repotting is now upon us with all its hurry and bustle, when a certain amount of work must be accomplished within a limited time, we must not lose sight of the fact that in order to secure good, healthy stock it must also be efficiently done.

Repotting is one of these duties that requires great care and skill and to be successful and profitable must be accompanied by speed. There is, however, a speed limit which it is unsafe to trespass, as some of the work is certain to be done in a slovenly and careless manner.

To have the work done in a thorough tradesmanlike manner with a fair regard to speediness should be set as the standard of excellence. This, of course, does not apply to those factories where plants are turned out regardless of quality, quantity being the sole requirement. No one can expect to have first-class stock delivered at the prices quoted by some of these establishments. Purchasers should remember this: A dollar or two per hundred on the cost is frequently all the difference between success and an entire failure.

The soil for repotting should be in a nice mellow condition; that is, neither too wet nor too dry. If too wet it packs too firmly, and if too dry it does not pack at all. It is safe to add no feeding material nor fertilizer to the soil at this time, avoiding particularly bone flour and all kinds of nitrates.

Soil left over from last year's planting should be of about the right quality. This should be made fine, so that it can be packed evenly around the ball. If half-inch shifts are practiced the soil should be finer than if for shifts of one inch.

Some growers still continue to use drainage even for half-inch shifts, but there is practically no need for this, as the addition to the soil in the pot is so very small that there is ample evaporation without it. It is, perhaps, wise to use drainage if larger shifts are practiced. However, this is a question that the student can determine for himself by experiment.

Potting too deep is often the cause of a severe check to young stock and should be guarded against, the original ball requiring to be placed just deep enough in the pot so that it will leave ample space for watering.

Repotted stock should not be placed on the bench until the soil in the pots is thoroughly moistened. This is particularly applicable to Beauties, the young wood and foliage of which suffer severely from any neglect of this nature.

Pressure of other work should be no excuse for neglecting repotting of rose stock when it should be done, as any delay, particularly in bright weather, will cause a check from which they do not recover for a long time, if ever.

NEW YORK.

Convention Memories.

The Brooklyn Horticultural Society has achieved a triumph in the line of convention welcomes that will make it immortal. Warmer greetings and greater solicitation for the comfort of visitors could not have been shown, and the zero weather was amply atoned for thereby.

Strange the carnationists pick the worst week of the year always for their conventions, but they do. Perhaps the new date for 1904 may solve the question.

Whether it was the quiet home influence of the "city of churches" or the strenuous weather, one thing is certain, a more staid, calm and restful convention than this never materialized. Everybody looked happy, but nobody grew hilarious. The visitors all departed in an excellent state of preservation, and all were enthusiastic in appreciation of the warmth of their Brooklyn welcome.

The musical quartette which made melody at Asheville was greatly missed, but the giant "baby" part of it that came was appreciated, and did its share in "making merry" and making everybody else merry that came within the influence of his genial and ponderous personality. Mr. Foley is the healthiest and happiest heavy weight that ever "thundered down the pike."

Billy Kasting and Jimmy Hartshorne adopted the wise plan of bringing their better halves along and they had "a good time" too. (I mean the ladies.)

In the great banquet jubilation perhaps no one was more sincerely missed than "Papa Zeller," whose health was not sufficiently improved to allow him to be present. It may be truthfully said of him, as President Ward said of Toastmaster Woodruff, "He hasn't an enemy on earth."

The weather tried a little game of "freeze out" with the "Piersoni" fern, but failed to win. This novelty was a center of admiration as usual, and in the matter of gold medals is always ready for another.

There was no trade exhibit in the usual understanding of the term, but a few displays were made informally that indicated how easily it would have been to fill a hall with the manufactures and samples of enterprising firms.

The ribbon effects in connection with the elaborate decorations of the Germania Club rooms and banquet hall were the generous contributions of Messrs. Schloss Bros., of 533 Broadway, New York.

Notwithstanding physical indisposition and the intense strain, the natural consequence of many weeks of preparation for the convention, President Ward came down the home stretch with flying colors, and both himself and every officer of the society, as well as its members, deserve all the credit and recognition which the cheering of the company at the conclusion of the banquet so stentoriously confirmed.

Twenty-five visiting and local lady "horticulturists," whose presence at the big banquet was desired, but unavailable, were the guests of the Brooklyn Horticultural Society at a theater party on Friday evening, followed by an elaborate dinner at the Clarendon, and as their arrival at the Germania Club for their husbands and sweethearts did not occur until after 1 a. m., it is quite evident a "good time" can be had by the fair sex when opportunity arrives without the companionship of the "sterner element." The ladies were in a condition of happy enthusiasm and all declared the big banquet "wasn't in it" with their celebration.

Notes.

J. W. Withers, who is recuperating in Jamaica, is reported as greatly improved and with good prospects of complete recovery.

March 11 and 12 the American Institute will hold its spring rose show and its schedule will be an exact counterpart of the American Rose Society's show at Philadelphia March 26. Good money premiums are to be competed for.

Thos. Young's new store on Fifth avenue and Forty-second street is a beauty. Electric lights unlimited, a cupid-decorated ceiling and marble trimmings everywhere make it bright, attractive and up to date in every way. It is a fine locality and about as near the ultimate esthetic business center of New York as could be chosen. Mr. Louis Rossow is manager.

Mr. Young has leased another store on West Twenty-eighth street, nearer Broadway, making five distinct establishments on his horticultural "bill of fare."

Mackintosh, of 1192 Broadway, accomplished his finest decoration last week at the Bartlett-Benkard wedding with palms and lilies unlimited. In addition he had the house decoration and the bridal shower bouquets of white orchids, valley and white violets.

J. F. McConnell, of the Cut Flower Co., is very ill with bronchitis and has just lost a brother with pneumonia. These young gentlemen are nephews of Alex. McConnell, of Fifth avenue.

Everything is "coming his way" with Alex. Guttman this year. His business is the largest in his experience, his space has been increased and now he has leased the entire building at 52 West Twenty-ninth street for a term of years and will make the upper stories his residence, so as to be in touch with his wholesale interests day and night if necessary.

About the proudest man at the carnation convention was Vice President Traendly. It is a fine boy and the trade's congratulations were fittingly acknowledged.

Mr. J. L. Dillon has been "renewing his youth" lately. He only recovered from a severe attack of the mumps in time to be at the convention. But it is getting fashionable to grow young these days, even if it be necessary to try so serious a system.

Herman Bartmann, the bulb man, from Sassenheim, Holland, became a member of the Brooklyn Horticultural Society last week and was an enthusiastic and fraternal representative of the "foreign element" at the banquet.

John H. Taylor has been shipping an average of 2,000 Lawsons a day lately, which Mr. Raynor has no difficulty in disseminating at top prices. The stock is superb, as, in fact, all "Lawson" stock has been, at nearly every wholesaler's this season.

The trip on Saturday of the 35 "left overs" to the Cottage Gardens, the "old fashioned sleigh ride" and the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Ward, together with a description of the great carnation achievements on view there, I am sure Mr. Scott will elaborate more interestingly than I can.

A "visitation" on Saturday among the wholesalers and the seedsmen revealed a very healthful condition of trade, and an anticipatory atmosphere, that augurs well for the spring business so close at hand.

In the supply houses, too, "So busy in preparation for Easter that we are working night and day" is the universal statement.

At the cut flower centers the improvement was very evident and the demand was about the best of the year. Good Brides and Maids were especially scarce, and a few grand specimens soared to 25 cents when the scarcity became evident. Beauties, however, failed to join in the general gain, but were satisfied to hold their own. Bulbous stock of all kinds abundant. Even violets "lifted up their heads" on Saturday and values became respectable, a few hundred specials commanding a "simoleon" once again.

Fluctuations these days, however, are rapid and the better weather and sunshine of the opening days of the week will doubtless create again a normal condition, which, with the advent of Lent, will hold during the "40 days of penance" in which society is about to indulge.

A brief chat with Patrick O'Mara found him enthusiastic as to Florida's climate, ruddy with the glow of a southern sun's baptism and full of good practical ideas on the express question, which if acted upon will yield rapid returns if anything will.

The editor of the REVIEW can put down for Saturday last in his records: "My busy day." For 12 hours, and long after Broadway was ablaze with its electric brilliance, he gave his entire time to "pastoral visitations," calling on nearly every firm in the business, in New York, and was only prevented from seeing all by the limitation of time. His welcome, and the cordial good wishes expressed everywhere for the success of the REVIEW must have given him an inspiration as to eastern appreciation and made his visit to New York and Brooklyn a pleasant memory.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market rather anticipated the close of the social season, becoming a little less active toward Ash Wednesday, although the last couple of days were full of business. The general feeling among the leading retailers and commission men is that Lent is improving year by year from a business standpoint, and that this year will be no exception to the rule.

The stores are in full spring attire. Quantities of daffodils, tulips and hyacinths in pots and pans have reinforced the azaleas, primroses and cinerarias, making gay the show windows. Foliage plants are moving better than at any time since Thanksgiving. It is likely that a good many more will be moved before Easter.

Lonsdale and Burton.

A good many years ago, back in the middle of the eighties, a group of four were gathered in the landscape gardener's office in Fairmount Park. They were Chas. H. Miller, the landscape gardener; Thomas Mingey, the superintendent; the clerk, and a lad. It was during the dinner hour at noon, and Mr. Miller was chatting about the events of the day. Presently he remembered that the firm of Lonsdale & Burton had dissolved partnership. Mr. Lonsdale was to build a new place at once, while Mr. Burton was to carry on the old place. Mr. Miller added that the wisdom of the step was a question in his mind. The firm had done well, very well, as pioneer growers for the wholesale cut flower market in this city. There was no man for the road like Lonsdale, and no man for the place like Burton, but—and here was the problem—could Philadelphia support two such places in the future, where in the past it had supported only one? He evidently had grave doubts. It is nearly a score of years since this little scene occurred. The group is scattered now. Two have joined the great majority; the other two have left the park. Yet the scene in this rather bare, lofty room came vividly back to my mind the other day while walking through the two large places that lie side by side at Wyndmoor. Then think of the many other places that have grown up near the city, and the progress made in our business is indeed wonderful.

Edwin Lonsdale spoke of himself as conservative and old fogyish, the exquisite humor of which was betrayed by his merry laugh as much as by the roses on his place—Queen of Edgely, Ivory, Golden Gate, Sunrise, and two coming claimants to popular favor, both yellow, a sport from the last named variety and a promising unknown. Plants gained a foothold here some years ago. There is now a fine variety of crotons, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, some interesting geraniums and Boston ferns.

John Burton has his entire place in roses, with the exception of a house of Asparagus Sprengeri and a quantity of Cyps. (I have an uneasy feeling that there is also a house of A. plumosus.) Red is the predominating color among the roses grown. Beauty, Meteor, Liberty, and Brunner are all here. A house of the latter flowered for Christmas was just breaking nicely. An "Easter gamble" was Alfred Burton's view of it. A house of dormant Kaiserin was also being started into growth. The feature of the new place across the way is the space devoted to Beauties in solid beds. There are two houses of them in their second year. They produced a wonderful crop of specials during December and are now the picture of health, the long shoots well set with buds, and quantities of strong breaks from the base of nearly every plant. George is justly proud of these Beauties. He is seriously considering carrying the plants a third year.

Notes.

Quite a large number of Philadelphians went to the carnation show in Brooklyn last week. All were enthusiastic over it.

R. G. Palmer is bringing some fine Brides and Maids to the Flower Market.

Edward Reid met a man from Dayton in Brooklyn. "Hello, Reid, how are sweet peas?" was the greeting of the M. F. D.

Hugh Graham is cutting Brunners from his place at Logan.

It is said that gardenias will be plentiful here for a while.

Leo Niessen's new place is practically next door to the Flower Market.

The H. A. Dreer Co. have the entire stock of a fine new single violet. It is said to be larger and deeper in color than the California violet. PHIL.

BOSTON.

The unexpected blizzard caused a change to come over the spirit of our dreams. Of course it decreased the number of our customers, but much more so the amount of available flower supply, so that outside of bulb material all kinds of goods have had quite a tendency to be scarce and prices on carnations and roses especially took a slight turn upward, or, at least, more were graded into the higher priced classes.

An agent for the Postal Progress League has been trying to interest us in a movement for extension of that service, but not with so much success, I fear, as recent action of express companies might warrant. Why not try to get Uncle Sam to attempt parcel delivery on a quicker and larger scale? This league agent claims our nation is much behind other nations in this respect.

W. E. Coburn, the Everett florist, is utilizing spare time in a way to give others a hint. He gets out a little paper for house to house distribution. Solicited advertisements pays all the bills and he gets his own free and a big one at that.

G. H. Davis, formerly with N. F. McCarthy & Co., reports a good business at his new store at the Brookline street transfer station in Cambridge.

An appreciable number of our most enterprising growers attended the New York show last week.

A business call at West Newton was extended into a social afternoon tea at the glass rooms of E. A. & W. K. Wood. They have 12,000 feet of space about as nicely arranged for retail work as one might ask, and the contents for the most part are in fine condition. They have four acres of ground in a magnificent location in the city and live in such commodious quarters the only wonder is they have not physically expanded to meet their surroundings. They are little—but oh, my gracious! And no floral movement in Boston is complete without their co-operation.

Their work shop arrangement was one idea that appealed to me. Convenient holders for each tool are arranged on the wall and a silhouette of the tool to be held is painted in its place so that a glance at the wall tells what is there and what is gone. Another good scheme is their way of staking their carnation plants. Galvanized wires six inches apart are strung lengthwise of the bed about a foot from the ground, or less, and sticks are woven in erosswise to complete the necessary support. About a foot higher the same process is repeated with both wires and sticks placed farther apart, thus giving room for natural enlargement of the plant towards the top. Painted dowels make the best sticks for the purpose.

The annual trade exhibition of novelties and standard varieties of cut blooms of carnations, roses and violets will be held under the auspices of the Boston Co-operative Flower Growers' Association, on Saturday, March 14, 1903, at the large salesroom of the Flower Market, No. 1 Park street, at 10 a. m.

All shipments for this exhibition should be sent to Flower Market, Park street, Boston, care of John Walsh, manager, to arrive if possible Friday, March 13, 1903, or not later than 11 a. m., Saturday, March 14. For any further information apply to George Cartwright, secretary, Flower Market, Park street, Boston. J. S. MANTER.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Business has been excellent during the past week and prices have been well sustained. There is now a sufficiency of pink roses and carnations to meet demand but not enough white, and quotations run higher on white than on colored stock in consequence. The shortage is especially noticeable in carnations and almost any sort of a white carnation will command $3 a hundred, while good flowers sell rapidly at $4 and fancy whites reach $5 and even $6. In colored carnations good commons can be had at $1.50 to $2.50, while fancy stock ranges from $3 to $5. In roses the best Brides reach $12, while $5 is the low notch for most and only a few reach as low as $4. In Bridesmaids $10 is the top and the lowest grade reaches down to $3, though not many drop below $4. All good red roses are scarce and impossible to obtain in quantity.

Bulbous flowers hold up somewhat better in price on account of the shortage in white carnations and roses. Dutch hyacinths are appearing in the market and sell at $4 to $10 per 100 spikes. Single tulips still sell at $2 to $4, but the double sorts now arriving reach $5 and $6. Freesia shows some little advance, the price now ranging from $2.50 to $4.

Violets are in good supply. The specials are offered at $1 and a few extras $1.25. The commons range from 30 to 60 cents. Large sales of good single violets have been made at $5 per 1,000.

On the whole trade conditions are generally satisfactory. Little stock is being lost and anything good commands a good price. The large retailers generally report a very satisfactory volume of trade, but there is some complaint from the smaller ones, who find it difficult to make a satisfactory profit with wholesale rates at their present level.

Various Items.

Archie Spencer, of Peter Reinberg's city salesroom, is the happy father of a boy, who arrived last Thursday.

Glentzer & Gow is the name of a new firm that will open a floral store at 2206 Michigan avenue about March 1.

Frank Lockyear is now manager of the city salesroom of Frank Garland.

Mrs. O. W. Frese and Mr. George Reinberg's son have returned from Michigan much benefited in health.

Mr. Edgar Sanders was well enough Saturday to go down stairs for the first time since he became ill.

The carnation convention pilgrims are returning and tell of badly delayed trains and frozen flowers.

Mrs. Oscar Kreitling is continuing the store at 380 W. Twelfth street, but has sold the one at 1566 W. Twelfth. V. C. Stock is the purchaser.

C. Clemmensen is building two houses, each 24x150, on the northwest corner of Eighty-first street and Sherman avenue, which will enable him to meet the increasing demand for bedding and decorative plants in his vicinity.

L. Mosbaek, on Eighty-fifth street near South Chicago, is working up an immense stock of bedding plants for his constantly expanding shipping trade.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The past week wound up the social season and nearly everyone had his hands full with all kinds of work for weddings, receptions, dinners and funerals. Plant decorations were hard to make, owing to the very cold weather the early part of the week; but a great many were accomplished, thanks to the Lehman wagon heater. The greatest trouble with the retailers was to get flowers enough to fill their orders, as stock of all kinds was very scarce and prices very high.

The most abnormal feature of our trade at the present time is the condition of the rose market. The demand is so great and stock so short that prices are way up. Never before did the best quality of roses bring $10 per 100 at this time of the year. Some extra quality of Meteors, of fine color, were in the market the past week. All varieties in roses bring the same price, according to quality, with the exception of Beauties.

Fancy carnations sold as high as $5; others at the usual price. Prosperity is coming in grand and sells at sight. White is in greatest demand. Everything sells out clean, notwithstanding the poor quality.

Violets are the only flowers that are plentiful. In fact, there is an oversupply just now. It seems as if our Kirkwood growers are trying to outdo one another to see who can bring in the largest number. None but the California is in this market. They are selling at present as low as $2 per 1,000 for second quality and $4 for first.

In bulb stock, plenty of fine tulips are now in and all the lighter colors are selling fast. Valley is also moving faster. Romans and paper whites are somewhat scarce, with a good demand. The same may be said of daffodils. Harrisii, at $12.50, are selling at sight, but callas not so well. Asparagus in bunches is a good seller. Adiantum is scarce and sells quickly. Smilax is also selling well.

The plant trade among the West End florists was at a standstill during the cold snap. They are handling some very fine azaleas, lilies, cinerarias, hyacinths, tulips and daffodils. These with palms make up their assortment.

News Notes.

Mr. B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, is in town this week selling supplies. He reports good trade in his line.

Mr. Wm. Linginbrink, once a prominent florist in this city, has been in town visiting his friends in the trade. Mr. Linginbrink is now a ranch owner out west.

Mayor Halstedt's new white seedling No. 10, as shown at the last club meeting, is a fine one. It is a large white of good form and substance. It is a strong grower, with very long stems of thirty inches or more.

The florists are bowling every Monday night and some very fair games are rolled. Tonight (Monday) Mr. B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., who has become quite an expert, will be their guest.

A team will be selected from these to bowl the Chicago bowlers when they visit us next month.

BUFFALO.

Passing home from New York on Saturday morning, while in the vicinity of Utica, about 7 a. m., we went through a howling snow storm, but on the shores of Niagara the sun was shining bright! I found business had been just so so and flowers scarce—easy to account for that. So I have little news, having had no chance to gather any. I was delighted to see a big half-dozen Buffalonians in attendance at Brooklyn, and still there might have been one or two more. There were Mr. and Mrs. Kasting, Mr. Guenther, Mr. S. A. Anderson's head clerk, name forgotten, Mr. W. J. Palmer and William Scott.

Several of the Detroit boys gave us a call on their way to the convention, among them the president-elect. Of course Buffalo is well pleased that we are going to that beautiful city, because we can't get belated by blizzard or train blockades. If the cars don't run on time we can skate up the lake. It's only a little over 200 miles. Detroit is most favorably located, and in electing Mr. "Rag" Rackham as president the society is to be congratulated. Like the writer, he has taken no part as exhibitor at our conventions, but he is a worker, and business from the word go, and I predict for next year's exhibition a business-like system of management that has never been surpassed. And don't forget that in the same city lives the only Phil Breitmeyer.

Mr. Editor, I feel that what it is a duty to say now should never encumber your columns, but as the occasion for it was presented over my signature, I beg you will excuse me this time, and although not of the slightest interest to your readers, I owe some explanation to a gentleman who recently called on me.

Two weeks ago in a great hurry I very briefly mentioned the names of several gentlemen who called on me in the interest of their respective firms, and among others, Mr. Tom Wade, representing August Rhotert. I said he was "progressive and offensive." The last word is taken exception to by T. W., and I don't blame him. Although not expecting a challenge to mortal combat, I most willingly modify the adjective and sincerely hope that any florist who does me the honor to read my notes will not expect to see in Mr. Wade anything but a gentleman. Progressive he is and possessed of a most thorough knowledge of the business, but he is not going out of our shop without an order if he can help it, and I am not the best hand at refusing. Some drummers say, "Look 'ere, old man, you better give me that order for 5,000 Romans, same as ye did last year." Mr. Wade says, "Most decidedly you will make a mistake if you don't order the valley from us again." Difference in style only, but not feeling very well that afternoon I was irritated at trifles. However, as soon as Mr. Wade closed his book we had a fraternal chat made pleasant with lubrication. I should have been satisfied with the word progressive, for if you keep a stiff upper lip and can firmly say "No" there is nothing more remote than offensiveness in Tom Wade. Make up. I knew my glib pen would get me into trouble some day.

A SMALL WHITE FLY.

Enclosed find sample of white fly, or whatever it is, which has been infesting our house of late. What can be done to suppress them? They seem to like the pelargonium best. Tobacco don't seem to hurt them. What are they called, and what is the best plan to oust them? They fly around from one plant to another. H. M.

H. M. says it is a fly. When received on the pelargonium they had more the appearance of a very small white scale, yet if they fly around the house they certainly are not scale. If an aphis, I don't know what to name them. H. M. should send them to the state entomologist. If they have wings, then they have lungs or some other breathing apparatus, and would, I feel sure, succumb to hydrocyanic acid gas. We have learned how to use this at less expense with fully as good results; and while destroying all insect life, however minute, it has not hurt the foliage in the least, and if it will not hurt violet leaves, you need fear nothing else.

Here is the formula: Five ounces cyanide of potassium (a deadly poison), 1 gallon of water, 1 gallon of sulphuric acid. Put the water and sulphuric acid in a two-gallon butter jar. In a quarter of an hour drop into each jar the five ounces of cyanide, which should be done up in a stout paper. Don't go to sleep over the jar, or you might stop breathing; just drop in the package and walk along to the next. The above quantity is for 2,000 cubic feet of air space in the house. And keep your ventilators shut all night. William Scott.

NEW CARNATION $ NONE SUCCEEDS LIKE $UCCE$$ THE MONEY MAKER.

The most prolific carnation to date. A pleasing and most popular shade of pink—the shade of La France rose. Large, well-formed flowers on stout stems. Good keepers and shippers. Plants strong and vigorous and easily handled. Has shown a marked improvement in size, stem and productiveness every succeeding season for the past five years. The wonderful productive properties of "Success" have not been exaggerated. It stands to-day without an equal in this respect. If you are raising carnations for profit, "Success" will pay you better than any other variety.

The Market.

At the present time our market is in better shape than it has been for some time. In roses the greatest increase i noticed, and the quality is also first-class. Maids, especially, are good in color and they are in the greatest supply. Brides are a close second, and some extra good quality are to be had. There was a sharp demand for short-stemmed Brides and they consequently brought a higher price than Maids. Good Golden Gates are scarce at present. This rose is in shorter supply now than at any time so far this season. Liberties are also scarce. Meteors are not any too plentiful and the quality only fair. Short-stemmed Beauties are coming in in larger quantities, and there is a ready market for them. There is a good demand for long-stemmed Beauties and many more could be sold if they could be obtained at anything like a reasonable figure.

In carnations reds are scarce, with white a close second. There are more pink than of the other two combined. It is a noteworthy fact that carnations of the Bradt type are being forced into a back seat. This is the report of all the storemen. They say that a solid color is the thing.

George & Allan, who grow great quantities of bulbous stock, report that never have conditions been better and they are highly satisfied with the prices obtained. Romans, narcissus, valley, daffodils, Von Sion and Harrisii are all in good supply. Calla lilies are very good property and there are not enough of them to go around.

The bright weather is bringing in large quantities of violets and the price is dropping.

There is very little Asparagus plumosus to be had at present, and Sprengeri is also scarce. The supply of smilax is growing short. There are plenty of ferns, galax, leucothoe, etc.

Notes.

W. K. Partridge, Richard Witterstaetter and E. G. Gillett returned Sunday evening from the carnation meeting. They expressed themselves as being highly pleased with what they saw, and well paid for their trip. E. G. Gillett is still talking about White Bradt and Flamingo, which, he says, are record breakers.

Robt. Ruttle, of Covington, Ky., reports business as being very good; almost more than he can handle. It is mostly funeral orders.

Huntsman & Co., who are large growers, as well as retailers, are in the market buying stock, which, considering the amount of stock they grow, speaks well for their trade. C. J. Ohmer.

Washington, D. C.—Geo. H. Cooke, formerly with J. H. Small & Sons, has purchased "The Flower Shop," at 1126 Connecticut avenue, N. W., and will continue the business under the old title.

Boulder, Colo.—John M. Johnson, who recently purchased the Hubbard Greenhouses, is preparing to erect two new houses, a new office and a residence.

Now is the season of the year to expand your wholesale plant business, and an adv. in the Review is the medium to employ.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

If you have the right varieties. You don't want too many of the very early ones. You want the large, fine blooms of the second earlies. I have watched the market carefully for several years and found that it is there where you make your money in mums—to have the right varieties—those that come in at the right time.

In yellow there is nothing better than MONROVIA and ROBT. HALLIDAY. The first is a few days or a week earlier, but the latter is the best bloom. They are both money-makers when grown right. I also have a white sport of Glory of Pacific. It is a large and better flower than its parent and I have grown it for my own use for three years, and it is the best second early white I know of. The only trouble is that I have not made enough fuss about it or given it a fancy name. I have a large stock of the three above varieties—fine, sturdy, cool-grown stock from 2 and 2½-in. pots, ready to ship. You can get many cuttings from each plant if you buy now and keep propagating. Also a few Appleton, Eaton, Bonnaffon, etc. All at $4.00 per 100. No better stock in the market.

GUNNAR TEILMANN, Marion, Ind.

BLUE LIST OF WHOLESALE PRICES MAILED ONLY TO THOSE WHO PLANT FOR PROFIT.

PITTSBURG.

Various Items.

Last week we experienced a week of very cold weather. The demand for good stock was brisk and a general cleaning up occurred almost every day.

Bulbous stock is overplentiful. The demand for it is slow and it can be bought at your own prices. Lilies have been in fair supply. Roses are very plentiful, with quite a lot of specials and extras in Maids and Brides. White and colored carnations are more in evidence again and are moving out very well. For market prices see wholesale cut flower quotations in this issue.

The party of fifteen which attended the Carnation Society Convention in Brooklyn has returned.

Some very fine Freesias and tulips are being sent in by Wm. Lauch.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. (Fred Burki) are cutting fine Maids and Brides.

It will be carnation night at the next meeting of the Florists' Club, Tuesday evening, March 3. New varieties from home and distant growers will be shown. Members, you cannot afford to miss this meeting.

Fred Burki is receiving bids for a large rose house to be erected at his new plant at Bakerstown, Pa.

M. M. Bunting, of Cheswick, Pa., contemplates the erection of a number of carnation houses.

John Baldinger, of T. M. Ulam & Co., is able to be at work again.

ANTS.

If William Scott will prepare a mixture of sixty grains corrosive chloride of mercury to one ounce of lard—thoroughly and completely mixing them—he or anyone will have a complete "Death to Ants." Many ounces may be needed to kill all of them in a greenhouse, as every post must have a circle of the poisoned grease; and every corner or crevice between boards and between boards and posts must also have a narrow line of the poison. Ants can't cross the grease and live.

A circle of the poisoned grease around the legs of a table or bench in a cellar infested with ants will be a complete protection to provisions stored there. Furniture and apartments treated in like manner can be readily cleared of bedbugs. Several applications may be necessary, but as long as the grease is visible the poison is active. Of course such an active poison will kill mice, cats or any creature that eats it.

TORONTO.

Trade during the past week has been on the rush, especially has it been so in made-up design work, the call having come to a number of our prominent citizens. We also note a number of social functions, which used up some colored stuff.

When we said last week that it looked as though there was going to be something doing the first week in March we had not known that the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' banquet was to take place on the night of the 6th. The meeting of the C. H. A. executive, the carnation exhibit, and last, but not least, the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' banquet, will make Toronto a conspicuous place with the florist fraternity all over Canada, and I doubt not if some of our American cousins are not looking this way.

We had a flying call during the week from Mr. Greenlaw, representing Messrs. N. F. McCarthy & Co., of Boston, and Mr. A. Zirkmann, representing Mr. Sigmund Geller, of New York.

We notice Mr. Ned Dale, of the Dale Estate, Brampton, passing through here on his way to the Brooklyn carnation show. We might have had our suspicions had he not been in good company, having Mr. J. H. Dunlop, of Toronto, and Mr. Gammage, of London, with him.

D. J.

MILWAUKEE.

With the exception of a few extreme cold days the past week, business has been good. Violets went down with the mercury until there was an oversupply. With warmer weather the demand increased. Bulbous stock was short of demand. Complaints are heard from most growers of plant stock on account of the little demand for blooming plants. There are some fine azaleas, cinerarias, cyclamen, etc., in the market, but few calls for them.

Peter Kapsalis will have his new store open ready for business Saturday. Wm. G. Schuecht, lately traveling for Holton & Hunkel Co., and Currie Bros., will enter his employ.

C. C. P.

The publishers of Mr. Ward's book, The American Carnation, say they regret to announce that the book will not be ready for delivery until about April 1st.

If you want more good, healthy business plant your adv. in a good, healthy medium like the Review.

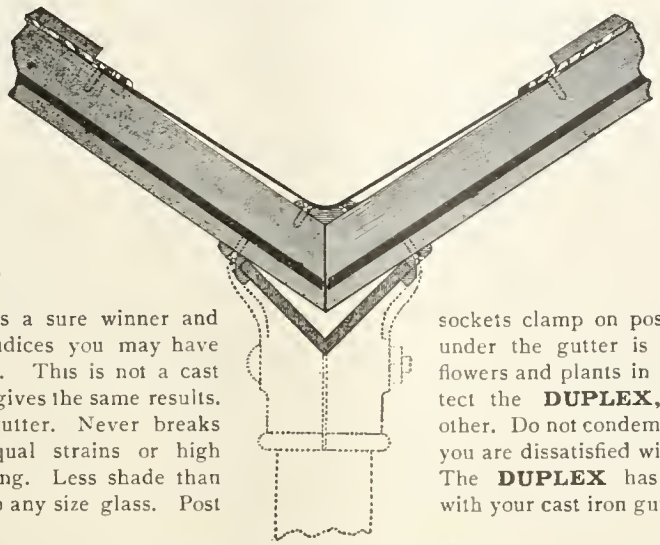
IS THE ONLY GUTTER.



To see it in a house is a sure winner and will set aside the prejudices you may have against cast iron gutters. This is not a cast iron gutter. None other gives the same results. No drip from glass or gutter. Never breaks by sagging posts, unequal strains or high winds. Straight as a string. Less shade than any other. Adjustable to any size glass. Post sockets clamp on posts and gutter. A bench under the gutter is the best place to grow flowers and plants in the house. Patents protect the DUPLEX, one gutter under the other. Do not condemn the DUPLEX because you are dissatisfied with your cast iron gutter. The DUPLEX has not the faults you find with your cast iron gutter.

NO BAD REPORTS

Vex the souls of the owners of greenhouses if the water that gives new life to the plants is drawn from a

Caldwell Cypress Tank on a Caldwell Steel Tower.

There is no danger of collapse, leakage or bursting. The towers have so firm a grip on the earth that death-dealing cyclones have failed to budge them.

MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.
Yours very truly, ROBERT C. BANCROFT.

WE ARE NOW BOOKING ORDERS FOR THE

FOR DELIVERY JANUARY, 1904.

Those who saw it will endorse our statement that it is without question the most valuable new variety shown at the 1903 Carnation Convention. All the leading experts agreed on its great value. We want a good scarlet carnation, and this is a great advance in this color. It is by far the largest scarlet carnation yet raised, a flower of the largest size, borne on long, strong, stiff stems, and is a free and early bloomer. It will rank in quality with Mrs Thos. W. Lawson, Enchantress, Prosperity, etc. Was awarded the Lawson Silver Medal and the S. A. F. Silver Medal. Scored 90 points.

There is sure to be a tremendous demand for this and if you want to secure early delivery order should be placed without delay. Orders will be filled strictly in rotation as received, so the earlier you book order the earlier delivery we can make. Let us have order at once while the matter is in mind.

We shall also have to offer for 1904 the following exceptionally valuable new carnations:

NELSON FISHER, MRS. M. A. PATTEN and ALBATROSS.

Price of all the above named varieties—$12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

We offer also NEW WHITE CANNA MONT BLANC. Delivery March 1903.

This is the most valuable new variety that has been offered in years. It is an exceedingly free bloomer, producing large spikes of white flowers on strong, branching spikes, borne well above the foliage. Dwarf habit—identical with Mme Crozy in height and style of growth. Its great masses of snowy blossoms contrast splendidly with the crimson, pink and yellow varieties, and it will be found indispensible in all fine Canna collections. A Novelty of Sterling Merit.

$1.00 each; $9.00 per dozen; $50.00 per 100.

RETAIL ADVERTISING.

The following adv. has been sent to us with request for an opinion as to its value:

CHRISTMAS FLOWERS.

The wise man will tell you he does not want cut flowers coming from Chicago and especially at the holidays, as they will save them from ten to twelve days to get high prices. Buy from home growers to get fresh stock. We will have enough to supply all Roses, $1.25 per dozen; carnations from 50c to $1; violets, 25c per bunch; poinsettias, 25c a large head; chrysanthemums, large, $2 per dozen; hyacinths, 60c; daffodils, 60c.

Also fine potted plants. In funeral designs people have found that we lead, on account of having at all times the most flowers and best workmanship. Always 'phone or see us at 129 East Third street or at the West End Greenhouse.

The printing of prices may have been a good idea to dispel any false impressions that may have arisen through the items sometimes printed as to extravagant prices to be demanded for flowers at Christmas, but it would seem as though any special low quotations would be a mistake at the holiday season. Not knowing whether these prices are an advance on the usual retail prices or not, we are not in a position to say as to their wisdom.

The reference to "pickled" stock would indicate that some competitor who had no greenhouses of his own was being pointed to. If so it was a mistake, and will eventually do more harm than good. It is bad policy to waste time or money to belittle a competitor or to run down his wares. Talk up your own goods to the limit the subject will honestly bear, and devote all your space to it. It will pay better in every way, to say nothing of the better feeling in trade circles.

It seems to us that the advertising of all retail florists should be directed as largely as possible to the development of new buyers, and that all local florists should endeavor to work together to this end. A series of advs. telling the people when and how to use flowers—and when and how not to use them—would be of benefit to all. Hold your old customers by the right kind of service and make new ones by wise advertising should, in our opinion, be the rule to be followed by retailers. Here is a suggestion:

A BUNCH OF VIOLETS,
FRESH AND FRAGRANT, CARRIES A MEANING ACCEPTABLE TO EVERYONE.
MAYBE YOU USED TO SEND THEM TO A CERTAIN LADY YEARS AGO. HAVE YOU GIVEN HER MANY SINCE THE WEDDING?
TAKE A BUNCH HOME WITH YOU TONIGHT AND SEE HOW THE THOUGHT OF HER AS WELL AS THE FLOWERS ARE APPRECIATED.
A LARGE BUNCH WILL COST YOU ONLY 50 CENTS. ISN'T THE SENTIMENT WORTH IT?
BLANK, THE FLORIST,
283 FOURTH ST.

A series could be devised that would cover each flower in its season. And for any season a $2 or $3 box of mixed flowers would be appropriate. Special advs. could be arranged to appeal to young men, to ladies giving dinners, etc., to business men having "openings" at their stores, etc.

We shall be pleased to receive other examples of advertising by retailers.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

In every well regulated and up-to-date establishment, there should be a system of record-keeping. It is not only essential to know where we stand at the end of the season, but is of fundamental use in planning our next season's planting.

To know exactly how many blooms each plant produces per season, and the superficial space occupied by each plant must of necessity be of great use to every grower. But how few growers can at the end of the season give any idea of the cut of any one variety. This is known only to those who have gone to the trouble of compiling such statistics.

To keep a faithful record of the product of each variety, a card with spaces for each day of the month, should be placed in each house, and each and every bloom cut should be marked on it under the heading of each variety, totalled at the end of the month and entered in the journal, so that comparisons may be made with previous crops.

Standing Wreath. Arranged by Alexander McConnell, New York.

STANDING WREATH.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a wreath of rare beauty and elaborate design, illustrating the seven ages of man, arranged by Mr. Alexander McConnell, New York.

The base is of leucothoe sprays, cycas leaves and lilies, and the flowers used to illustrate the seven ages are: First, lily of the valley; second, Maid roses; third, Bride roses; fourth, American Beauty roses; fifth, longiflorum lilies; sixth, a sheaf of wheat; seventh, brown galax leaves.

It is a pretty conception admirably carried out, and the engraving will, we believe, be of very general interest to all our readers.

In the sorting room similar cards should be used, which should show the exact number of blooms in each grade. Note should also be made of those varieties which are most in demand and as near as possible the proportion of colors called for.

By this means we can at the end of the season, with a little figuring, arrive at a very definite conclusion as to which of the varieties it is most profitable to plant. By rigidly following this method the waste will be reduced to a minimum.

These remarks apply with even more force to carnation crops, chiefly because of the number of varieties in cultivation and the ever increasing number of new varieties which every grower is anxious to test for himself. Apart from the successful culture of these new introductions, it is absolutely necessary to have a record so that we may find out the pecuniary value of each. This is the surest way of "making the place pay."

Record-keeping also embraces a system of recording the temperature of each day of the month, with remarks concerning the amount of sunshine and moisture. The night and day temperature of each house should also be recorded each day.

bring in Clothilde Soupert for early summer blooming.

After bringing them in see that they are slowly thawed out before potting. Any good rose soil with one-fifth well decomposed cow manure added is well suited for them. There should be ample drainage provided, as they will require copious supplies of water when the warm weather begins.

A temperature of 45 to 50 degrees is warm enough for them until the eyes break. During this period they should not be exposed to too much light; under a bench where there is room enough to use the syringe freely is just the place for them. When the eyes have started and the roots have become active they should be placed on a bench that is fully exposed to the sun and watered freely.

A steady night temperature of 56 degrees, with day temperature of 70 degrees will bring them into bloom by the required time. Ribes.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

The Convention Exhibition.

When I started for the convention it was my intention to give you a complete

Enchantress was there in good form and looked fine. You all know what this variety is, as it has been described over and over.

Harlowarden was slightly frosted on the way, but the blooms showed their fine size, beautiful form and rich color. In stem and calyx this variety is perfection itself.

Nelson Fisher was shown in good shape and looks very much like Lawson, except that the color is darker and the stem longer.

President McKinley is another of the same color, but has a much better form than Lawson.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt is a very promising variety. It is hardly pink, but rather a carmine-cerise, if you can imagine such a combination. By day it looks a bright pink, but at night it would easily pass for red. Size, stem, calyx and form are good, and I saw a house full of it, loaded with buds.

Gov. Lowndes was there in fine shape, and looks like a good white; could find no weak point anywhere.

Lillian Pond looks like a giant White Cloud, and promises to be a winner of bread as well as prizes.

Bench of the New White Seedling Carnation No. 10 at the establishment of the St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, Ill.

all of which may be of some utility for future reference.

In fact, from the time the cutting is put in the sand until it has finished the entire season's work, nothing concerning its cultivation or pecuniary value should go unrecorded. In order to derive full benefit from these records a full description of the soils used, the nature of the compost, fertilizers and the amount and quality of liquid food applied, should also be entered in the journal.

All this requires a certain amount of time, but it is time well spent and will amply repay us by leaving no doubt as to the merits or demerits of each and every variety under our care. Ribes.

ROSES.

What time should Clothilde Soupert rose be dug and potted for blooming about May 15 to 30? What temperature does it require and what kind of soil suits it best? C. W. E.

This is just about the right time to write-up of the exhibition, with comments on the merits and demerits of every variety on exhibition. Our party, however, was so unfortunate as to arrive at the exhibition hall at 5:30 p. m. instead of 8 a. m. on Thursday, and as everybody was turned out of the hall at 6 p. m., I was obliged to wait until Friday to view the show, and by that time many of the blooms were not looking their best.

Mr. Scott in last week's Review gave you a pretty good list of the best varieties shown, and I may be able to add only a few.

The one variety that attracted attention above all others was Mr. Marquisee's "Flamingo." A scarlet, of large size, good form, fine color, good calyx and fine stem. If this variety is a good producer, it will become a standard scarlet.

President Roosevelt, by Ward, has the finest and clearest color of any crimson I have ever seen; it fairly looms up under artificial light. The form is good, as is also the size, calyx and stem.

The Queen looked very nice, and will likely make a good paying white.

There was a fine vase of Mrs. Potter Palmer, and I want to say that the more I see of that variety the more faith I have in it.

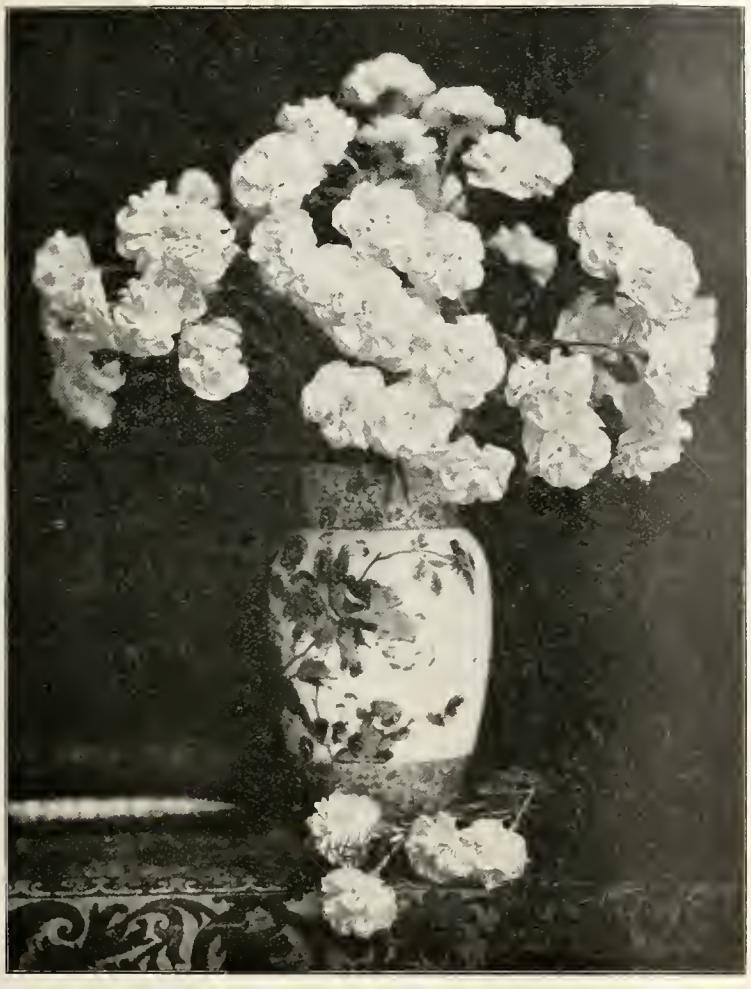
Marshall Field is a fine variegated, about the same color as Bradt, but of better form, stem and calyx. A good one, I think.

Her Majesty was also there in fine shape. We have had this growing here this season and we think highly of it.

May Naylor looks very much like Flora Hill, but the stem is stronger and the bloom hardly so large as a good F. Hill.

White Bradt is what its name would imply, a white Mrs. Bradt. We saw this growing, and it seemed to produce better than we have ever seen Mrs. Bradt produce.

Innocence, from E. G. Hill's place, was shown in nice shape, and as I have also seen this variety growing several seasons, I do not hesitate to pronounce it a good one.



Seedling White Carnation Shown at the St. Louis Florists' Club Meeting by the St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, Ill.

Fragrance is a pretty shade of light pink, not unlike G. Lord, but fringed deeply, which shows off the color to good advantage. Few carnations have such a strong clove scent. Stem, size, calyx and form all good.

Adonis was not shown in proper shape. The blooms staged gave a wrong impression of the quality of this grand variety. Those who saw it at Indianapolis last year noticed the difference.

Boston Market is fair in quality, and if it is a producer, as is claimed, it will find a place.

Mrs. M. A. Patten is a variegated, of Mrs. Bradt type, and looks good all around. No weak points that I could see.

Among the notable ones in commerce were Mrs. Lawson, which is still as fine as ever and as popular.

A grand vase of 100 blooms of Mrs. Nelson showed that it is a grand variety when well done.

Cressbrook was shown better than any I have seen this season.

Gov. Wolcott was the white in most cases.

Prosperity was there in good shape, but not in as large numbers as last year.

Gov. Roosevelt was shown in good form and is hard to beat.

Harry Fenn is lighter than the Governer, but smaller.

Alba was sent from Indiana and although it was on the road until Friday noon, it arrived in fine shape and looked as fine as any white in the show.

Apollo was also shown in good shape and for color is hard to beat.

Dorothy Whitney seems to be the leading yellow at present.

I believe I have mentioned most of those shown in good shape, but now I want to mention a few that I would advise you to watch at the shows next fall and next winter. Varieties that are not on the market yet.

Albatross is a fine looking white. Camellia form, pure white, good stem and calyx.

Gov. Hinsdale is a pink and red variegated, with fine stem and calyx; good form.

The Bride looks much like Alba. I saw this growing and it struck me as an easy grower and a good one.

Sunbird is a rather pleasing yellow, though not so clear as it might be.

There was a white shown by Mr. Suydam, of which I would like to see more, as it struck me very favorably. It had neither name nor number.

Alpine Glow is a fine light pink, a little brighter than Daybreak.

Mrs. J. A. Thayer is a greatly improved Morning Glory. A bench of this looked very fine indeed.

Lady Bountiful is a white of fine size, pure color, good form, calyx and stem, and a fine producer. I also saw this growing last December. This is the No. 123 I mentioned in my trip to Dorner's.

Gov. Bliss is a nice looking scarlet of G. H. Crane color; about same size; good calyx and stem.

Flame is much the same except color, which is a shade lighter if I remember them correctly.

Ethel Ward is one of the most beautiful shades of pink I have ever seen and if it does not fade too much, it will become extremely popular. Good size, form, calyx and stem.

Sensation is a beautiful combination of buff overlaid with orange and pink; good size, form, calyx and stem. As a novelty this is all right.

W. N. Rudd's "Phyllis" was cooked on the way and I was unable to get a good look at it.

Our own "Indianapolis" was left lying out in the cold over night and was unfit to show.

There may be some varieties that I have overlooked, but you will have your hands full if you keep tab on all the above; however, if I think of any other good ones I will mention them in my next.

Next year we are to meet in Detroit and the first week in March. It would be hard to find a more central place to meet and I predict the finest exhibition by far that we have ever had. The date, I believe, is also much better when you consider only the show. There is, however, the increased danger of a late bloomer coming along and scoring away up and walking away with a medal or certificate, and some provision will have to be made to prevent this if possible.

I have always held that it is wrong to give a variety a certificate or a medal just on one showing. A variety should be scored at least three times, and at different times of the season before it is pronounced a first-class variety. Say in October, December and March, then if it scores up each time you may safely say that it is a good all season variety and only one of that kind is worthy of a certificate of merit. What would be the best plan to carry this out will be for the society to decide; but I would suggest three or four committees in different cities, to meet on certain dates to pass judgment on new varieties, similar to the plan adopted by the Chrysanthemum Society. It could be arranged so that every variety would have to be shown at the convention show, so there would be just as good a show as there is now.

A variety that gained a certificate under those conditions would be bought with confidence, and that can hardly be done now. Now we are obliged to watch the reports from the fall shows and all the club meetings through the winter in order to get a line on a variety even though it may have won a certificate at the national convention.

NEW WHITE CARNATION.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a vase of the new white seedling carnation No. 10, shown at the carnation meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club by the St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, Ill., where the variety made an excellent impression as a useful commercial white.

We also present a view of a bench of the plants of this seedling growing at the establishment of the originaters. The part of the bench in flower is the seedling, the flowers having been all removed from the other sorts to more readily indicate the seedling.

CARNATIONS.

Leaf Spot.

Enclosed herewith I send you some carnation cuttings. They show a disease and I would like you to tell me what it is and the cure for same; also if shoots rooted from them are likely to develop the same disease when planted out for next season. H. F. E.

The specimens sent by H. F. E. showed plainly a case of leaf spot, and he can easily rid his plants of it. Pick off all spotted leaves and burn them; keep the atmosphere pure and sweet; dust the plants with slaked slime, fostite or grape dust, and do not wet the plants overhead too much. A stagnant atmosphere is the cause of the trouble, and when you know that you will know how to combat it. The shoots you sent are unfit for cuttings; they are too long drawn. The side shoots are much better.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Topping Young Stock.

Young stock will now be growing quite rapidly as the power of the sun increases; it will be well to go over it every two or three days, if possible, as it is surprising how much more quickly some plants run up, than others in the same batch.

Our method of selecting plants of one size when transferring from pots to flats is of material advantage; but even then some will forge ahead and as the process of topping must not be delayed too long, it becomes necessary to look them over often.

In topping, there is a right and a wrong way and also a right and wrong time.

I cannot recommend the pulling out of the center shoots, as this leaves an undesirable place for water to lodge, acting in some cases similar to Pandanus Veitchii when moisture is allowed to collect in the heart of the plant.

This may be called one extreme; the other is in allowing plants to run almost into bud, thereby making it necessary to remove a large amount of growth, thus inviting a check to the plants and the possibility of there being a hard stump left from which the eyes do not readily break.

It is true that some varieties branch naturally and need but little attention as regards topping. Every variety has its peculiarities in reference to its natural growth, but I think the general make-up of the cutting at the time it is taken from the plant, has much to do with the future plant's natural inclination toward shapeliness. You have perhaps noticed in a batch of seedlings that the majority naturally grow into shapely plants. There was no selection of cuttings then; Dame Nature showed her inclination towards the beautiful; for is there not beauty in nicely formed plants?

Plants grown from cuttings which possessed a strong base and a stocky look, will require much less attention as regards topping, than those spindling, long-jointed apologies that are sometimes taken in the mad desire to increase stock no matter what the result!

I do not approve of topping directly before or after a shift; that is, transferring potted stock to flats, bench or larger pots; for in so doing there is great liability of a backset being given the plants. It should be the plan to have the operation of topping done when the roots have a firm hold of the soil, for it is obvious that when topped there is a loss of balance between roots and top and to have at hand a fresh supply of soil into which the roots have not penetrated, will only result in much time being consumed in restoring the balance, when the object is to get the plants into proper condition as soon as possible. This is very quickly arrived at when the plants are left to their own resources, as it were.

In explanation I will assume your stock is either in quarters where it is to remain until planting-out time or where it can be kept for a week or ten days without suffering for root room. Those plants which have run up so that the stem can be easily seen between the joints should be cut with a sharp knife (not broken or roughly pinched off) between the joints at a point which your judgment will tell you that a sufficient number of eyes have been left to break and form a shapely plant. There can be no arbitrary rule laid down which will apply to all varieties, as to the distance above the soil plants should be topped, for there is much difference in the natural habit of each.

The most important object to be attained is to produce a plant which, when lifted, will have the main stem or trunk of such length that when benching, the lower branches will be at least an inch above the soil, while a trifle less stem is sufficient to extend into the soil. Allowing for variation which is bound to occur, I should say, the ideal stem would be from 2 to 2½ inches between lowest branch and where the roots join the trunk. Geo. S. Osborn.

NEW CARNATION MAGDALENE.

I send you herewith an engraving from a photograph of a bench of the new pink carnation Magdalene, at the establishment of Smith & Son, Cleveland, Ohio. The color is a very pleasing cerise pink, not quite so dark as Lawson, and the blooms measure from 2½ to 3½ inches across, being borne on stiff stems, 18 to 25 inches long. It makes a splendid plant, both in the field and when planted on the bench. It has a remarkable feature, namely, that of breaking from the bottom and throwing blooming wood almost like a rose. The bench was planted September 24, and the photograph was taken February 12. The photograph hardly does the carnation justice, as I have seen it in much better shape with a great many more buds and blooms showing. Tenep.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Seeds.

Every week now will find us with more work and less room in which to do it. From now until we get the relief at Easter is one of the most crowded times of the year.

Several kinds of seed can be sown about the middle of the month. As important as any to the florist is the aster, which nowadays is an important summer and fall flower. There are many different strains and most all good if well grown. I mentioned a few weeks ago that asters could be sown then for a very early batch, and the sowing during middle of March should not be the last. Sow another lot middle of April. We found last year a variety known as "Queen of the Market" was very early and useful. The "Comet" is a very beautiful flower, and the "Truffauts Paeony Flowered," the "Victoria," and to give you the largest blooms, the "Vick's" or "Semple's" branching varieties are indispensable. Don't sow the branching varieties too late, as they take longer than others to mature.

Few florists save their own aster seed, although they could if they wished to go to the trouble. But I believe in division of labor, and that we may as well leave to the specialist. So the next best thing is to buy your seeds of the most reliable source you know. Seedsmen too often get blamed for a poor quality of seed or strain when it is our fault and poor cultivation is the trouble. Asters must have a deep, rich soil and in dry spells they must be watered.

If your trade demands young plants of the so-called hardy annuals, they should be sown middle to end of the month—balsams, Phlox Drummondi, dianthus, marigolds, ten week stocks, and others of that class. There is not much money in any of these to the florist as cut flowers, but our customers want them.

Every spring we sell hundreds of 3-inch pots of mignonette, just because people don't remember, or don't know enough to sow the seed in the open ground as soon as it can be dug. They are asked for by the dozen and there is as much profit in them as in any other bedding plant.

Sow nasturtiums soon. We use these largely in baskets and vases. The tall varieties are most suitable for this purpose, and they want a light, warm place and a stiff soil without any manure, or they will grow too large in the pots before you want to use them.

There is always a demand for the beautiful cosmos, and where the season is long enough to allow it to flower in profusion there is no more beautiful decorative flower. Sow it middle of this month and when in small pots give it a light bench, so that it won't run up too long and spindling.

Cannas.

It will soon be time to get up your canna roots and clean and divide them. You can't afford to have them in pots until after Easter, for you don't have the room to spare. One good, sound eye is enough to make a fine plant. Spread two inches of sphagnum on a bench, and if pipes are beneath the bench, so much the better. Then place the pieces you have cut and divided on the sphagnum as thick as you like and place some more sphagnum between them. They will start quicker this way than if potted in soil, and you save a great deal of valuable bench room for three or four weeks at least. They will easily show you by the start they make, both at top and bottom, when they should be put into a 4 or 5-inch pot.

Caladiums.

The Caladium esculentum we put in flats of sand quite close together with an inch of sand beneath the bulb and then fill up with sand even with top of bulb, because they root from the top of the so-called bulb. We place the flats a few inches above some hot water pipes, where they seem to start immediately, while they would take five times as long in soil and pots. Don't let them remain too long near the pipes. Once started you can place the flats on any bench until you have room to pot them.

Bulbs.

Don't get alarmed about your Easter bulbs yet awhile. Three weeks is time enough for any of them, and I will endeavor to discourse on what I know about them in my next. I will only say now that up to this date, or first of March, we have not forced any of the double tulips, but from now on such varieties as Murillo and Tournesol force finely.

William Scott.

LILIES.

Will Mr. William Scott tell me what is the trouble with our lilies. They don't seem to draw up any and the stems are almost too short. The bulbs purchased were first-class, and although a great many are showing buds, the stems are inclined to be short. Temperature has been kept at between 60 and 65 degrees. Will there be any difference if they were put nearer the glass? We have them on center bench.

C. R. R.

The correspondent does not say whether the lilies are Bermuda or Japan, but from the way they are acting I should say they were the latter, for unfortunately I have a lot that is doing the same thing—showing buds when not over 8 inches above the pots. If the bulbs were potted and put immediately, or before they had made any roots, into a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees, I should be inclined to think that would account for this dwarf growth and premature flowering, but my bulbs were not treated that way. They were in a cold frame until the middle of December and had made good roots before being brought into the houses. They are not all in that condition—perhaps 30 per cent. Some plants have grown up and are now about 2 feet high and just showing bud, and that's about as we want them. So while some are doing well, others will be largely useless, and this leads me to think that it is not the fault of our treatment but that the trouble is with the bulb—unripened when dug most likely.

You would do no good by putting them nearer the light. Lilies want a light house at all times until the flower is expanded, but putting them nearer the glass would certainly not do them the slightest good. You will have to bear the trouble this year, and next year try to secure bulbs that not only look "first-class" but are first-class.

William Scott.

A SUMMER SASH HOUSE.

I would like to ask for some one's experience with a summer house for carnations and roses that would utilize hotbed sash; i. e., what would be the best style to build for that purpose?

I have thought that a house for summer carnations and Cochet roses would protect the flowers and produce a better grade of bloom; also, that they could be carried longer in the fall, as the wet weather harms the blooms more than the frost.

Would not the ordinary 12-ft. sash house be all right, with walks around the sides?

Would it be preferable to bench the plants, or plant in the ground?

S. S. P.

The above is referred to me, and it is somewhat of a new idea. As a means of using hotbed sash when they would perhaps lie idle from say June until following February, I would say yes, decidedly it would. You could keep the carnations going and giving you good flowers even in Massachusetts at least a month longer than you could in the open ground and they would be better flowers. The Cochet roses, both pink and white, are grand summer roses, and in well prepared beds and supplied with water will produce buds out of doors almost equal to our best Brides and Maids. They would also give you flowers much longer than if unprotected, and throughout the summer the buds would be of a better quality. I heard very recently that Cochet was a splendid summer rose under glass.

As for size of house, and supposing there is to be no artificial heat at any time except that afforded by the glass, I would prefer a house about 10 ft. 6 in. wide. That's as wide as you can make a house with two 6-ft. hotbed sash, and let a narrow path run up the middle with a bed on each side. I would have solid beds rather than benches for the summer; a bed 10 inches or 1 foot above the floor of the house. If you have your path all around the house and one wide bed it would necessitate much higher walls and that would make the little house dark. Whether it would be a very profitable investment for carnations-I am not so sure, but for Cochet roses I am sure it would.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

At the meeting of the Executive Board in Milwaukee, Wis., March 17, one of the most important matters to receive attention is the discriminating express tariff on flowers which has been in force since December 10, 1902. It is essential that the fullest details of protests or other action on the part of individuals, clubs or societies should be in the secretary's office in season for compilation and arrangement in convenient form for the consideration of the Board. A number of reports from State vice-presidents and local secretaries are already on file, but many more are needed, if the movement on the part of the national society is to carry weight as representing comprehensively the sentiments of the floricultural profession. Action taken in several places has come to my knowledge only through reports in trade papers. Official notification of all such should be transmitted to this office over the signatures of the proper officers or other active participants, and I would respectfully urge that this be done at once so that, if stringent measures are eventually forced upon us, the needed material may be at hand. The case as presented by the Boston meeting has already been before the traffic managers in New York City for three weeks.

All members having views on questions affecting the society's future policy and welfare which they would like to submit to the executive board are earnestly requested to put same in writing and forward them at once to the secretary.

The following named elected or appointed state vice-presidents for the year 1903 have severally accepted the office and pledged their best efforts for the advancement of the society's interest: Alabama, Wm. F. Lindsay, Birmingham; California, H. H. Lilienthal, San Francisco; Colorado, J. A. Valentine, Denver; Connecticut, Theodore Wirth, Hartford; Florida, W. J. Ellsworth, Jessamine; Georgia, L. A. Berckmans, Augusta; Illinois (South), John Willius, Danville; Illinois (North), J. B. Deamud, Chicago; Indiana, W. W. Coles, Kokomo; Iowa, W. Greene, Des Moines; Kansas, A. H. Whitcomb, Lawrence; Kentucky, A. R. Baumer, Louisville; Maine, H. B. Mitchell, Waterville; Maryland, C. L. Seyhold, Baltimore; Massachusetts (East), H. P. Kelsey, Boston; Massachusetts (West), A. J. Loveless, Lenox; Michigan, Robert Flowerday, Detroit; Minnesota, O. A. Wilt, Minneapolis; Missouri, C. A. Juengel, St. Louis; Nebraska, Lewis Henderson, Omaha; New Hampshire, B. Morris, Portsmouth; New Jersey, W. B. Du Rie, Rahway; New York (East), Benjamin Hammond, Fishkill-on-Hudson; North Carolina, Jas. M. Lamb, Fayetteville; Ohio (North), Isaac Kennedy, Cleveland; Ohio (South), Wm. Murphy, Cincinnati; Pennsylvania (East), I. K. Giles, Reading; Rhode Island, L. J. Reuter, Westerly; South Carolina, Martin Stork, Columbia; Virginia, Lloyd G. Blick, Norfolk; Wisconsin, F. H. Holton, Milwaukee; Canada, H. H. Groff, Simcoe.

The Market.

With the advent of Lent the entire bottom dropped out of the cut flower market. Respectable prices were actually maintained until the very morning the "season of sack cloth and ashes" dawned, and the very first "penitential tears" were shed by the wholesale florists. The fact is, for the last three days of the week there was no market and prices were like a "will o' the wisp" with neither reason nor stability for a foundation. Specification is unnecessary; everything went, and it was a faint reminder of a Wall street panic. But "these things cannot be explained," as the song goes, and doubtless matters will readjust themselves and become normal now that the first shock is over. Roses in particular suffered and violets went begging. The temperature reached 60 degrees on Friday.

The street merchants had their innings the last three days of the week. With the immense shipments of the growers and the tremendous slump in the wholesale prices, with almost summer temperature, it was their harvest time.

Items.

Mr. Schwake, with Chas. F. Meyer, wholesale importer of 19 Barclay street, is in the city after an extended and successful western trip. He says business has been excellent and is delighted with the practical reception given the new firm.

The voice of the auctioneer will soon resound through horticultural halls. On Friday of this week Mr. Cleary begins operations at the old stand, and on Tuesday following Mr. Elliott will again give his larynx an opportunity to "get busy." Hardy roses, hydrangeas, rhododendrons and conifers will compose the first sacrifice.

Mr. J. Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash, has fought a good fight with la grippe and has it under subjection. This plague is epidemic in New York and many of the craft have suffered.

The retail business is feeling the arrival of the penitential season. Society has departed for Lakewood, or the Carolinas, or Florida or Europe, and the big dinners are few and far between.

Next Monday evening is carnation night at the New York Florists' Club regular meeting at 128 E. 28th street, the club's temporary quarters. Several fine exhibits are promised and an interesting evening is assured.

H. H. Berger & Co. say that the latest news from Brazil concerning this season's crop of Cocos Weddeliana seed is to the effect that it is of a non-germinative quality.

There was some great "booking of orders" at the convention. Everyone seemed to be getting his share. Walter Mott and S. S. Skidelsky, the veteran drummers of not so long ago, were on hand looking sleek and prosperous and with substantiated evidences of a successful year.

Last Monday, at Ossining, N. Y., the mother of Mrs. Bradshaw died, the second bereavement within a week in the family of Geo. E. Bradshaw, the wholesale florist.

Jas. F. McConnell is convalescing after a two weeks' serious tussle with bronchitis.

Sidney Nash kept an eye open for florists' stores and other things floricultural while in London, and has many interesting things to tell of his observations. He "gives the palm" to the New York stores in comparison, and says in artistic decoration of windows and general catering to the public taste New York is a generation ahead of his native land. But one thing in particular he noted—every business man wears a boutonniere.

A. J. Fellouris, of 468 Sixth avenue, the wholesale fern and galax dealer, has added a cut flower department to his business.

Brooklyn not only had the greatest carnation convention but has the oldest gardener in the country. Stephen Miley, born in County Dublin, Ireland, in 1800, came to this country in 1860 and has been gardening ever since.

BOSTON.

We seem to have turned a new leaf and begun upon an entirely new chapter. It makes pretty hard reading, too, and forebodes trouble for a few days until Easter lightens up the gloom for a page or two, after which it looks like another dull passage until the paragraph concerning Memorial day, and then—oblivion!

Ash Wednesday was our last real good day and was surprisingly all right, in view of the arrival of Lent. Some claim that this season makes no appreciable difference. We get the stagnation, however, and can charge it to whatever cause we please. Goods are more plentiful, thanks to Old Sol, who has removed his embargo from all kinds of goods and has surely taken all duties off of pink and white roses. They are much more plentiful than anything else.

We are beginning to feel the need of a larger market than the Park street quarters and negotiations are under way to get possession of the new Columbus avenue rooms for Easter, which will probably be successful.

I have been obliged to hold my nose too closely to the floral grindstone this week for it to get a chance to pry into any news' happenings, if any have been enacted.

Questions are being raised as to the condition of the coming lily crop, but I hear no very definite answers, so presume it is coming on well, if conditions are favorable.

There are rumors of more building to be done this summer than I supposed would be the case. The demand for glass has caused a bit of an advance and fears of further changes are expressed. A few days ago $3.50 was the figure per box, but now $3.65 seems to be the ticket.

Look in the Old Farmer's Almanac and see if it doesn't say that it is about time to kill brown tail moth nests and place ads. in floral papers for Easter business!

J. S. Manter.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The gratitude formerly felt for good stock is now felt for good orders. This conveys a clear idea of the conditions of the cut flower market this week. There is little demand. Flowers are plentiful, prices low and irregular. Roses sell fairly well, especially good teas. There is no demand for long Beauties, and many have to be shortened to fill orders for medium grades. The best blooms of carnations go fairly, especially on shipping orders. Edward Reid is handling some very fine flowers of several leading sorts. Violets are hard to sell; the street men get many of the singles; doubles go better. S. S. Pennock moves a quantity of fine ones daily. There is some very good mignonette to be had. Bulbous flowers are in oversupply, especially daffodils, which are now very cheap. Fancy tulips sell better, but the common varieties are overdone. It is probable that with the lower prices and fine spring weather a demand will be created among the flower lovers who cannot afford fancy prices. This should improve conditions until Easter, now only five weeks off.

Jottings.

Milton W. Woodroffe, formerly senior member of the firm of Woodroffe & Bernheimer, has opened this week a wholesale commission house at 1344 Ridge avenue. Mr. Woodroffe has had a long experience in the cut flower commission business, having served his apprenticeship with Samuel S. Pennock fully a dozen years ago. His many friends wish him success in his new undertaking.

Samuel S. Pennock has an attractive novelty in natural wood work. Short pieces of boughs of trees are hollowed and covered with sheet moss, and a light bottom of cloth or paper fastened underneath, so that a vase or tin to hold flowers can be inserted. These wood fancies are made into various shapes. The work is all done by one family which lives at a distance from the city.

Henry I. Faust is planning to build improvements on his place at Merion.

Leo Niessen has moved into a very fine place of business at 1217 Arch street. The building is modern, giving every facility for his large cut flower commission business.

The Lenten exodus to Florida has begun. This year it is the hard working retailers, as well as the members of the leisure class, who are enjoying the balmy breezes of the south, H. H. Battles and J. Liddon Pennock heading the stream of tourists. Abram L. Pennock is gaining strength near Jacksonville. Two of his sons, Herbert A. and Henry, have been with him all winter. The latter has two acres of pineapples under cultivation. Another son of A. J., known as the "Valley King," is with them now for a short time.

The Baltimore florists have extended a hearty invitation to their brethren in this city to come to Baltimore on Monday, March 9, roll three games of tenpins in the afternoon, and join them at their annual dinner in the evening. Geo. M. Moss, to whom the invitation was sent, proposes to take the 10:20 a. m. train from Broad street station next Monday, and hopes that a goodly number of our bowlers will go with him.

The engagement of W. R. Shelmire, formerly of Avondale, Pa., to take charge of H. H. Battles' place at Newtown Square will, it is thought, cause carnations to supersede plants as a specialty at this place.

The Florists' Bowling team defeated the Pennsylvania Club, their nearest rival for first honors, in three straight games in the Bowlers' League last week. This gives the Florists a score of 32 wins to 6 losses, their antagonists having 22 wins to 14 losses. The score is as follows:

FLORISTS.				Totals.

BUFFALO.

Lent does not make as much difference nowadays to the trade as it did some years ago and quiet little parties go on as usual and other occasions that call for our products, so we expect to sell all we can grow for the next four months at least. I heard of no overstock of flowers of late and hope there won't be any. Tulips and narcissus have sold well of late; the demand for these always increases as the sun gets higher.

I am requested by the secretary of the American Park and Outdoor Art Association to call your attention to the fact that the association meets in Buffalo, July 7, 8 and 9. I have the pleasure of being a member of the association and am very glad it will hold its next convention in our city, although its objects and interests hardly appeal to the merely practical florist. It is striving to educate our people to embellish the outside of their homes as well as the inside. To beautify their streets and give liberal support to their parks. In fact, every movement that will make our surroundings more beautiful and healthful. All this is most commendable, and the florist is at the same work only in a narrower sphere and mostly for revenue. I trust all florists who possibly can will attend some of the meetings and assist as much as possible to make the visit of the association the best in its history. The program of the convention is long and varied. They will on several occasions be the guests of the park commissioners and as we have a very large society here known as the "Society for Beautifying Buffalo" the visitors will doubtless receive a hearty welcome.

Last week we lost a veteran florist, Mr. Philip La Tour. He was 65 years of age and perhaps not so generally known to the younger generation of florists. Some 25 years ago he had several greenhouses and office on Washington street, afterwards removing and building a new establishment on Genesee street near the Parade. Some fifteen years ago he became largely interested in real estate and a large tract of land between Genesee street and Walden avenue was quickly built up through the enterprise of Mr. La Tour. He leaves a widow and several sons and daughters, one of whom is Mrs. Wm. F. Kasting.

PIPING NOT PRACTICABLE.

I send a plan of my greenhouses and proposed method of piping same. If I have anything wrong, will Mr. Gibbons please correct it? J. B.

Referring to the inquiry and diagram of J. B., the plan proposed is not practicable; in the first place, the system of circulation is not desirable for the houses 74 feet long; it were better if possible to sink the boiler deep enough to make an entire circulation beneath the benches; in the second place, the hot water main leading from the boiler is too small for the purposes shown. It should not be less than 3½-inch pipe and the return to each side of the boiler 2½ inch; again, the method of making the coils, running, as he shows, 6 lines of 1¼-inch pipes 74 feet long directly into the headers at each end, is defective, as there will be a variation in the expansion of the pipes which will result in serious buckling of the pipes and ultimately to splits or it will result in a breakage at the headers. Provision for spring must be made at least at one of each coil.

Your correspondent does not state what temperature he wishes to maintain nor does he state how much of the building is of glass, but assuming that there is glass on the roof only and that he desires to maintain a temperature of 55 degrees, the coils should contain about 96 inches, measuring the circumference of all the pipe; whereas the circumference of the coil of six 1¼-inch pipes on each side of the house together with the overhead main measures less than 80 inches, showing an apparent shortage of heating surface necessary under the most favorable conditions.

Since the writing of our last notes from this point two weeks ago we have had violent contrasts of weather, affecting markedly the production and sale of all sorts of cut flowers. First was an almost Arctic snow storm, with the mercury below the zero mark for four successive mornings, an experience altogether unique here, so far as the memory of your correspondent goes. Since that time we have had heavy rains, and on Saturday last a warm storm from the south, the temperature going above 70 degrees. Today (March 2) it is clear, cool, crisp and dry, with overhead an azure vault of heavenly blue which no Italian skies can equal.

On Wednesday of last week, Ash Wednesday, closely observed by a number of churches as a day of fasting and solemnity, trade fell off very much and it may be said, so far, not to have fully revived. At the same time the receipts of cut stuff are gradually but certainly increasing. Towards the close of the week the effect was to create the first glut which has been felt here during the winter. This was especially true of carnations. Naturally, prices were affected and many mediocre flowers receded from their rather inflated values to more normal figures. But good stuff has, as is usual, held its own and was in steady request at figures showing no decline.

There is an outlet in this market for large quantities of flowers which probably is not felt in all cities. Reference is made to the hospital supply. Baltimore is the seat of one great public institution, the John Hopkins Hospital, the fame of which is, at least, national, and there are other sanitariums, private or quasi-public, which are conducted by men of eminent skill and wide renown in certain lines of surgical or medical practice, so that to these establishments are drawn patients from all over the country. The friends of these people are profuse in their offerings of flowers which mark delicately and appropriately sympathy for and interest in the sufferers. The stream of cut flower boxes into the various institutions is perennial, one florist informing me a few days ago that he averaged at times a dozen boxes a day!

The steamer trade here, except during a comparatively brief season in the spring, amounts to very little, most of the steamship lines carrying few passengers. Nor is there the rage for complimenting theatrical favorites with floral gifts which exists in some other quarters.

During the past few weeks there have been several funerals which demanded large and beautiful decorations. Also some social events where the florist and decorator were practically given carte blanche in producing novel and lovely effects.

A dinner given on Friday last by Gen. Thos. J. Shryock to Mr. Geo. W. Stevens, president of the Chesapeake & Ohio R. R., was the occasion of a unique color treatment by Wm. J. Halliday, who had charge of the adornment of the rooms and table. The walls and ceiling of the dining room were hidden by southern smilax arranged on trellises, interspersed with numerous bunches of jonquils and yellow tulips. At the ends of the room were alcoves banked with palms of fine stature and handsome ferns. The table was decorated with smilax, Perle roses and yellow tulips. Among the vines of the ceiling and walls were incandescent electric lights of varying colors and degrees of intensity, and the color effects were frequently changed by the manipulation of a skilled electrician.

The valentine luncheon decorations described in your last Baltimore notes were also by Mr. Halliday in the same handsome residence, which by its size and appointment lends itself to large and handsome treatment.

Another recent noteworthy event was a reception by Mr. G. W. Gail. The decorations were by Miss Matilda Held, whose taste is everywhere recognized. A feature was a floral bower in which reposed about a hundred bouquets of the finest flowers, one of which went to each lady guest.

Still another handsome, arranged-for function was the Riggs ball at Lehman's Hall. Here the Black Bros. had charge, giving great satisfaction by their beautiful disposition of vines, plants, flowers and lights.

Mrs. J. A. Craig, of Govanstown, who has had considerable glass under which she raised flowers for commercial purposes, has leased her plant to Thos. Stevenson & Bro., who will carry it on for their own account. Mr. Stevenson is one of the bright young men in the trade here, of whom it will be risking little to predict success. He has skill, energy and brains, and has had good training under Isaac H. Moss, with whom he has long worked faithfully. B.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The supply has enlarged considerably and demand shrunk some so that prices are decidedly easier, especially on roses. The best Beauties are down to $4.00 a dozen and the shorter lengths in proportion, though the medium lengths are holding up in price better than the others. The best Brides and Maids do not now reach above $8.00 per 100, but the greatest weakness is in the poorest grades in which clean up sales have been made occasionally at prices considerably below our lowest quotations. Very fair stock can be had at $5 and $6. The supply of red roses shows no material increase, however, and there are none too many of good quality.

Carnations are also lower in price than last week, but are holding up rather better than roses. Whites still have the best of it. Outside of good Prosperity, which bring $6.00, the fancy colored sorts range from $3.00 to $4.00, with common colored at $1.50 to $2.50, and occasional clean up sales at as low as $1.00. Fancy whites sell at $3.00 to $4.00, while common whites range from $2.00 to $2.50. Any good white will command $2.00.

In other stock the changes are slight. Bulbous flowers are abundant but not a glut. Smilax continues rather short of demand.

Items.

Mr. B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor during the week and reports large sales of their two-toned crepe paper and also of general florists' supplies.

Peter Reinberg has purchased 4½ acres of land across the street from his residence and will build a large range of new glass on same.

Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., was a visitor this week, as were also J. Louis Loose, Washington, D. C., and A. N. Kinsman, Austin, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Bassett are on their way home from the Pacific coast and were recently at Salt Lake City.

Mr. C. W. McKellar is expected home from New Orleans shortly.

John Zeck has a "new boy" at his house.

Mr. C. L. Brunson, Paducah, Ky., was a visitor on Wednesday.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The supply of stock is equal to the demand, but is not so heavy now as it was the first of last week. The supply of roses at present is equal to the demand, with the exception of select stock. There is an abundance of short and weak stemmed stock. There are more Beauties to be had now than for some time past, and the quality is fairly good. Brides and Bridesmaids are both in good supply. Golden Gates are coming in more plentifully and are of very good quality. Meteors and Liberties are not equal to the demand.

Carnations, except the poorer grades, are short in supply and bring good prices. Many more fancy ones could be sold. The demand for white is very large and cannot be met.

Bulbous stock is still doing very nicely. Harrisii lilies and callas are of very good quality and sell quickly. Daffodils and jonquils have dropped in price, but large quantities of them are being disposed of.

Violets, which were a glut the first of last week, are now somewhat scarce, and the price is mounting again. Some nice sweet peas are to be seen and they sell quickly.

So far Lent has scarcely made itself felt on the wholesale market, but some of the retail stores are complaining. Business, on the whole, is very good and we have no reason for complaint.

Notes.

The Florists' Club entertainment committee has decided to give a progressive euchre party on Thursday evening, March 26, at the club rooms of the society and playing will begin at 8 p. m. There will be fine prizes, music and refreshments. Tickets will be out by Saturday of this week, and every one who can possibly do so is requested to make arrangements to be present, as a great time is going to be had.

E. G. Gillett was in Dayton, Ohio, during the past week.

The next meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, which takes place March 14, will be a special exhibition of carnations. Some very good prizes are offered and a first-class show is anticipated. Besides carnations, there is a prize for best display of violets; also one for best general display.

Visitors were: Mr. Buseck, of New York; Chas. Weltz, of Wilmington, Ohio; H. H. Ritter, of Dayton, Ohio.

ST. PAUL.

Trade and Personal Notes.

Trade is improving daily and has nearly reached the flood tide of its history here. Flowers have been scarce all winter, but they have sold at good prices and everything salable has been disposed of.

Bulbous stock is now coming into bloom quite freely and sells at better prices than for several years. Daffodils and tulips are worth 3 to 4 cents at wholesale and are in good demand. This is gratifying to the smaller growers, as many of them have not been cutting any other flowers for many weeks.

Carl Petersen, who built some houses on Stryker avenue last summer, has justly earned the title of the Hyacinth King, as for six weeks past he has been bringing in extra fine Dutch hyacinths with spikes 15 to 18 inches long, heavily loaded with good blooms.

Since my last report we have had many visitors which it might be well to record here: Chas. Schwake, with C. F. Meyer; Ralph Ward, of Wm. Hagemann & Co.; Mr. Wade, traveling for Aug. Rhotert; W. G. Schuecht, representing Holton & Hunkel; H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg; Mr. Graver, of Shotwell & Graver, Fargo, N. D.; D. Wood Brant, of Meteor fame and Forest Glen, Ill., and John Nilson, of the State Reformatory Greenhouses, St. Cloud, Minn.

E. F. Lemke's stock is rounding into shape again after being badly frozen at Christmas.

Fred Franke has some sweet peas that will soon furnish an abundance of blooms. His violets are not in good shape, due no doubt to lack of sunshine. His carnations are in good shape, however, and will throw an abundance of blooms from now on.

Henry Puvogel is growing some very nice primroses, cyclamen, asparagus, etc.

W. Strehlow is growing the best violets in town and all the other boys are wondering how he does it.

Mr. Whatton, gardener for R. Schiffmann, our local orchid king, has a fine lot of cattleyas now coming into bloom. At the time of my call he also had some fine specimen Coelogyne cristata, Laelia anceps and phalaenopsis. The latter, he thinks, should become popular.

W. has had a wide and varied experience in growing orchids, both in England and America, and is good authority on them. Dr. Schiffmann and family are en route to Manila on a trip around the world occupying five or six months.

A. Hallstrom, florist for J. J. Hill, has such a variety of good things that it would be useless for me to attempt to describe them all. He grows cut flowers and blooming plants at all seasons, spring bedding stock for the lawn, grapes, tomatoes, cucumbers, lettuce, radishes, etc., under glass, as well as palms, ferns, rubbers, auracarias, etc., for general decorating. Everything is well grown, while the houses are models of neatness. His orchids are in fine shape at present. X. Y. Z.

ST. LOUIS.

Market Conditions.

In bulb stuff almost every variety is selling well. Even valley, which has been slow, has extra call. Smilax, asparagus, adiantum, galax and common ferns are all selling well at the usual prices.

The growers are busy now preparing their Easter stock. The Beyer boys have a fine lot of azaleas and plenty of bulbous plants for Easter. Sanders, Windler and Schray are also well stocked up with this kind of stock.

Roses the past week were more plentiful, which pleased the buyers very much. A slight drop in the price was also a noticeable feature, but as yet there is no troublesome overstock.

Violets have held their own the past week. Although abundant, they sold well, and the stock offered was of fine quality and good color. The fakirs buy those that are left over in 1,000 lots very cheap. The few warm days we had they were selling them on the street corners at 5 and 10 cents per bunch.

Carnations were quite plentiful and of good quality. The price is still up on them and on Saturday they were selling as high as 4 and 5 cents for anything that looked good, and only the rankest kind sold for less.

The month just ended was a good one for both the retailer and wholesaler. Flowers of all kinds were extremely scarce during the entire month, and shippers to this market obtained good prices for all of their consignments and very little went to waste. The commission men report an increased shipping demand.

Notes.

Mr. Ralph Ward, representing Hagemann & Co., New York, spent Saturday and Sunday with us. Mr. Ward visited the World's Fair grounds and was much surprised at the progress made.

Visitors: Joe Rolker, of New York, and Dan MacRorie, of Orange, N. J.

Fred H. Weber, late with Geo. M. Kellogg, Kansas City, and formerly with his uncle, F. C. Weber, will open a retail store with greenhouse at Boyle and Maryland avenues early in April.

The Bentzen Floral Co., on Marcus avenue, have a fine lot of cinerarias in bloom, which are having a good sale.

President Dunford, of the Florists' Club, is back from his three weeks' visit in Florida and is making preparations for an interesting meeting of the club, which is to be held next week Thursday, March 12. Mr. Dunford has prepared a paper on what he saw in Florida in the way of floriculture. This along with the essays of Max Herzog and Otto Koenig, will make this meeting worth your while to attend. J. J. B.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The florists in general did a big business up until the beginning of Lent, but the small drop since Lent does not seem to affect them very much. Stuff of all kinds has been keeping scarce, which of course means no drop in price. All tea roses are bringing 12½ cents. Beauties $3 to $8 per dozen. Carnations 3 to 4 cents. Easter lilies are a little scarce and are bringing $1.50 per dozen. Bulbs of every description are very plentiful. Prices range from 2 to 3 cents. At present the Washington market is glutted with southern violets, which sell at from $1.50 to $2.50 per thousand, which gives the street fakirs their usual harvest.

George Cook, who has been with J. H. Small & Sons for the past 18 years, has opened a handsome store on Connecticut avenue. George is well liked by the craft, who wish him lots of success.

Mr. Pfister, who has been in the White House for the past 25 years, has also opened a handsome store on Connecticut avenue and is doing a successful business.

George Schaffer reports good business at his uptown branch.

William Gude reports business very good, and he has been a very good business man, but he has some time to play with his little bouncing boy. (A new one.)

The Washington Florists' Club has of late been very active. They also have made up their minds to enter the bowling contest at Milwaukee next August. They have engaged two fine alleys every Wednesday night. The following is the bowling score for three games:

PITTSBURG.

The first week of Lent had quite an effect on this market. The demand for cut flowers dropped off considerably, causing some decline in prices on the shorter stemmed roses. On fancy and special grades prices have not changed.

Carnations are now arriving in larger quantities, which caused a drop in prices. The fancy sorts are down to 4 cents for the choicest. White carnations are still scarce. American Beauties are being received in larger quantities. In bulb stock the supply of tulips, hyacinths, daffodils, etc., is very heavy and selling slowly. The quality of tulips and daffodils was never better; prices range from 3 to 4 cents, according to quality.

Green stock remains about the same. Smilax is getting rather scarce. Other kinds are improving daily, and prices are gradually declining.

The big flood which swept the three rivers last Saturday night and Sunday caused untold damage. The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., L. J. Neff and Mrs. E. A. Williams were among those who were unfortunate enough to get water in their cellars. The only damage resulting therefrom being the dampness, as the warning had been taken advantage of and all goods removed.

J. W. Ludwig is in New York looking up Easter novelties.

The Market.

California has at last got back her usual climate, which I was afraid, a week or so ago, had disappeared entirely.

Temperature this February 26th morning at 8 a. m., 54 degrees, at noon 65 degrees and at 5 p. m. 60 degrees. How is that for wintry weather? As a consequence bulbous stock and violets are coming in with a rush.

Narcissus paper white are about gone, and daffodils are at the heighth of their season. The single trumpet major is the only good seller and brings about $1.25 per 100 wholesale.

Freesias are plentiful and average about $1 per 100. Tulips, principally Belle Alliance and Kaiserskroon are very plentiful and cheap. Valley is only in moderate supply. Easter lilies hold their own as to price. Carnations are a shade cheaper, but roses have not changed the past week but the quality is somewhat better. Good Beauties are in short supply, although Brides, Maids, Testout and Liberty are improving, both as to color and length of stem.

Business for the past week has been fair. A goodly assortment of funerals and weddings have kept the retailers from getting into mischief.

It is only a question of a few weeks until flowers get "way down" in price. Our spring time begins about two months earlier than it does in the eastern states and by the first of April outside roses make their appearance in large quantities; lilacs and the various annuals follow soon afterwards and for a few months flowers can be had almost for the asking.

Notes.

The old established Eddy street florist has been succeeded by Domini & Co., well known dealers here.

The Shanahan Floral Co. has one of the most attractive windows in town. Their display of long-stemmed roses and fancy carnations is a sight worth seeing.

Mr. Nick, the well known florist of Oakland, has had to remove his large greenhouse from the property he has occupied on Broadway. A large building is to be erected on the site which has been purchased by the Realty Syndicate.

Mr. Martin, of the firm of Martin & Forbes, has been spending several days in town. He reports business booming in Portland, Ore.

H. H. Stegman has taken charge of the greenhouses of Gill's Floral Depot situated on Twenty-eighth street, Oakland. Mr. Stegman is a very successful grower and a good plantsman and as a propagator is hard to beat.

Sievers & Boland have a splendid show of azaleas in full bloom in their windows. They are fine specimen plants.

One of the most successful growers in the vicinity of San Francisco is Mr. A. Galloway, of Fruitvale. He makes a specialty of carnations and has splendid results with Lawson, Estelle and Triumph. His flowers bring top prices throughout the season.

W. W. Saunders, well known as a bulb grower, was committed to the Napa Insane Asylum this week. Mr. Saunders had a large bulb nursery at Golden Gate, Cal., where he grew callas and narcissi very extensively, both for the California and eastern market. His dementia was supposed to be brought about by business worry, although he has been in poor health for a long time. He leaves a wife, but no family. G.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

At the meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, held January 29, the executive committee reported in favor of offering prizes for chrysanthemums to be competed for at the next fall exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, to be held in New York City: For 25 distinct varieties of cut blooms, 1st prize, $15; 2nd prize, $10; for 12 distinct varieties of cut blooms, 1st prize, $10; 2nd prize, $5. It was recommended that all local societies be asked to offer similar prizes and to compete for the same, and that the society offer a sweepstake prize to the local society making the best exhibit in competition for its own prizes, and those in other exhibits from other societies not to count in competition for such sweepstake prize.

The following were proposed for active memberhip: W. F. Connell, John B. Sackett and George H. Martin. A prize box of cigars will be given for the best exhibit of flowers from bulbous stock shown at the February meeting. November 5 and 6, 1903, was fixed for next annual flower show.

PIPING.

How many 1¼-inch pipe will it take to heat two houses, one house 24x150, the other 20x150? Walls are 5 feet 6 inches. Steam to be used. And what is the best method for piping the same? Temperature to be 52 when it is zero weather. Will also have to use steam trap, as I cannot lower boiler enough to return into the same. J. S.

In reply to J. S. for the heating of the two greenhouses, he describes, by steam, he will require in the 24-foot house two lines of 2-inch overhead mains grading down-hill from the boiler end, returning through seven lines of 1¼-inch pipes below the benches; in the 20-foot house two lines of 2-inch overhead mains and six lines of 1¼-inch returns below the benches. This is assuming that there is no side glass, of which he makes no mention. If there is glass on the side walls, he should add one 1¼-inch return for about each 3 feet of glass.

A CORRECTION.

Mr. Editor: In a recent number of the Review I gave the formula for the way I have used hydrocyanic acid gas, but unfortunately I carelessly wrote "1 gallon of water and 1 gallon of sulphuric acid to 5 ounces of cyanide." It should, of course, read "quarts," not "gallons." I have given this formula many times by correspondence and hope I have never made the same careless mistake. I think not, for I have heard from a few good gardeners that it did the work admirably. William Scott.

Franklin, Mass.—The Continental Nurseries have been established here with connections at Veendam, Holland. Mr. A. Van Leeuwen, Jr., formerly with the Crompton estate, Worcester, Mass., is manager. The nurseries will import, grow and deal in choice shade, fruit and ornamental trees, shrubs, roses, conifers, herbaceous plants and bulbs.

Passaic, N. J.—The store of W. L. Hundertmark, the florist, was destroyed by fire Feb. 19. The loss is estimated at $1,200. He carried insurance amounting to $600. Mr. Hundertmark has the sympathy of many friends in the loss he has sustained.

I am delighted with the Review.—Wm. C. Steele, Alvin, Tex.

Seed Trade News.

Philadelphia.—The mail branch of the seed business has been very good. Burpee and Moore & Simon have been unusually busy. The latter firm reports this branch of its trade over 100 per cent ahead of last year. The increased mail business seems to indicate that seed planters are not patronizing the country store as much as formerly. This manifestly benefits both the planter and the seed store. The planter gets better seed and the seed store better profits. Sugar corn is the great perplexing problem: to supply 5 per cent of the demand is out of the question. Those who order by mail are supplied with a pint or quart instead of pecks or half bushels ordered. The customer is charged 40 cents for the quart sent and the remainder of the remittance is returned to sender. Sugar corn is now selling for 50 cents per quart over the counter and no one is sold more than a quart of seed. All lines of seed are going at good prices, even onion seed, which at the beginning of the season promised to be a drug. The help question is also a very serious one; experienced and competent clerks are simply not to be had, no matter how large the salary offered. The industrious and persevering youth with an object in life and willing to work seems to have become almost extinct. The right kind of material in this line does not seem to present itself to the seed trade to be moulded into desirable help.

Louisville, Ky.—Wood, Stubbs & Co., report that orders for seeds have been good in all lines. The garden seed trade, owing to the backward season, has been somewhat delayed, but demand is good, and the business is ahead of last year. Field seeds have been particularly active, and although prices on clover and orchard grass have been considerably higher than for years, there has been equally as good a demand for clover and a better trade for orchard grass than is usually experienced. Onion sets have been very low all the season. The largest crop in the history of Louisville was harvested this year, and more sets are grown in this neighborhood than in any other section of the United States. The present price charged by dealers is about 55c to 70c per bu. for yellows, and $1.40 per bu. for whites. Yellow potato onion sets $4.00 per 100 lbs. In the vicinity of Louisville a large quantity of onion seed is grown, and this seed is preferred by growers to that grown at any other point, because the sets keep better than from California grown or imported stock. The prices this year on onion seed are very low.

Dallas, Tex.—The seed trade in Texas so far this season has been the very best during our experience in the business, our January trade being far ahead of any previous year, and especially the catalogue trade. The demand for seed corn is so great that it is next to impossible to supply it. There is also a strong and growing demand for alfalfa, which is becoming very generally used here. Owing to the great number of truck growers' associations being formed, there is an unusually good demand for tomato and melon seeds, and for seeds of such vegetables as can be canned and shipped. On the whole, we would say that the seed trade for the season is perfectly satisfactory, and prospects for a good crop this year are bright.—Texas Seed & Floral Co.

It has been decided by the United States general appraisers at New York, under date of February 10, 1903, that the term "seed pease" in paragraph 250, tariff act of 1897, and on which the rate is 40 cents per bushel, does not apply to the Canadian field pea sometimes called "Canadian Beauty" pea, which is more generally used for raising ensilage and forage for cattle and manufacturing split peas for soup, and that this Canadian field pea when in a dried state is dutiable at 30 cents per bushel as "pease, dried, not specially provided for."

New Haven, Conn.—Frank S. Platt says that some of the local growers of sweet corn for seed who had their crops contracted for, or delivered, early are now breathing brimstone over the system that holds them to their obligations. The demand is such on a few short items that dealers are also at their wits' ends to satisfy large buyers on a general order. Substitution will necessarily be resorted to, as the seed sales for 1903 will undoubtedly be greater than those of any recent year. The outlook for trade, both present and future, is exceedingly bright for the farmer as well as for the merchant.

St. Paul.—Foreign shipments are still arriving and will probably not all get here before March 20 to 25. They are from three to six weeks later than usual. The railroad congestion and scarcity of cars are delaying shipments, causing an endless amount of worry and loss. E. M. Parmelee, of the John H. Allan Seed Co., was a recent caller on the trade.

Galva, O.—L. Templin & Sons report that trade is opening up very satisfactorily, averaging fully fifty per cent above same date last season. This, however, may partly be attributed to a special discount they offer on early orders. From present outlook they will not be able to supply the demand, particularly on sweet corn, cucumbers, and a few other items which are difficult to procure.

New York.—Henry Nungesser & Co. are in receipt of two carloads of Turkestan alfalfa, which they bought direct from the growing districts in Asia. The demand for this seed is growing rapidly in America.

Chicago seedsmen report good early orders from the wholesale trade, and indications favorable for heavy sales this season.

The advance guard of the Holland bulb salesmen have appeared. Some intend to go as far west as California.

Judging from the advs. in the magazines the fair sex is taking secure hold of the seed business in Minneapolis.

Mr. Arnold Ringier, representing W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago, is now on the Pacific coast.

Decatur, Ill.—The Suffern Seed Co. announces that it has over 100,000 bushels of seed corn to offer to the trade.

Chicago.—Edgar F. Ball, representing E. J. Bowen, San Francisco, was a recent visitor.

Mr. Henry, of Henry & Lee, New York, visited Chicago this week.

TORONTO.

Lent has shown its effect upon the demand for cut flowers during the last few days, especially as bulb stock has accumulated. In fact everything seems to be increasing in supply and the prices are dropping in most lines. Roses are now quoted at 12 and 6 cents, violets at anything from 25 cents to $1 per hundred, and bulb stock 1½ to 3 cents for tulips and 2 to 2½ cents for daffodils.

A change of business has been effected during the last couple of days. Mr. Fred C. W. Brown, 506 Queen street, has sold out to Mr. J. S. Simmons, who has opened a stand on Queen street. This store when owned by Mr. Chas. Arnold was the best paying stand in Toronto, but during the last couple of years has been allowed to run down considerably. We understand Mr. Simmons' brother-in-law is to take charge and we expect a first-class store will be established there. D. J. S.

BUTTE, MONT.

The demand for funeral flowers continues brisk and all stock is well cleaned up. In addition to heavy calls of this character in this city there was a large funeral recently in Helena that took every flower that could be rustled.

The decoration at the recent reception of the Elks in this city was one of the most elaborate ever seen here. It included a canopy of fir trees, containing 4,000 square feet, with 300 Japanese lanterns, containing electric lights, hanging from the branches. It also required 200 pounds of Southern smilax and 200 palm leaves, the latter being used on the walls. At one end of the hall was a belfry made of Pennsylvania log moss, with transparent clock dials indicating the mystic hour of 11, and the chimes of immortelles with electric effect was fine. At the other end of the hall was an old fashioned fire place, with an old camp kettle and a log fire with red lights. At 11 o'clock a bell under the tower struck 11 and all the lights were turned out except those in the tower, the whole assemblage counting the hour with the bell. It was a very beautiful and striking effect. Thousands of yards of bunting were used in addition to other material, and it took two days and two nights to put it up. Mr. O. A. C. Oehmler, of the Butte Floral Co., had charge of the decoration.

The Montana Florists' Club had a meeting on February 21. After a ride up the mountain for half an hour we arrived at the snow covered Columbia Gardens. Butte's only resort in the "good old summer time." Nearly all of the members were present. Mr. Siegel received the boys in royal style and the meeting was held in the potting shed, which had been especially prepared for the occasion. After the routine business was disposed of a sumptuous lunch was served. Arrangements were made to establish a question box at the next meeting. A stag dance was a feature of the programme the boys representing ladies having a piece of raffia tied to their arms. Several square dances and a Virginia reel were danced. Mr. Hanson did the cake walk and was coached by Mike, the greenhouse parrot, after which a few toasts were given.

The club tendered a vote of thanks to Mr. Siegel for the good things provided, and he made a suitable response. All the boys expressed their regret that the club had not been organized a long time ago. The president in a few words expressed the best wishes of the club for the success of Messrs. Conners and Johnston in their new venture and regretted that the club will lose two such bright members from its rolls. After three rousing cheers for Mr. Siegel the club adjourned to meet on March 14.

Mr. Arnold Ringier, representing W. W. Barnard & Co., of Chicago, was a recent visitor. RAMBLER.

NEWARK, N. J.—One of the greenhouses of Henry Rudolph on Roseland avenue, Essex Fells, was destroyed by fire the night of February 9. The loss was heavy.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

If you have the right varieties. You don't want too many of the very early ones. You want the large, fine blooms of the second earlies. I have watched the market carefully for several years and found that it is there where you make your money in mums—to have the right varieties—those that come in at the right time.
In yellow there is nothing better than MONROVIA and ROBT. HALLIDAY. The first is a few days or a week earlier, but the latter is the best bloom. They are both money-makers when grown right. I also have a white sport of Glory of Pacific. It is a large and better flower than its parent and I have grown it for my own use for three years, and it is the best second early white I know of. The only trouble is that I have not made enough fuss about it or given it a fancy name. I have a large stock of the three above varieties—fine, sturdy, cool-grown stock from 2 and 2½-in. pots, ready to ship. You can get many cuttings from each plant if you buy now and keep propagating. Also a few Appleton, Eaton, Bonnaffon, etc. All at $4.00 per 100. No better stock in the market.
GUNNAR TEILMANN, Marion, Ind.

CROMWELL, CONN.

With the coming of Lent there has been a slight falling off in the demand for cut flowers in this section of the country, but we do not anticipate a very serious lack of demand. Just at present cattleyas are in their prime and they are moving very well indeed.

Grafting roses is being rushed and a few weeks will bring it to an end. The mark has reached 80,000 but there still remain 55,000 to be grafted.

The call for carnation stock has been very heavy this year and all indications point to a good demand for field grown stock. Queen Louise and Estelle have been favorites, which shows the well deserved appreciation of the former and is a tribute to the color of the latter.

The Yellow Eaton chrysanthemum from the order list, seems to be much sought for and it will be widely grown this coming fall. For size and color it is all that could be desired but the form of the Yellow Eaton, which is an excellent counterpart of Timothy Eaton, is open to improvement.

Not as many palms will be grown the coming year and a large stock of kentias is being very rapidly sold out, the orders being booked for spring delivery. This is done to make room for Adiantum Farleyense and other ferns.

Several from here attended the carnation exhibition in Brooklyn.

Among the recent visitors were: E. J. Taylor, Southport, Conn.; R. G. Hanford, Norwalk, Conn.; F. H. Mitchell, Waterville, Me.; Leonard Vaughan, Chicago; Ed. Welch, Hartford, Conn.

W. R. Pierson.

Salem, O.—Miss Ella C. Bonsall, daughter of Joseph E. Bonsall, the florist, was married February 12 to Mr. Lee R. Chamberlain, of Charleston, W. Va., at the home of her parents in this city.

Columbus, O.—Anton Brigel, the florist, died of cancer of the stomach Feb. 25. He was born in Baden in 1842 and came to this city in 1883. He is survived by a widow, three sons and two daughters.

RAMBLINGS.

On the way to the carnation convention I looked in on A. H. Woeppel, at Corning, N. Y., who showed me a house of Queen Louise in bloom that equalled anything I saw at Brooklyn—healthy, vigorous stock, early and continuous bloomer. Lawson also was very fine.

W. A. Wettlin, at Hornellsville, was rushed with orders for funeral work, and was one of the unfortunate ones who could not be spared from home.

H. N. Hoffman has shaken the dust (or snow) from his feet at Elmira and headed eastward. A peep into his houses disclosed Lawson, Estelle, White Cloud—the leaders in their class—fine stock that has done remarkably well through the winter. The Marie Louise violet is well grown here.

John Rudy, the genial gardener to the Hon. J. Sloate Fassett, was busy packing his fine scarlet seedling for exhibition. I saw John later on and he remarked: "Wait until Flamingo has flown, or rather been distributed, before I present my candidate."

Grove P. Rawson was prevented by a severe cold from being with the crowd. He does not know what he missed by not being present, but will doubtless read with interest the report as published in your enterprising medium. His stock looked promising. He claims that if Cressbrook is grown similarly to Lawson it will be a success here. Floriana is not a success here. Plant Marquis early and grow it naturally. Prosperity is of equal value with roses. Lillian Pond is a sterling variety. In roses Wootton is preferred to Liberty. It is very free and sells well.

Mrs. M. L. Barnes, of Binghamton, reported excellent business and expressed great interest in the convention, which turned out such a grand success.

Returning homeward, I stopped off at Albany and found Fred Danker rushed with funeral work. He was well satisfied with his visit to Brooklyn.

H. G. Eyres was prevented at the last moment from attending by a large funeral order which kept his force busy for two days.

I met T. J. Totten, of Saratoga, who stopped off on his way home from Cuba, where he had been to recuperate. He says he would not have missed the convention for a great deal. W. M.

REPLY TO A READER.

In reply to A Reader will say that white or burr oak would make good greenhouse rafters if strictly clear; but to get it clear would probably cost more than pine or cypress. A small knot in oak will cause it to warp or twist, while a knot of the same size in the other woods would have little effect. Have had both greenhouse and mill training and speak from experience.

CLEVELAND.

A visit to the establishment of Smith & Son, on Wade Park avenue, showed everything to be in fine order. His carnations are in excellent condition, especially the new seedling, which they have named Magdalene. They have prospects for a good crop for Easter.

G. M. Naumann also has a seedling carnation, which he has named Louise Naumann. He does not claim any honors for it as an exhibition variety, but it is certainly a good producer and should have a future as a commercial sort. Mr. Naumann's stock is in fine condition, especially his house of violets, which is fairly blue with flowers, and I was informed that this is the chronic condition of the house.

F. W. Griffin reports an unprecedented call for flowers for valentines and as he was not prepared for it, he was all sold out early in the day and had to do some tall hustling to supply his customers. Tenep.

CHICOPEE FALLS, MASS.

As spring approaches the coal situation also improves. There is coal enough to be had now at $10 per ton and prospect of lower prices soon. On account of the short supply of coal through the winter carnations and other cut flowers have been scarce and higher in price than usual.

The old Boston & Albany Greenhouses, on Liberty street, Springfield, which were discontinued in the fall, have been sold and will be removed.

Snow's old greenhouses, at Chicopee Center, which have been run by William Paul, the florist, for the past year or two, will be sold this spring, it is thought, to make room for a dwelling house.

Murphy, the florist, who had a store on Main street, Springfield, failed some time since and was closed for a time, but has opened up again at the same place.

TOUGHKENAMON, Chester Co., Pa., Dec. 29, 1902
MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.
Yours very truly, ROBERT C. BANCROFT

WEDDING DECORATION.

The accompanying engraving shows part of the decorations for a wedding arranged by Alexander McConnell, New York. The picture shows part of the room where the ceremony took place, and as will be seen, an aisle was defined by rose trees in baskets connected by ribbon. Though every room in the mansion was made into a floral bower, not a nail was used in the work, all the flowers and vines being held in place by wire frames so placed and covered as to be invisible. Huge panels of Bride roses almost covered the walls of the room seen in the picture and the other rooms were decorated with Beauties, Bridesmaids and cattleyas. Over 20,000 lily of the valley were used and roses innumerable.

The floral effects were unusually profuse at this wedding and Mr. McConnell had twenty-five men employed on them for seventy-two hours in order to complete them on time. It is in such affairs that the florist leads a strenuous life with a capital S. The cost of this decoration ran up into the thousands and the bill was settled by a man whose name is known from one end of the land to the other.

CONVENTION REFLECTIONS.

Notes on the recent carnation convention may seem rather late at this time, but lack of time, owing to business matters demanding attention, have caused delay in carrying out my original intention.

Messrs. Scott and Baur have covered the field very thoroughly, leaving me but little to say in reference to each variety, so I shall deal only with those few which impressed me as viewed from a commercial or bread and butter standpoint, touching first on a few points upon which I have taken time for reflection.

In conversation with several growers it seemed to be a general opinion that some plan should be adopted whereby varieties could be judged at different times during the season. This could be easily accomplished by having several committees in as many cities or locations near the great carnation centers and near enough to personally visit the originator's place without incurring any great expense, and what is the expense compared to what has already been practically thrown away on useless varieties and what may perhaps take the same course.

I venture to say that very few members of the A. C. S. would object to paying an extra dollar dues in order that such committees could be set at work, and what introducer who had a new variety of decided merit would not welcome such a committee. One cannot possibly judge as to the all season behavior of a variety by seeing it at the convention show alone. Mr. Baur in last week's issue refers to this subject in well chosen words.

Among the notes of Mr. Pierson in the Exchange regret is expressed in not seeing how well our standards can be grown. I think this is a point well taken and I must admit my surprise in not seeing more of this class at Brooklyn. It would certainly furnish an excellent chance for the average grower to see what could be done with his acquaintances when he would go home either filled with enthusiasm at his success or with renewed determination to produce the equal of those seen. In making up the schedule for next year's exhibition, would it not be advisable to create classes embracing standard varieties sent out within two or three years, making a separate class for each color?

The practice of originators of new varieties in offering prizes for the best vases of kinds sent out by them is to be commended, and it is hoped there will be more special prizes offered next year than ever.

Now as to the varieties shown and their appearance to me commercially. In my opinion the two best whites were Albatross and Lady Bountiful.

From what I have seen and know of its behavior Enchantress leads in its color.

For a true pink Nelson still holds the high position I have always given it. The vase of 100 on exhibition only confirmed my opinion.

With all the aspirants for a place ahead of Lawson I saw none that to my idea equal it. Some time will elapse before Lawson will be a "has been."

Flamingo was an easy winner in the scarlet class. Will some one please tell us why Adonis was not shown in better form? I do not think all this boom of Adonis last year was a bubble.

For an all around crimson, if you have Gov. Roosevelt hold on to it; if you have it not and need one invest in the Gov.

In yellow there is nothing yet to compare with Eldorado when well done. Dorothy Whitney is a close second, and would be preferred by some retailers.

Those who can grow Bradt had better let well enough alone. Mrs. M. A. Patten is said to be an easier doer. Prosperity you all know is in a class by itself.

Had those which were frozen or cooked in transit arrived in good condition some changes no doubt would have occurred.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Propagating.

Most growers have all their carnations rooted by this time but there are always a few varieties that we are short of and we keep on propagating them just as long as we can, even though we may be a little late in getting them set out in the field. You will not find it so easy to root the cuttings from now on, nor can you count on as large a percentage striking roots as you could during the last four months. It is a poor propagator who cannot root very near 100 per cent of carnation cuttings during January and February, but he is an extra good propagator who can root over 90 per cent of most varieties during March and April. The weather is not favorable during these months as a rule, and it keeps one busy trying to regulate things to suit the cuttings. Long damp spells are often followed by very warm, bright days, and that is when your judgment will be taxed to its utmost. The natural impulse on seeing the cuttings wilt will be to spray them overhead and to repeat it often, and too often this is done to excess. Almost before you will know it you will see them begin to damp off or you will see a lot of rust break out all over the leaves as a result of being wet over night, etc. While a spraying will occasionally save a batch of cuttings from wilting in case they are suddenly exposed to trying conditions, yet it does not suffice when those conditions prevail for an extended period of time.

Your efforts should be directed toward keeping the house as near the winter temperature as you can without causing any considerable draughts. Shade the glass from outside with a coat of lime wash, or if it is your regular propagating house or bench you can use something more permanent, such as white lead and naphtha or some such preparation. A house shaded from the outside will keep cooler than if you spread canvas on the inside, but in case of extra warm bright spells you can use both to advantage. Always give plenty of water in the sand, but don't overdo the overhead spraying. Once or twice a day will be enough usually and be sure they are not left wet over night. Keep the walks and under the benches dampened down to help keep the atmosphere moist. Try to take the cuttings off the plants either in the evening or early in the morning before the sun has any strength; they will be fresher and stand up better in the sand. Also take heel cuttings as much as you can; they will root quicker and surer.

Young Stock.

Those cuttings that you planted in flats or on the bench should be potted up now unless you intend to leave them there until you plant them out. It will take them about six weeks to become thoroughly established in the pots. Use 2½ or 3-inch pots, according to the size of the young plants. You surely have a bench or two or at least a few varieties that will not bring you in very much more this season and it will pay you to throw them out and give your young stock plenty of room to make fine plants. Those that you take from the sand from now on can go right into 2-inch pots, where they will do first-rate until planting out time. A good light bench with plenty of sunlight is, of course, essential in producing a good plant. You want a slow, stocky growth, which can be had only in a cool, light house. The glass over these young plants should never have the least bit of shade on it.

Topping.

Look right after the topping, as on this also depends very largely whether you will have well shaped plants or not. As I have said before some varieties need only to be topped once, while others must be topped every time they make two or three pairs of blades.

If you have bought new varieties you should find out from the originator what is required in this respect, and be sure that you watch them closely and follow his advice as he knows the variety better than you do. A. F. J. Baur.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Feeding.

Your blooming plants will be growing rapidly at this time and with Easter but four weeks away, every attention must be given the plants that they may continue to yield high grade blooms.

This is particularly desirable, as after this greatest of all harvest times (Easter) the law of supply and demand has the effect of lowering prices; then, too, flowering plants will be much in evidence Easter week, consequently only first-class cut blooms will move at satisfactory prices. We cannot afford to allow our plants to observe Lent, at least in the way of denying them anything in the way of needed food.

My notes of January 15 set forth the method followed here in the matter of using liquid manure. A top dressing, as described October 16, may perhaps suit the purpose in the case of those who cannot use liquid handily.

Speaking of liquid manure, I noticed in notes of Mr. Scott that he expressed the opinion that change of diet as advocated by some writers was a fallacy. Literally speaking "change of or varied diet" is a misleading expression as applied to the feeding of plants. As applied to man it may be a correct expression to use and the change of benefit to the human race, but as our good friend wrote in his notes of Dec. 17, 1903, "what's the use of drawing an analogy between the vegetable and animal kingdom? They more likely started from the same mysterious germs."

But I am straying from the subject. Mr. Scott is perfectly right in believing the so-called change of diet a fallacy, as it is inconceivable. Plants are today subsisting on the same old diet, but we are learning more about the order in which plants desire to have them placed before them. I will try to explain what I, at least, meant to imply in using the expression.

Authorities tell us that potash, nitrogen and phosphorus are absolutely indispensable to plant life, and I think ammonia is a valuable adjunct. Bone meal is almost a complete manure, as are also wood ashes, if properly treated before used. Neither horse, cow, hen or sheep manure contain all the necessary elements in the right proportion, neither does any one of them always contain the same fertilizing properties in the same proportion, much depending on the variation in food of the animal at different seasons of the year.

If we could mix a certain number and quantity of these incomplete manures with our soil in the exact proportion needed to meet the requirements of our plants, a step in advance might be gained as far as knowledge is concerned, though to mix all kinds of manure together at one time would certainly be wrong, as when bone meal and ashes come together there would be a loss of ammonia.

Then, again, we are confronted with the question as to the advisability of putting all these elements at once around the roots, before the plant has become established and its roots eagerly in search of food. Even supposing the plants are well established and the soil contains every element needed in exact proportion, is it not reasonable to suppose that one or more elements will become diminished or exhausted before another?

During the period of growth directly after getting established in the benches at housing time, nitrogen would probably be drawn on more heavily than phosphorus, and in case of the development of quantities of buds into blooms, phosphorus would be more in demand and so on through the list there must be at times more or less need of one or another element. Therefore it would appear that as the proportion of fertilizing elements change, it becomes necessary to add to the soil from time to time what is lacking, thereby maintaining the proper proportion as near as possible.

Here is where keen observation, sound judgment and constant study must be made to know when and what to supply. One time it is an application of liquid sheep or cow manure, then a top dressing of bone meal, followed later by wood ashes, another time liquid horse, cow or sheep, either straight or blended as the case may require. No rule can be laid down; every grower must be the judge of the needs of his bread winners, anticipating each want by knowledge of what the plants have been and are doing as regards quality and quantity of bloom, strength of stem, brilliancy of color, etc.

He should govern himself accordingly in his operations of feeding, so called, for here is a term perhaps used too much in reference to the employment of liquid food when in reality we feed our plants when we give them good soil enriched with manure and bone meal, or when top dressing or mulching.

As the operation of applying different liquid fertilizers when required might be said to accomplish results similar to the rotation of crops on plots of land, instead of using the term change of diet, I would suggest "Proper rotation of the liquid chemical menu" as being more self-explanatory. DISEASED CARNATIONS.

I send some carnation foliage. Please tell me what disease they are affected with and how to treat them. Three varieties are diseased—a few plants each of Flora Hill, America and an unknown kind, all in different parts of the same bed. The other varieties are not diseased, though those adjacent to these begin to show traces of it. I cannot find any insects on the plants.

J. V. K.

The trouble with your carnation plants is a sour stomach. Up to a couple of years ago we used to call this disease bacteria, but at Baltimore Professor A. Woods, in a paper before the A. C. S., said that those yellow spots do not come from any bacteria or any other disease, but that they were caused by green fly puncturing the leaves. Now the professor may be right, but I am not sure that he is, as my experience with this trouble does not corroborate his theory. I think it is brought on by a weakened constitution, and that may have been brought on in a number of ways. If you give certain varieties too rich a soil you will see those yellow spots, and in some aggravated cases whole yellow leaves in midwinter. If you keep your carnations too wet at the roots you will see the same, and if you begin to feed the carnations before the roots are thoroughly established you will also see the same. As spring comes along and the sun brightens you will notice it gradually disappear, because the sun acts as a tonic and helps the plant to get into growing condition again, when it will be able to take up more moisture and more food. At that time it will require what was too much during the dark days of midwinter.

You should not propagate from those plants, as they are weakened seriously, and the cuttings will most likely show the same disease the next winter. Bear in mind what varieties are showing the disease this season, and next fall don't make the soil quite so rich for those varieties and water more sparingly during the winter months. Sprinkle your beds with lime oftener, say about once each month, and you will find very little trouble along this line.

A. F. J. Baur.

CARNATION ETHEL CROCKER.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph taken Dec. 28 last of a house of carnations at the establishment of G. Van Bochove & Bro., Kalamazoo, Mich., and the bench in the foreground contains Ethel Crocker, which they have grown for the last three years and which they consider one of their best pink varieties.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

In preparing our planting plans due regard should be taken of the requirements of our customers. By carefully studying their wants for a season we can so arrange our plans so that very little space need be wasted.

Different sections of the country have quite divergent tastes in their requirements but growers who have a list of steady customers and knowing their wants can easily adjust their crops so that they can accommodate them at almost any time of the year. In some localities pink roses seem to be more in demand than any other color, while in other localities white seems to be the predominating color all the year around.

While the American Beauty still retains its place in popular favor there are certain times of the year when even at reduced prices it cannot find a ready market. During the past season red roses seem to have been more in favor than usual and those who have been successful with Liberty have had no trouble in disposing of it at good prices.

Nearly every rose grower has given Liberty a trial and many of us two or three, but from what I can gather from my correspondents many have decided to drop it entirely, the usual claim being that the space can be occupied with something more certainly profitable. With the form, color, substance, quality and fragrance of this rose every grower is satisfied but how to grow it to pay is one of the questions which has yet to be decided.

Our old friend, Meteor, which had such a hard struggle to get into favor with the growers, has secured a permanent place in their affections and it will require some variety with more vitality during the winter months than Liberty possesses to oust it from favor.

Unless some radical change in its culture is discovered Liberty stands a poor chance of ever becoming a popular favorite. As the culture of Meteor is so different from that of almost every other rose I will make the successful growing of them the theme of my next article.

Young stock now requires a deal of care, topping and removing all buds before they become too large, and keeping them free of insect pests.

Grafted stock will require to be strictly looked after to see that the tying material does not cut into the bark. It is also well to have each scion supported with a stake, as they are easily displaced by syringing.

Ribes.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Propagation of Stock.

Once again the time is at hand when lengthening days and renewed activity in plant life notify us that it is time we began to propagate our stock for the coming year. It is assumed, gentle reader, that you have been paying some attention to the condition of your stock plants during the winter, that they have been set up on the bench somewhere in a cool house, and are now making a nice lot of young, sturdy cuttings. If this is not the case and the old plants are still resting under the bench, and feebly protesting at such treatment by sending up a few drawn, attenuated shoots, get them into the light without delay and give them a chance to grow. While the chrysanthemum is like charity in that "it suffereth long and is kind," it is not fair to abuse it too much, and then kick because there is no money in it.

Cuttings rooted now can be topped again if intended for general planting, and two or more shoots can be then taken up after the plant breaks. The top will also make a good plant if reasonable care is given it. For exhibition flowers it is not desirable to check the plant by cutting out the top when it begins to grow nicely, but keep it moving along slowly in a cool temperature so that it may develop a sturdy, close-jointed habit of growth.

are coming in daily from the distributers and when ordering these new varieties if they have to travel any distance, it is well to stipulate that they shall be plants from pots rather than rooted cuttings direct from the sand. If you are ordering your stock close at hand it is not of so much importance, perhaps, but a long journey saps the life out of a rooted cutting and it is a long time before it takes hold of the new soil.

It is also a very wrong policy to increase your stock of a new variety to the utmost extent just as soon as you get hold of it. Far better is it if you get a dozen of, say, Marie Liger this year to be content with that dozen; then if the variety suits your needs you can increase to any extent you like the second year. Give the new sorts a decent show and don't hack them all to pieces as soon as they get acclimated. Marie Liger is in nice condition and plainly shows that it is a dwarf grower. Columbia, too, is looking very well. In the Australian class Mrs. Emmerton is apparently the strongest grower.

The trade in new sorts must be brisk for some one, for everybody seems determined to be right in the swim this year and to that end are stocking up extensively on the newest varieties. Undoubtedly the fact that all the local societies are taking up the big show of the Chrysanthemum Society to be held in New York this fall, and giving it financial aid, is responsible for this demand. The members of these societies will make that exhibition a grand success so far as the exhibits go, for they are composed of the best growers on the continent and they realize that to keep ahead they must keep up to date with their varieties.

Brian Boru.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Easter Plants.

By the time these lines will be read it will be just about four weeks to Easter, and I can not think of anything more useful that I can say than to relate my experience with Easter plants.

When giving any time or date for the forcing of bulbs, etc., it does so much depend on the weather. You can do a great deal of forcing with artificial heat, but tulips and other bulbous plants, and even azaleas and lilies, will be more advanced by one bright, sunny, warm day than two days of cold, cloudy weather, however much heat you can give them. Most of us are hoping for bright, mild weather, for it is the kind that suits our most important crops; yet we are sure to have some things that will be early enough, if cold and cloudy, and this is where manipulation comes in.

Crimson Ramblers and H. Roses.

If the former are just about showing their trusses of flowers clear of the foliage they are about right. Syringe them every day until the flowers are out. If you can flower them in a temperature of 55 degrees they will be larger and better colored blossoms than in 60 degrees. Whenever I speak of temperature I always mean the night. You cannot control day temperature so easily, and if the house goes 20 degrees higher in the daytime by sun heat, no harm; and if by fire heat, then 10 degrees higher in daytime is proper, for that would be natural conditions out of doors.

The hybrid perpetual roses should be just showing their buds. If so they will come along in 55 degrees very nicely. Look out for the little green worm which will often destroy the small bud at this time. If you have only a few hundred, a careful watch on them may do; but if you grow thousands, then a sprinkling of hellebore and abstinence from syringing for a few days will "fix" the worm. As the pots of these roses will get well filled with roots, particularly if you grew them last summer in pots, a watering twice a week with liquid manure will help to keep the foliage green and give color to the flower.

Lilies.

The lilies are perhaps the most important plant with the majority of florists, especially in the smaller cities. I must confess to a disappointment in the Japan bulbs. Out of 2,000 obtained from two different firms there is little disease, but half of them are too dwarf. Some of my sanguine employees say: "Oh, they will shoot up before the flower opens." They nearly all have their largest buds from an inch to two inches long, and I consider them all right in a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees. There is no excuse now for any greenly, as the buds are exposed and tobacco smoke can reach all parts of them. A mild smoking two nights in succession every week is much better than a heavy dose once a week.

I have before now had occasion to say that our patrons want a lily well out. It's not so with plants, but they do want a lily with all the blossoms open. They know it's short lived and they want immediate show. If you are keeping them in 65 degrees and some promise to be too early, be careful not to suddenly put them in a house 15 degrees colder, or they will just stand still. Remember, they will keep open in a cool house two weeks, so let them go ahead until the earliest buds have turned white and are ready to expand, then they will open in any cool house.

If you have not grown any large pots or pans of lilies, don't attempt to make them up now. Wait until the flowers are open a few days before market time, then you can take a big, sharp knife and slice the ball of earth from a 6-inch pot down to a 3-inch width, and you can make up handsome pots by getting five fine plants into a 9-inch pot. This is no fraud, and the plants and flowers will last just as long as if undisturbed.

Azaleas.

The azaleas need a good deal of handling to get most of them in just right, and here is a plant that the public is intelligent enough to know is of more value when not so fully in bloom. Customers will nearly always ask you, "How long will it remain in flower?" and if you are made of the average clay you will say, "Oh, a month, ma'am, at least; look at the buds to come." No need to mention varieties, because the plants speak for themselves. Some will come along all right in 50 to 55 degrees, while the good old Van der Cruyssen has been anxious to cover itself with blossoms for this month past. A deep, cold frame shaded on all sunny days will do, or a north house where heat can be shut off and air given constantly. Anything above the freezing point will do; you will only arrest development. The azalea is a hard wooded plant and is not hurt by a low temperature.

Other Plants.

The genista, acacia and bottle brush, if too early, you can only keep down to about 40 degrees and shade overhead.

There are a good many plants called for at Easter by people whose limit is 50 cents to $1. I know that if a metropolitan city florist sees this he will say, "I would not bother with them." Perhaps it's not worth while, but we don't like to see anybody go away unsuited. Primula obconica is one of the plants that is going to be in fine order at Easter. Keep it cool. We have a number of cyclamen that have been kept all winter in about 45 degrees, and they will thrive in that, but not flower very freely. If you have any in that shape, give them a temperature from now on of 50 degrees or a little more and they will be in good shape. The flower of a cyclamen lasts two or three weeks after it is fully out.

Hydrangea blossoms should be now well above the foliage. Keep them going until they are showing the true color of the flower, then a week in a cool house will do them good. They are usually forced at such a pace and are so thirsty for water that they are very unsatisfactory to the buyer. Until the flower is well out, some liquid manure at every other watering will greatly help them, for, no matter how large the pot, it's sure to be full of roots.

We are all bound to grow some spirea, whether of the old Japonica or some of the later forms. Last year we had some under the name of Washington. I am informed it's the same as the variety sold under the name of Gladstone. It requires a week or so more to force into flower, but it is altogether a superior plant. It will pay you well to put your spireas for the last month in 6-inch saucers. The pots are a mass of roots and on bright days you have to water them twice a day at least. If a saucer is under them you can fill it once a day with water, or, better still, with weak liquid manure, and you will see a great difference in the deep green vigorous foliage and large sprays of flowers.

Four weeks is enough to bring lilacs into flower in a temperature of 55 degrees. It is getting near their flowering season and not much forcing is needed. They sell very well in pots when well flowered and are always profitable to cut, for who does not love the lilac? I hope I have not used the last verb out of place. You occasionally hear a pretty young woman say she loves beefsteak, liver and bacon, or ice cream. I object to that: but she may love several flowers, to look on a landscape, poetry, or Alphonso.

I have not had much experience in forcing viburnum, prunus, pyrus or several of the many hardy shrubs and trees that can be forced, because it has never paid to do it in our locality, and, if I had, any hints on them would now be too late.

Bulbous Flowers.

You will be sure to have more or less tulips, hyacinths and narcissus, and they do come mighty useful at Easter. We can remember several mistakes made in bringing in these bulbs in the days of "Auld lang syne." When Easter fell on the 23rd of April I gave tulips, etc., about twenty-five days. April came in like June and all sorts of stratagems had to be resorted to, and then many tulips and hyacinths dropped with old age. Next year Easter was end of March, and, remembering the year before, without meditation we gave this bulbous stuff only two weeks. And with winter weather there was a hustle and bustle and a dreadful heat applied, and then they were not in time. So for many years we have not had a failure in dates, but you must always consider the date and be prepared for a return of winter.

Without a lot of words I will give the number of days that the bulbs will require in the greenhouse in a temperature of 55 degrees in full daylight. Remember, I am speaking about bulbs that have been out of doors covered with earth and straw. Those kept in a cold cellar may be more advanced and may flower in a shorter time.

All early single tulips, eighteen days.

All early double tulips, twenty-four days.

Narcissus, eighteen days.

Dutch hyacinths, fourteen days.

If bright, sunny days, the above is ample time. If dull and cloudy, a little more heat may be necessary, but not likely. It is no longer forcing; they are anxious to flower.

William Scott.

SMALL WHITE FLY.

The small white fly mentioned by H. M. in the Review of February 26 is no doubt the adult male form of one of the prevalent greenhouse scale insects. All of the Coccidæ (as these little pests are called) have winged male forms. One known as the "White Fly," and under several other names, is a very small, brilliant white and very active insect, the adult male of Orthezia insignis. When seen at rest it is like an almost microscopic white "miller." Under a magnifier you will see it has two diverging abdominal cilia instead of one, as in the male of the Aspidotus scales. This white fly I have observed recently, especially numerous on a coleus (C. thyrsiflora).

Whale oil soap washes seem to dispose of the scales, and if the scales are destroyed the flies can do but little harm. In spite of the infinite variety of "dopes" on the market for killing every manner of crawling thing, it seems as if the list of insect pests were daily growing longer.

John Higgins.

GERANIUMS AND PAEONIAS.

We stood some geraniums, just shifted into 4-inch, on a bench which had been cleared of lettuce, and on which the manure—about 1½ inches—on surface was allowed to remain. We find that most of them have earth worms, three to a dozen small ones. Will they do any harm? If so, what is the remedy?

Can paeonias be successfully kept in cold storage until Decoration day, say two or three weeks? What are the best commercial varieties for cutting? What kind of soil and culture do they require?

The angle worms do no serious harm except that they work the soil in the pots into a pasty condition and prevent the water escaping. If you want to get rid of them put a piece of quick lime about the size of your two fists into thirty gallons of water, and when dissolved and the water is clear, give the plants one watering with the lime water. The worms will soon come to the surface, give a parting kick and die. You would have done better to scrape off the manure, beat the surface of bed down level, and put in half an inch of sifted coal ashes.

About the paeonias, I have had little experience in keeping them any length of time. Ours are never in bloom until two weeks after Decoration day. The Officinalis type, if an early season, sometimes are, but the Chinese herbaceous varieties, never. But cutting quite close before the bud is at all expanded, you can keep them in a very cool cellar for two weeks.

The nomenclature of the Chinese paeonias is terribly mixed. That is the reason why the growers of these showy plants felt the necessity of organizing a paeony society to straighten out the names and reduce the confusion. The man who grows purely to sell the blooms needs but a few varieties and those mostly white and shades of pink. The single varieties are beautiful flowers, but they don't take with the public generally. Here are half a dozen varieties that are very fine—all double: Charlemagne, flesh white, center tinted lilac; Globosa, pure white; Duchess de Ammale, light rose, center straw color; Charles Verdier, light lilac rose, very large; Louis Van Houtte, bright purple cherry; Mme. Lemoine, large flesh white; President Wilder, a beautiful delicate blush.

These are only a few and there are dozens of others as fine, but as I said before, too much variety is not desirable where flowers are grown for sale only. The paeony will grow in any soil and is the hardiest of plants, but as they remain for years in one spot without transplanting, to grow them well the ground (a heavy loam is best) should be dug or trenched 18 inches deep and a liberal quantity of dairy or short stable manure worked in.

William Scott.

PRIMULAS.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a bench of primulas grown by Mr. Arthur E. Chilman, gardener for F. S. Moseley, Esq., Newburyport, Mass. In response to an inquiry as to his methods of growing primulas, Mr. Chilman writes:

"The primulas were sown in pans the latter part of May, 1902, in a light, open soil, kept uniformly moist by dipping the pans into a bucket of water when necessary. Each pan was covered with a sheet of glass to prevent evaporation, and partially shaded until a fair percentage had germinated. They were pricked off as soon as possible and grown in a temperature of 60 degrees at night for about three weeks and then potted singly into small pots and grown in a violet house, shaded. The next shift was into 3 and 4-inch pots and they were then placed in a cold frame with sash removed and shaded during the day with laths.

"As they grew the larger plants received their final potting, some into 5 and some into 6-inch pots; others, three into 7-inch pans and four into 10-inch pans, in good soil composted in the early spring. As fall advanced, they were put into a cool pit facing north with all shading removed and grown on until signs of flowering appeared, when they were given a teaspoonful each of Clay's fertilizer and removed to their flowering quarters, where they were kept at 50 degrees at night and 55 degrees during the day.

"They began flowering early in December. Some of the plants in pans measure fully two feet through, and some in 6-inch pots measure 18 inches through. Some were doing duty in Boston at the time the picture was taken. These plants were not drawn, but good, sturdy stuff. Our aim all through is to keep them moving, the soil moist and sweet, never on the dry side nor saturated. Plants, like people, show at maturity the care and attention they receive when young. In potting I always make it a point to set each plant down to the seed leaf. They push up a little, but never enough to topple over when being moved around. In the early part of the flowering season they were fed twice each week with barn yard liquid. The picture was taken the latter part of February. The plants are still good at this time, March 3."

REBUILDING.

I have read with interest the article on the cash receipts from a greenhouse, for it nearly fits my case. I have about 3,000 feet of bench room and work it all myself, but can never get more than 50 cents per square foot from it. Of course I do not get any fancy prices here. I handle a general stock of florists' plants and sell everything I can produce; in fact, I could dispose of much more if I could grow it. I have my troubles, though, as I cannot get much growth on my stock for six months of the year, as my houses run north and south, and as soon as the sun gets low in winter the sash bars shade the houses from about 10 o'clock in the morning to 3 o'clock in the afternoon. I have been thinking of pulling them down in the spring and building in their place one house 21x120 and 8 feet high, three-quarter span, running east and west, with glass on the roof and ends but not on the sides, the house to contain three beds—one 4 feet, one 8 feet and the other 4 feet. My idea is to have two sunken walks 2 feet wide, and heat with hot water.

The north side bench I would plant to ferns for 3 feet, and in the front, down to the walk, I would like to stand some large rubbers. I want a door on the north side about 40 feet from the east end to lead to my residence. The 8-foot bench would be planted to some roses and a general line of stuff. Don't you think that a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees would be all right? And would I not get a good lot of light by this arrangement? I know, of course, that I could not have everything in extra good condition having them all together in one house, but think I could have them in fair shape and save an item in coal bills.

I thought also of having two lines of cold frames, each 6x60, on the north side of the house where I could put bedding plants in the spring. This would give me as much room as I now have. Please advise me. R. A. B.

I do not learn from the above in what part of the country our friend is located, and that makes all the difference. For instance, south of Philadelphia, or in the clear, bright days of some of our western states, it makes little difference whether the house runs north and south or east and west. In the dark winters of the Atlantic and eastern states it is undoubtedly better to have a southern aspect; i. e., house running east and west; or better still, a few degrees east of south. Another great consideration is size of glass. In the old days of 8x10 we grew about as good plants and flowers as we do now, and I can truthfully say that twenty years ago, in a house glazed with 8x10 glass, running north and south, I grew and cut more good buds in the depth of winter of the dear old Bon Silene, Safrano and Isabella Sprunt than I have ever done since. It more depends on the "man behind the gun" than any improved house, yet that is no reason why we should not build on the best known methods.

I would say that if you are going to pull down and rebuild, then build equal span running east and west; use glass that is 16 inches wide; let there be upright or side glass on all sides and both ends. This latter is a most important point. Don't have any sunken paths, and if you must winter such abominations as "big rubbers," give them a place at the east end of your house. Heat by hot water by all means, and don't use less than 2-inch pipe. As for width of house, I will be glad, when you are ready, to give you my opinion on what is the most economical structure.

Don't think of any 8-foot benches. A bench of 6 feet is unhandy enough. A house 28 feet wide, considering its first cost and maintenance and the bench room you get, is the ideal house for many purposes, and more particularly for carnations, where only one house can be built. If you can have only one house, then a temperature of 50 degrees at night in extreme cold, and 55 in ordinary weather will be found to suit a mixed collection. Hotbeds and cold frames are useful to relieve the crowded greenhouse in April and May.
